Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

Thorough On-the-Roof Inspection Crucial for Good Roofing Decisions

(NU) - Spring is a good time of the year to get outdoors and check the house and yard for any signs of winter damage. Take the ladder out of the garage and look at the gutters and roof to see if there are any leaves or other debris that might clog gutters and cause rain to back up.

While there, take a closer look at the roof. It isn't only leaks that mean it's time to reroof, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association. A perfectly good roof may leak because of a loose or missing shingle or because of faulty flashing. Repaired, such a roof may have many years of service remaining.

A roof that appears to be in good condition, but that is past its prime, may be a disaster waiting to happen. It may have hidden leaks that are damaging the roof deck and roof beams.

ARMA offers these tips for determining if a new roof is in order:

- Determine its age. All roofs have what is known as a design life. Standard shingles, for instance, generally have an average life expectancy of 15 to 25 years.

Multi-dimensional asphalt shingles with an organic or fiber glass base can have a design life of 25 years or more.

- Take a flashlight up in the attic to look at the underside of the deck and rafters for stains or wet spots that are signs of leaks. Use a pair of field glasses outside to get a close-up look at the roof as you walk around the house. Look for cracked, curled or broken shingles; other indications of a roof past its prime.

- Consult a professional roofing contractor who will conduct a thorough on-the-roof inspection and provide you with an estimate of its cost should reroofing be in order. The contractor is also a good source of information on how to use a new roof to enhance the appearance of a home.

- Don't wait until the roof is worn out before reroofing because you may be forced into hasty decisions about installation and materials. Careful planning is the best way to assure the new roof will live up to its expectations.

Asphalt shingles are the most widely used roofing in both remodeling and new-home construction. Applied on four out of five U.S. homes, they are attractive, durable, economical and require little maintenance.

Consider three dimensional asphalt shingles should you decide to reroof. Their rugged good looks gives a roof a dramatic textured appearance with deep shadow lines. Available in a range of popular colors, including beiges and rich browns, these shingles serve to blend a home with its surroundings.

To determine the kind of protection you are buying, remember that the cost of labor for application is usually the same regardless of the design life of the shingle. To estimate the annual cost of a new roof, add the cost of labor and materials and divide the result by the life expectancy of the shingle. It could turn out that the costlier shingles initially may be more economical over time because the cost of labor and materials is amortized over a longer period.

Additional information on roofing is available in "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Asphalt Roofing." To receive a copy, contact ARMA, 6000 Executive Blvd., Suite 201, Rockville, MD 20852.

How Healthy Is Your Home?

(NU) - Did you know that most Americans spend 90 percent of their time indoors and that the pollution inside is often greater than outdoors?

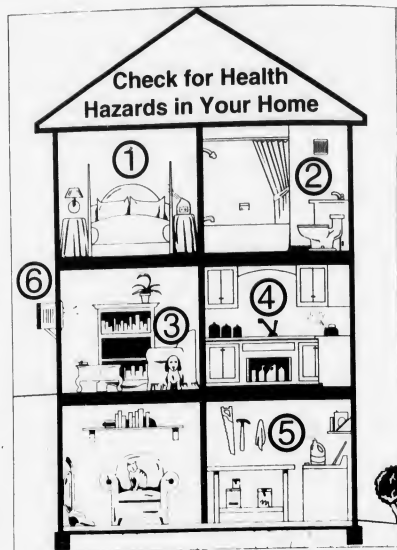

Health effects from indoor air pollutants may be experienced soon after exposure, or possibly years later. Immediate effects may show up after a single exposure or repeated exposures. These include irritation of the eyes, nose and throat, headaches, dizziness, and fatigue.

But indoor air pollution is a risk that you can do something about. Take a moment to familiarize yourself with some common indoor environmental problems and with some simple steps you can take to protect your family.

Check these items and make changes, if necessary, to reduce your health risks:

1-Bedroom Humidifier: Clean according to manufacturer's directions. Refill with clean water daily.

2-Bathroom Moisture, mold and mildew: Install and use exhaust fan. Fix plumbing leaks promptly. When using personal care products (hair spray, nail polish, etc.), open a window or use an exhaust fan. Follow directions for product use.

3-All Rooms Animals (dander, hair, feathers or skin): Clean house regularly.

Tobacco smoke (from cigarette, pipe and cigar smoking): Do not smoke in your home or permit others to do so (especially near children). If smoking cannot be avoided, open windows or use exhaust fans.

House dust mites: Clean house and vacuum regularly. Wash bedding in hot water. Keep humidity and moisture to a minimum.

4-Kitchen Household cleansers: Open windows when using household cleansers. Use according to manufacturer's directions.

Cooking and dishwasher use: To reduce moisture, install and use a fan that vents to the outside.

5-Basement or Ground Floor Radon: Test your home for radon. Do-it-yourself kits are easy and inexpensive. Fix your home if your radon level is 4 picocuries per liter (4 pCi/L) or higher. For more information, contact your state radon office or call 1-800-SOS-RADON.

Stored hobby products (paint, glue, epoxy, etc.): Follow the manufacturer's directions. Use outdoors, if possible. Indoors, open a window or use exhaust fan. Reseal containers well. Clean brushes and other materials outside.

6-Cooling System Air conditioners: Follow all service and maintenance procedures, including changing the filters. Make sure unit drains properly and that there is no standing water.

For a free brochure, "How Healthy Is The Air In Your Home?", send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to P.O. Box 12099, Washington, DC 20005-0999.

For more information on reducing indoor environmental problems in the home, contact the Indoor Air Quality Information Clearinghouse at 1-800-438-4318 or visit the EPA Indoor Environments Web site (www.epa.gov/iaq/).

Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

Give Your Home A Stitch In Time

(NAPS)—The best way to make sure that your plumbing, heating and cooling systems are performing as they should is to start at the bottom and work your way up. Your whole-house audit should start early in the spring, begin in the basement and include the following:

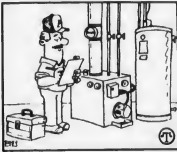

- Sump pumps do not need much maintenance but you should keep the sump pit debris-free by scooping out the sediment at the bottom of the 30-inch deep pit.

- Air conditioners—This system works best when checked by a professional before each cooling season. But there are some things you can do to prepare the indoor and outdoor parts of your system: Trim away any shrubbery that might have grown too close to the outdoor unit. Wash down the outdoor coil with a garden hose to remove any accumulated debris. Change the filter.

Since it's more cost efficient to have a professional check both the heating and cooling system at the same time, now's the time to give your heating system a check.

- Furnaces or Boilers—Although it's the largest energy user in the home, most people don't think about their furnace or boiler unless it stops running. A good rule of thumb is to consider replacing your furnace or boiler if it is more than 20 years old and had been experiencing minor breakdowns.

- If your water heater is ten to 15 years old, it will need to be replaced soon. Experts at the National Routine furnace inspections by a licensed plumbing-heating-cooling contractor can reduce your heating bill and increase the life of the system.

Association of Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Contractors suggest that the average family of four needs a 50-gallon unit to insure fast recovery of hot water.

- Fix all leaky faucets and fixtures. A leaky faucet can waste 1,000 gallons of water every month. Remember to check your toilets as well. If you can hear the water running into the closet bowl after the toilet is flushed, some part of the toilet is out of order.

Good Driveway Adds Value To Your Home

(NAPS)—If you've seen a driveway that impressed you, most likely it was one built of Hot Mix Asphalt, according to the National Asphalt Pavement Association.

Durable, long-lasting and easy to maintain, asphalt's flexibility enables it to easily conform to varying terrain features. Asphalt pavement speeds construction—you can use your new driveway immediately after the pavement is in place and rolled.

It's nice to know that asphalt is 100 percent recyclable. In the past, much of these old paving materials would have been disposed of in landfills; recycling conserves our precious natural resources.

An attractive, smooth driveway not only gives a good impression, but can add dollars to the value of your home investment.

Because of their resilient nature, asphalt surfaces are ideal for basketball courts and other play areas. Unlike concrete, asphalt "gives," so it's easier on knees and ankles.

Not only is asphalt the most "giving" choice for your driveway, but using asphalt is the choice that gives you the best deal.

NYNEX Donates $2,500 To New Veterans' House

NYNEX recently donated $2,500 toward the new Veterans' House on 191 Burgin Parkway which will be owned and operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC).

The check was presented by Ken Horne of NYNEX to QISC Executive Director Joseph Finn.

NYNEX is also a key sponsor of the QISC "Hoop Jam," a three-on-three basketball tournament dedicated to raising money to support the Veterans' House and Fr. Bill's Place, the city's homeless shelter.

The Veterans' House project has brought together the experience of housing rehabilitation, social service provision, veterans' services and rental assistance in an effort to restore the vacant house at 191 Burgin Parkway.

The house was acquired and is being rehabilitated by Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services. Funding is needed to support the operational costs and community-based case management necessary to ensure linkage of tenants to the appropriate community agencies.

The second annual "Hoop Jam" will be held Saturday, June 7 at noon at Quincy High School. Players will arrive an hour earlier to register. The event will include an alumni game between Quincy High and North Quincy High School.

Tickets to the alumni game are $10. For more information, call Carolyn Price or Finn at 376-2255.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Prospects on the financial scene are looking up this week. Business meetings bring happy results. This weekend, be on your guard against a duplicitous acquaintance.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Common sense comes in handy, especially in connection with home and family. News on the business front is mixed toward the latter part of the week. However, you manage to get much accomplished.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're at your self-confident best. Don't allow that to let you slide into cocky or brash behavior, however. Something being proposed this weekend reeks of dishonesty.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Investments and financial security are much on your mind, and partners approach you with good ideas. Be careful of some misinformation which comes your way at week's end. It could mislead you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Pay attention to details, and get projects out of the way this week. Something a friend is telling you makes sense. Later in the week, you're a bit restless and need to unwind.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You are at your productive and efficient best this week. However, be careful with money later on. The weekend looks good for activities of a partnership nature.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Socializing is in your stars — which suits your gregarious nature just fine this week. However, don't neglect the needs of a loved one over the weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)

The focus this week is on job interests. You achieve much by way of mental and creative activities. Listen carefully to someone who's being deliberately deceptive.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The accent this week is on important business progress. Focus some attention on creative and cultural interests. A friend's advice this weekend is off the mark.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Dating and leisure events are highlighted. However, don't let that interfere with what must be done at work this week. Private time this weekend leads to new insights.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The focus of your attention should turn toward unintended-to domestic concerns. Although friendship and social life are accented, don't let that distract you. Plans need adjusting this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Financial interests go very much your way, as do dealings with bigwigs. The latter part of the week is good for family business. Travel is likely in the next few weeks.

Raiders, Presidents Meet Tonight QHS, NQ: Same Goal, But Different Agendas

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Tonight (Thursday) at 7, when the North Quincy High School and Quincy High School baseball teams tangle at Adams Field, both teams will naturally battle for the win, but for entirely different reasons.

The Red Raiders, 6-9 heading into this week's games, are still in the hunt for a MIAA state tournament bid and a win over the Presidents would bring them closer to reaching that goal.

"They're going to want to knock us off, but we have to look at it like just another game we need to win," said North coach Dave Perdios. "Every game from here on in is important if we want to make the tournament."

Over at Quincy, the Presidents (3-14 after last week's action) seek a triumph over the Red Raiders as a way to salvage an otherwise disappointing campaign.

"There's more pressure on them, because they're trying to make the tournament and will look to play a good game," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "It's meaningful to us, too, because we have nothing else to look forward to this year, and a win over North is always special."

"We're a better team than we showed last time; we did not play good baseball that night (A 9-0 loss to North on May 1). I'm hoping for a good game, maybe one that comes down to a clutch hit in the later innings, hopefully by one of our guys."

Gearing up for tonight's showdown, North took on host Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday (Wednesday). After tonight's game, North makes up Monday's rainout against visiting Weymouth Friday at 4 p.m. Next Wednesday (May 28), the Raiders host Taunton at 4 p.m. and next Thursday, they host South Boston at 4 p.m.

Last Friday, the Red Raiders had its best offensive performance of the season in a 14-4 romp over host Taunton. Senior center fielder Brian Beaton led the hit parade with four hits in five at-bats, including a two-run homer, and five RBI. Freshman Rob Celata improved to 4-2, scattering five hits with seven strikeouts over six innings.

Celata (two for four, double), Chris Gregoli (three for three), Eric Wirtz (two-run homer) and Bill Walker (homer) also provided some offensive firepower for the Raiders.

North took it on the chin last Thursday, losing to visiting Milton, 9-1.

Meanwhile, Quincy was slated to make up Monday's rainout at Barnstable Tuesday, then hosted Silver Lake

IN QUINCY'S 5-4 WIN last Friday, Steve Clark scores a run for the Presidents as the Falmouth pitcher prepares to catch the late throw. The victory was Quincy's first since it beat Plymouth South, 8-5, on April 16.

VOLLEYBALL

Both Teams Tourney-Bound More Than Rivalry On The Line Today For Raiders, Presidents

By LIAM FITZGERALD

When the boys volleyball teams from Quincy High School and North Quincy High School battle today (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m. at Quincy High, the players from both squads will have more than just the rivalry on their minds.

The Presidents, who clinched an MIAA state tournament berth two weeks ago, and the Raiders, who qualified for the state tournament last week, both aspire to improve their seeding and chances for a tournament home match. Today's showdown is the final regular season match for both squads.

"It would be nice to finish the regular season with a win," said Quincy coach Tom Henderson. "Last time we played North, we didn't have enough to beat them. This one's here, and hopefully we'll get a good-sized crowd rooting us on. A win would really help us towards getting a better seed and maybe even a home match."

"We're both shooting for a home match, so it ought to be a great match between two solid teams," said North Quincy coach John Perkins. "We were able to beat them on our court, but this one's at their place and there's a lot at stake for both squads. I know my players are looking forward to it and would love to go into the tournament with a win over Quincy."

The tournament drawing, which will be held next Wednesday, May 28, will determine who and where Quincy and North will play.

Quincy, 10-6 heading into this week's action, hosted Dighton-Rehoboth Tuesday.

Last Friday, the Presidents improved to 10-6 by knocking off visiting Duxbury in two games, 15-12, 15-2. Leading the way for Quincy were Geoff King (eight kills, three blocks, two digs) and Domenic Catrambone (two kills, five blocks).

Club last year, is slated to play left field and second base. In the tryouts, Gregoli's 60-yard dash time placed him with the second fastest time.

The Mariners will compete in several regional tournaments before competing for the National Championship in Chickasha, Okla., in early August. Gregoli's older brother, Chris, is also a member of the 16-year-old Mariner team and will compete in Charlotte, N.C., in August.

Retirement Party For Beverly Reinhardt June 18 At Bryan Post

A retirement party for longtime Quincy Youth Hockey manager Beverly Reinhardt will be held Wednesday, June 18 at the George F. Bryan Post in Quincy.

Reinhardt, who retired last December, has been involved in Quincy Youth Hockey since its inception in 1971, two years before the Quincy Youth Arena was constructed. (Games were held in Braintree and Weymouth before the arena was built.)

She first served on the QYH board of directors, then on the QYA board. She was the QYA manager from October 1976 through last December, giving her 20-plus years at the helm.

"She gets her fingers into everything and helps out wherever she can," said Michelle Stenberg, who stepped in as manager of the Youth Arena when Reinhardt retired.

"She sets up jamborees for the pre-high school season. She helps run the benefit for Mark Susi (former Milton hockey player who died) and works with the Matt Messing Golf Tournament annually. She's also a cheerleader for the Senior Olympics and helps host them at the rink every year."

A 1995 inductee of the Frank Zamboni Hall of Fame, Reinhardt is also a member of the Quincy High School Hockey Hall of Fame and the Kiwanis Club. Reinhardt's husband, Richard, has been a QYH coach since it began and their sons, Paul, John and Richie all played in the program. Reinhardt's brother-in-law, Bob Hayes, is the founder of QYH.

Among those who will attend the event are Hayes and other longtime QYH supporters Harry Messina, Eddie Holt, Tom Benson, Bibby Lewis and Paul McCabe. Also, members of NEISMA (New England Ice Skating Managers Association), past board members and QYA presidents will be in attendance.

The event will begin with a cocktail party from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., followed by dinner. For ticket information, call the Quincy Youth Arena at 479-8371.

QHS, NQ: Same Goal, But Different Agendas

yesterday (Wednesday). Following tonight's game, the Presidents host Bridgewater-Raynham next Tuesday at 4 p.m., then visit Brookline next Wednesday (May 28) at 3:30 p.m. to close out their season.

Last Friday, Quincy snapped an 11-game losing skid with a 5-4 triumph over visiting Falmouth. Strong pitching from sophomore Dennis Palardy (complete game six-hitter with six strikeouts), timely hitting from Steve Wiltshire (double, two singles) and Tony Staffier (hit, RBI) and good defense combined to send Quincy to first victory since April 16.

"The team played a great all around game, getting timely hits and good defensive plays," said Sylvia. "The ball bounced our way this time and the kids are elated about it. It's a good confidence builder, showing that when they play well, they can compete with anyone."

"Dennis pitched a whale of a game; he's easily one of the best sophomore pitchers in the league. He made the big pitches when he had to and got us the win."

Palardy also made a fine defensive play to start a game-ending double play. With the bases loaded and one out in the seventh inning, Palardy fielded a grounder, fired to catcher Steven Maze, who stepped on home for the second out before throwing it to first for the force to end the game.

Earlier in the week, Quincy lost to Brookline, 12-0, and dropped a heart-breaker to Plymouth South, 8-7.

Raiders, Presidents Battle Today

Quincy fell to a powerful New Bedford squad, 15-10, 15-8, on the road last Wednesday. Don McCarthy was the lone bright spot for the Presidents with seven kills, seven digs and one block.

The Presidents began the week with a tough 2-1 loss to visiting Greater New Bedford Vocational. In the 5-15, 16-14, 8-15 defeat, Quincy was paced by King (seven kills, six digs, eight blocks) and Jared Downey (17 assists, nine digs).

Meanwhile, North (11-6 going into this week) played at Brockton and at defending state champion Cambridge Ringe & Latin yesterday (Wednesday). Winners of five of their last six through last Friday's action, the Red Raiders won two of three matches last week.

On the road last Friday, North captured a 2-0 triumph over Dighton-Rehoboth. John Li and Vonnery Marcial contributed to the 15-12, 15-5 win, as did Rob McCauley and Al King. North improved to 11-6 overall, 7-2 in the South Alliance.

North clinched its sixth consecutive state tournament berth with a 2-0 win over visiting Weymouth last Wednesday. In the 15-13, 15-10 victory, North was sparked by the hitting of senior captain Mike Johnston (seven kills) and senior Matt Bromley (11 kills). Senior Lewis Man also contributed with eight service points.

Last Tuesday's 2-0 loss to Medfield marked the return of Johnston, who missed two-and-a-half weeks with a twisted ankle. Johnston had an immediate impact, collecting eight kills and four blocks, while Bromley added 10 kills in the 13-15, 5-15 defeat.

"It's great to have him (Johnston) back, especially with the tournament coming up," said Perkins. "He looked O.K. against Medfield, then started playing much better as the week went on. He'll be fine when the tournament starts."

DRIFTING TO ONE SIDE

If a car drifts to one side or other on a straight and level road, it is likely due to a wheel-alignment problem. If the problem is severe, drivers may find themselves steering in the opposite direction to keep the car going straight. There are strict factory specifications for the position of both front and rear wheels. If one of the wheels is tilted inward or outward too much, or the wheels are not parallel, the automobile will steer to one side.

This problem can also occur if the rear wheels are not aligned properly with the front wheels. Either way, an alignment check is necessary. While this involved only two wheels in older grills, motor homes, and converted rear-wheel-drive cars, the advent of front-wheel-drive cars with independent suspensions has made it necessary to align all four wheels.

HINT: Before submitting your car for an alignment check, make sure that an underinflated front tire is not causing your car to steer to one side. People generally put a great deal of money into their cars. Doesn't it make sense to make sure you have your car's steering and other systems serviced and repaired by the best ASE Certified auto technicians around? You and your car deserve the very best and here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO you'll get it. Stop by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree alignment check is necessary. While this involved only two wheels in older grills, motor homes, and converted rear-wheel-drive cars, the advent of front-wheel-drive cars with independent suspensions has made it necessary to align all four wheels.

Outdoor Track

Johnston, Ginty, Quilty Pace North In Two OCL Losses

The North Quincy High School girls outdoor track team continued to have difficulty with its dual meet opponents, but performed well in weekend invitationals following losses to Bridgewater-Raynham and Weymouth, and scoring in four relays at the Class A relays in Brockton.

In North's 77-49 loss to B-R, Kellie Johnston won the 100 meters while taking seconds in the 200 and longjump. Claire Quilty was a double winner in the shot and discus. Other winners were Kerry Ginty (javelin) and Sarah Beston (highjump). Other second place finishers were Sharon Lee (400), Lynda Wilson (two mile), Wingsze Yuen (discus), Ellen Tang (shotput) and Nicole Bertone (javelin). Liz Bennett (400), Ginty (800), Tang (discus) and Lena Yuen (shotput) took third place finishes.

In the Raiders' 79-57 loss to Weymouth, winners included Johnston (200), Jasmine Gonzalez (400), Wilson (two mile), Wingsze Yuen (discus), Quilty (shotput) and Ginty (javelin). Ginty finished up the OCL dual meet season undefeated. Taking seconds for NQ were Gonzalez (200), Kelly Lockhead (100 hurdles), Ginty (800), Lauren Molloy (one mile), Kim Hueth (triplejump), Quilty (discus) and Wingsze Yuen (shotput). Third placers were Lee (400), Genevieve O'Brien (800), Hueth (300 hurdles and highjump), Sarah Houghton (two mile) and Bertone (javelin).

At the State Class A Relays, four NQ relay teams broke into the scoring. The javelin team of Ginty, Maureen Holleran and Lisa Dellacroce placed fifth with

North was slated to compete in the OCL Conference Championships Tuesday at Bridgewater State College. Saturday, NQ travels to Norwell for the 22nd annual South Shore Principals meet.

In earlier action, nearly every girl turned in personal bests and five state meet qualifying times were done at the annual State Coaches Invitational at Apponequet Regional.

The highlight of the day was the performance of Ginty, who only began throwing this spring, tossing the javelin 117'10" to place seventh overall. A senior, Ginty had throws of 117', 115', and 109' and only took five of her six throws as she had to run to track and run a leg of the 4x800 relay.

Holding onto sixth going into the final round, Dennis-Yarmouth's Leah DuBois, last year's All State champion, who was in seventh, tossed a 118'10" on her final throw to edge out Ginty. Meanwhile, Ginty was turning in a 2:39 split in the 4x800, helping the team of O'Brien (2:48), Houghton (2:48) and Wilson (2:37) qualify for states with a 10:51 clocking.

"Ginty is one of the great all-around athletes at North," said NQ coach Geoff Hennessy. "Her accomplishments in volleyball, basketball and softball are well known to all. We just added another chapter."

"She was only eight feet shy of first place and she's only been throwing since April. Due to the blizzard she picked up a javelin just days before our opener (April 7 vs. Falmouth) and threw over 100' in her first meet. She's not bad on the track either."

Gonzalez ran her fastest time of the season in the 400 (61.5) and then came back 90 minutes late to anchor the 4x400 relay of Johnston (62.0), Lee (68.0) and Ginty (67.0) to a 4:20.1 to win their heat. That was the fastest time in 10 years, outside of the 4:16 run at last year's All State. Johnston, Lee and Gonzalez were members of that quartet. The 4x100 relay team of Casey Ngo, Holleran, Ha Le and Johnston ran 54.6 and were edged right at the line by Danvers in their heat.

BABE RUTH

Morrisette Knocks Off Barry's, Roms Over Local 1139

Morrisette scored four runs in the sixth and seventh innings to upend Barry's Deli, 9-3, in recent Quincy Babe Ruth League Baseball action.

Jessie Winter went the distance, striking out four, allowing three walks and yielding six hits to pick up the win for Morrisette. The bats came alive in the sixth with James LaFleur, Winter and Keith Doherty (three RBI) belting singles. Chris Doherty (two RBI) then smacked a double to drive in the winning run. Ryan McMahon started the seventh with a double, then Kris Kamborian and LaFleur hit singles, followed by Keith Doherty's two run double.

For Barry's, Conrad

Leger went six innings with nine strikeouts, three walks, six hits allowed and took the loss. Didier Alther had two hits and Shawn Boostrom was outstanding at shortstop with four putouts in the first four innings.

Earlier, Morrisette jumped out to a 11-3 lead after three innings and cruised to a 12-4 triumph over Local 1139.

Winning pitcher Keith Doherty started and went three innings with eight strikeouts, four walks and no hits allowed. LaFleur pitched four innings of relief, striking out eight, walking two and yielding six hits. Jessie Winter had two hits, including a two-run triple, Billy O'Brien got three RBI with two hits and LaFleur and Matt Yohe each singled, doubled and drove in a run.

For Local, Todd White was charged with the loss, going three innings with three strikeouts, two walks and eight hits allowed. Four errors by Local scattered among three hits made it a rough start for White. In relief, Ryan Murray gave up just two hits in four innings with three walks. Paul Burke had two doubles and Steve Rochon was solid at shortstop with three putouts and two assists.

Correction: In the report on the Elks' 21-0 loss to Morrisette on May 3, Justin Hall was incorrectly identified as the Elks' losing pitcher. Hall did not pitch in the game.

A Thought
For The Week

Memorial Day is a reverent day; a day of gratitude and prayer for our fallen countrymen who fell to preserve freedom and honor of their country. Those who died in our wars did so in the unfulfilled hope their sacrifice would bring enduring peace.

Memorial Day is a proper time for all of us to rededicate ourselves to peaceful purposes in our world-wide relationships. It can be done. God's help and guidance is available. We need only ask for it. With His help, internal and external problems can be solved. Strength, wisdom and courage can be ours to meet every challenge and reach solutions for the betterment of our country and mankind everywhere.

Memorial Day is a perfect time to realize our potential for peace with a prayer that never again will we have to praise the valor of our fighting men in any future war...

"The Last Full Measure Of Devotion"

Perhaps Abraham Lincoln said it best: "These honored dead gave the last full measure of devotion."

On this Memorial Day, we pay tribute to the brave men and women who have given their lives in the wars our nation has fought to defend ourselves and others from oppression.

As we pause to remember on this special day, we pray that God's comforting hand will touch those who have died for our country. And we say a special prayer for the families who are still unsure of the fates of their loved ones...those Americans missing in action in Viet Nam.

Added To May 27 Agenda Council Reschedules Budget Session Planned For Tonight

The City Council has rescheduled one of the sessions at which it will review Mayor James' Sheets proposed $149.6 million budget for Fiscal Year 1998, which begins July 1.

Because several councillors said they could not attend a meeting scheduled for tonight (Thursday), items that had been on the agenda--15 budgets, including those for the fire, auditor's, library and treasury departments--will be added to the council's budget session scheduled for May 27.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, vice chairman of the council's Finance Committee, said if any of the city's department heads have a conflict with the new date, the review of their budgets will again be rescheduled.

Dates for other budget sessions include last night (Wednesday), May 28, and May 29.

The council has the authority to reduce the mayor's proposed budget but cannot add to it. The budget must be passed in some form before the start of the new fiscal year.

Sheets' proposed FY98 budget is 4.3 percent or $6.1 million higher than the $143.5 million FY97 budget passed by the council last year.

Cahill Credit Card Plan Would Raise Funds For Library

it can add to what the library's trying to do."

Crane Library officials have agreed to come up with $1 million through various fund-raisers that will be put toward the $12.2 million addition. Other revenue sources include a $7.2 million bond issue passed by the council, a $3.5 million state grant, and $500,000 from Continental Cablevision, which plans to build a small television studio in a rear corner of the building at 40 Washington St.

Construction on the project is slated to begin in December and be completed in May 1999.

Cahill said after Monday night's meeting he cannot predict what percentage of the revenue generated by the use of the credit card would benefit the library addition or another project.

"That would have to be determined by the R.F.P. process," he said. "We'll see what the banks offer us."

Cahill added that the partner bank chosen by the city could possibly offer a low introductory interest rate to attract users.

He also speculated on the design of the credit card.

"Maybe we could put a picture of the library on it," he said. "That would like really nice."

Sheets is on vacation this week and could not be reached for comment on Cahill's proposal. However, Cahill said the mayor and Crane Library Director Ann McLaughlin both support the idea.

Only a handful of communities in the state participate in similar programs. The only others south of Boston that do are Hanover and Canton, which both began last year.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

REAL-LIFE "ER"

Unfortunately, many elderly individuals essentially rely on the emergency rooms in local hospitals for their primary health care. While this is far from an ideal situation, a federal law commonly known as the "anti-dumping" law requires emergency rooms to treat anyone with an urgent medical problem. Patients in need of emergency care cannot be transferred to a different facility unless they are in stable condition or a physician determines that the benefits of a transfer outweigh the risk and the receiving hospital has agreed to accept the patient. If the doctor does not make an examination to determine appropriate treatment and the patient suffers damage as a result, the patient may have grounds for a malpractice suit against the hospital.

HINT: The formal title of the "anti-dumping" law is the Emergency Treatment and Active Labor Act.

We have built a successful law practice and an excellent reputation by providing prompt, professional service to our clients in a friendly and courteous manner. It has not occurred by accident but upon years of hard work, dedication and planning. If you've been injured, call 773-2880 for a free consultation. We're conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

AIDS Festival Raises $3,200 At Shooters

The second annual Musicians United to Stop the AIDS Crisis (MUSAC) Festival to benefit the Boston pediatric and Family AIDS Project (BPFAP) was held recently at Shooters in Quincy Center.

The event was coordinated by Quincy residents Nick Malvesti, Pete Henderson and Jamie Pansullo of Shooters. More than 500 people attended the event, which raised over $3,200.

The money will benefit children suffering from the AIDS virus and those who have lost one or both parents to AIDS. The children are a part of a growing phenomenon known as "AIDS Orphans."

The BPFAP also works on prevention, trying to target and help families in high risk groups for AIDS.

Malvesti noted, "the children are important because they are the smallest victims in this crisis but they usually end up suffering more than anyone."

Festival patrons contributed to the cause with a $10 donation for tickets. The ticket price included four live bands, a buffet dinner and a free t-shirt for the first 200 people. Proceeds went directly to the BPFAP courtesy of the bands, Shooters and local businesses such as The T-Shirt Master in Quincy and Campanale's Restaurant in Braintree. The bands--Chapter In Verse, Two Ton Shoe, The Joe Merrick Band and Ultrasonic Love--all donated their time.

"This year was a great success, but there's always room to do more and we hope to do it again next year," said Malvesti.

SHINE Program
Open To Seniors

The SHINE program (Serving Health Insurance Needs of Elders), which was developed, funded and is managed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, is open to seniors in Quincy.

The program is administered through local Councils on Aging. Its goal is to insure that Massachusetts elders have access to accurate and up-to-date information regarding health care options.

SHINE counselors are volunteers, mostly elders, who receive extensive training in many areas of health benefits. These counselors assist elders in understanding their health insurance needs.

The SHINE program is free, unbiased and confidential. Elders may use it to keep informed of their rights under Medicare. Counselors help elders in processing health benefit claims and from paying unnecessary or duplicate coverage. They also make referrals to various agencies when appropriate.

For more information, call SHINE counselors Jane Mudge, Eleanor Reidy or Mary Sampson at the Quincy Council on Aging at 376-1247. In addition, Marjorie Crowley, a SHINE counselor, is available at the Beechwood Community Life Center, 471-5712, for help with health insurance questions.

Condo Trash Pickup Plan Delayed A Year

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi's plan to have the city provide trash pickup to individual condominium owners in Quincy will have to wait at least another year.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton submitted a report to the City Council Monday night that states that the city operationally could address the situation but it would not be feasible or financially wise to try to implement the program in Fiscal Year 1998, which starts July 1.

The conclusion of the report, which was submitted at Raymondi's request, states:

"The feasibility of this proposed program expansion rests on three issues: financial, operation and implementation. With a change in city policy, the program is operationally feasible. However, without an additional appropriation, minimally $355,412, the expanded program is not financially feasible and, given the steps needed for implementation, it is not feasible to plan for implementation during Fiscal Year 1998."

Colton and the councillors did not discuss the report in depth Monday night, but the commissioner did say it might be possible to implement the program in Fiscal Year 1999.

Raymondi asked Colton to send a copy of his report to representatives of the various condominium associations in the city and asked that his proposal be referred to the Ordinance Committee, where it will be taken up sometime in the future.

Raymondi has said he introduced the proposal because condo owners, as Quincy taxpayers, are entitled to the same services as other property owners in the city.

However, councillors also said they hope more people refrain from parking

Cheney said two weeks ago he was concerned that an increase in the fee would result in a decrease in enforcement but added that he planned to support it because it is designed to help the disabled.

Members of the Quincy Commission on Disability and the Quincy Council on Aging also spoke in favor of the increase at the council's last meeting.

A Banner Day

BANNER DAY — A "topping off" ceremony was held Tuesday at the site of the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School which is under construction in Quincy Point. Public officials and school administrators said the day was historic for Quincy, the Point neighborhood and future school students. A banner, signed by hundreds of Point-Webster School students, was unveiled at the ceremony. It will be displayed inside the school after the building is opened in January, 1998.

Boston Herald Interested In Acquiring The Ledger

The Boston Herald is the first among possible buyers to publicly express interest in acquiring The Patriot Ledger.

Meanwhile, K. Prescott (Scott) Low, publisher of the 160-year-old regional daily, emphasizes he will be selective as to whom the paper will be sold.

"We intend to be choosy and I think we'll have a choice," Low said.

Editor Bill Ketter said there is no truth to reports that the paper already has a buyer.

"He (Low) doesn't have a buyer yet and he is going to take his time to find the right buyer," Ketter told The Quincy Sun Tuesday.

Patrick Purcell, owner and publisher of the Boston Herald, said in a news story in that paper:

"We'd love to talk with them. There's a lot we could do in conjunction with the Ledger."

"We think we bring the kind of stability and commitment to the community, as well as strong civic and business values that would ensure the livelihood of the people that work there."

Low is not selling just the Ledger. He has put the George W. Prescott Publishing Company up for sale. It includes, in addition to the Ledger, the Memorial Press Group based in Plymouth that has nine weekly newspapers, among them the 175-year-old Old Colony Memorial and a commercial printing plant that

Can Apply For Inspectional Services Director Position

Sheets Doesn't See Mulvey's New Job As A Demotion

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets says Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey has not been demoted and is eligible to apply for a new director of inspectional services position that will take effect July 1.

Sheets said Tuesday that Mulvey has been offered a newly-created senior building inspector position that pays $52,547, a salary 6.6 less than Mulvey's current annual pay of $56,238. Mulvey's current position is slated to be eliminated through the creation of a new department of inspectional services scheduled to begin operating at the start of Fiscal Year 1998 in July.

But Sheets said Mulvey is entitled to both accept the senior building inspector position and apply for the $65,000-a-year director of inspectional services job, which the city will begin advertising in the next two weeks.

An article in the May 22

MATTHIAS MULVEY

edition of The Patriot Ledger reported that Mulvey has been demoted and will automatically receive the senior building inspector position, which it called "second in rank" to the inspectional services director. Sheets said that is not the case.

"I don't look at what occurred as a demotion," said the mayor. "I see it as a reorganization of the inspectional services of the City of Quincy. Matt Mulvey can take the position that he's been offered, apply for the director's position, or both."

Sheets said Mulvey has done a good job as building inspector and that he has no personal problems with him.

"I look over past seven-plus years (since Sheets became mayor) and basically, I've gotten along very well with Matt Mulvey," he said. "In my opinion, whoever was in that (building inspector) position, we

Large Downtown Retail Store To Open June 18

Downtown Quincy's newest retail store, Values Galore Quincy, will open June 18.

The store, described as similar to a CVS without a pharmacy, will occupy 6,000 square feet on the street level in the former Child World store at 1469 Hancock St.

"We are looking to a soft opening June 18 and the grand opening June 26," said John Lima who is co-owner with his wife, Judith.

Lima said the store will offer a wide variety of products including personal care, household, snack items and greeting cards.

Most of them will be generic, he said, but there will also be some brand name products.

Bruce Arons, Quincy

Center Development Coordinator for Quincy 2000 and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association who was instrumental in bringing the Limas to Quincy said: "This is a big plus for downtown Quincy. It is another step forward in the development of the Quincy Center area."

Arons noted that the new store will have two entrances, one from Hancock St. and the other from the Ross Parkway area.

The Limas who live in Dartmouth have another Values Galore store in New Bedford. They are also part of a co-op buying group that with the Quincy store will now number nine stores.

"This allows us to buy products by the trailer load," said Lima. "Buying this kind of volume allows us to buy cheaper and sell to our customers cheaper."

Lima credited Arons and Quincy 2000 with making the move to Quincy possible.

"They have been more than great," he said, "I feel like we are partners."

Lima said his wife formerly worked at a bank in Quincy and is excited about their store locating here.

"We have heard a lot of positive things about Quincy from other people who do business in this area," said Lima. "We believe the potential here is tremendous."

He said he and his wife like the area so much they are thinking of moving here.

Memorial Day Keynote Speaker

Isaacson: 'They Changed The Face Of The Earth'

Irving Isaacson, past commander of three Quincy veterans' organizations, told those attending the city's Memorial Day ceremonies Monday that the people who have died while serving this country should be honored because they made the world what it is today.

Isaacson, a decorated World War II veteran who has served as commander of the Quincy Jewish War Veterans, Quincy Veterans Council and Quincy Cavanaugh Chapter of the Disabled American Veterans, was keynote speaker at the World War II podium in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery. The ceremonies followed the annual Memorial Day Parade which ended at the cemetery following a procession from School St.

Isaacson told those in attendance that although the United States has more rights and freedoms than any other nation, the price paid to protect them often has been the loss of American lives.

"All across the nation today families and friends pay tribute to these gallant--and often unsung--heroes," said Isaacson. "Heroes who were our brothers and sisters...our husbands and wives...our sons and daughters."

"Heroes who marched to the colors for their country in its time of need. We have chosen today--Memorial Day--to remember and honor them and their sacrifices."

"And why do we honor them? Because the selfless acts of these brave patriots changed the face of the earth, and the profile of nations."

Isaacson then traced the history of wars and military operations in which the United States has participated, from World War I to peacekeeping services in Bosnia. While noting that Memorial Day is, for many, a day of relaxation, he asked the crowd to remember those who have served this country and the U.S. flag itself with respect.

"As we celebrate this day with parades and picnics, flags and floats, memories and memorials, I asked that you remember our men and women who have given so greatly for their country. And I ask that you remember the visible representation of that sacrifice is the flag of our country, Old Glory."

"Whether you are remembering World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon, Grenada, Panama, Operation Desert Storm or Bosnia, I ask that everyone across this nation spiritually joins hands today in solemn remembrance--and grateful celebration--in honor of all who have given the ultimate sacrifice, their life in the preservation of freedom and democracy."

"Memorial Day means much more to Americans than just a day off from work, or a parade or a picnic in the park. It represents the memory of all those brave Americans who died to allow us the privilege to live in this unique and wonderful country."

$500,000 Damage

Electrical Fire Ravages Dependable Cleaners Store

A five-alarm fire Sunday that caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the Dependable Cleaners store at 624 Hancock St. in Wollaston and an apartment building next door was electrical in nature, according to Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

Gorman said firefighters from Quincy, Boston and Needham battled the blaze, which may or may not have been caused by wiring in an old refrigerator at the cleaning store. The exact cause is still under investigation, he said.

"We definitely know it was an electrical fire," said the chief, who noted the fire began around 12:30 a.m.

Gorman estimated the damage at half a million dollars, most of that being at the store. The building next door received mostly smoke and water damage, he said.

The chief said the majority of the damage was in the front of the store. Although a cleanup is necessary in the back, he noted, the building is not a total loss.

Gorman said the store's fur vault will not be opened until the cleanup is complete. Any damage inside the vault will raise the cost of the damage estimate, he said.

No one was injured in the blaze, but 13 people

Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, offered the victims shelter during the night of the fire. He said Quincy Emergency Management and the American Red Cross also have helped ease the burden those displaced by the fire.

Union Congregational also has started a fund for the fire victims that had raised $900 at press time. Donations may be sent to Fire Relief Fund, c/o Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Quincy, MA 02170.

Council Reschedules FY98 Budget Session

The City Council Finance Committee session to discuss Mayor James Sheets' proposed $149.6 million Fiscal Year 1998 budget originally slated for May 22 has been rescheduled.

The session will be held Thursday, June 5 at 6:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Budgets to be discussed:

library department, health department, treasurer's department, reimbursement of veterans' pensions, tax title foreclosure, fire department, auditor's department, debt service, FICA, Furnace Brook Golf, general insurance, in-service training, pensions, and unemployment compensation.

The council, which can reduce the proposed FY98 budget but cannot make additions, must pass it in some form before July 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

The FY97 budget passed last year totaled $143.5 million.

The 'Gillis Watch' Goes On

What's John going to do?

That's the big question along the local political front this election year.

John, of course, is John Gillis, retired city clerk who has been mulling over a possible run for city councillor at-large.

Gillis, who became a City Hall legend during his 36 years there, would have an impact on the at-large race if he decides to get in.

GILLIS

Many observers think one of the three at-large seats would have his name on it if he decides to run.

His entry would make it an interesting council horse race. And put a little zip into the overall election to make up for the apparent lack of a mayoral contest.

One of the three at-large seats will be vacant. That's the one Michael Cheney is leaving because of family reasons.

McCAULEY

Incumbents Tim Cahill and Paul Harold are seeking re-election. And right now, former Mayor Frank McCauley is the man to beat for the Cheney seat. A fourth candidate, Greg Hanley, who has run for the school committee, has nomination papers in circulation.

McINTYRE

Charles McIntyre, now an assistant district attorney, who was a close runner-up in his political debut four years ago, is still considering another bid this year. He's the son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, one of the city's all-time top vote getters.

If Gillis should run, McIntyre won't.

If Gillis doesn't run, McIntyre might.

Well, will Gillis run?

"I haven't decided," he says. "I'm giving it a lot of thought. But there's still plenty of time to decide."

Meanwhile, there's a lot of people trying to help him to decide. Decide to run.

They've been offering him both financial and organizational support with which to wage an effective campaign.

He is still one of Quincy's most popular figures and

Ward 4 Center Meetings

Following is a list of regular meetings at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

•Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico holds office hours every Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m. or by appointment.

•The Ward 4 Neighborhood Advisory Committee meets the third Wednesday of each month at 7 p.m.

•The Ward Senior Citizens Group meets every Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m. Those who attend can meet neighbors, socialize and enjoy refreshments.

When displaying the U.S. flag, hang it above other flags or pennants on the same half yard. Never hang one national flag above another in time of peace.

does pretty well elsewhere in that department as indicated by his election as a Norfolk County commissioner.

Meanwhile, the "Gillis" watch" goes on.

MIKE McFARLAND, who will be leaving his post July 1 as Mayor James Sheets' executive secretary to return to private business, has made his political decision: he's running for the school committee seat Frank McCauley is vacating in his bid for city council at-large. McFarland has taken out his nomination papers.

McFARLAND

AND THE QUESTION whether there will be one or two vacant school committee seats this election has been answered. There will be one.

Ron Mariano, who is the vice chairman, has decided to seek re-election and has his nomination papers in circulation.

MARIANO

Mariano is still considered a potential candidate for Norfolk County sheriff next year. And is still seen as a possible successor to John (Jake) Comer as director of the Quincy Housing Authority.

OTHER MOVEMENT on the political front: Robert Boussy, who challenged Larry Chretien for the Ward 3 city council seat four years ago, will give it another try.

Boussy, who lives on Farrington St. and works in the transportation department at Mass. General Hospital, has nomination papers out for the Ward 3 seat now occupied by Pat McDermott.

Martin Ervin has changed his mind about running for the Ward 1 city council seat. He took out nomination papers but will not file them.

Ervin, who almost ran against Mayor Sheets four years ago, says he wants to concentrate on Family Resources Inc., a new community involved group he and his wife, Kerri, recently founded.

JIM HARDIE lamented here last week about the many well-known places in Quincy Point that have disappeared down through the years.

And that got former Mayor Joseph LaRaia remembering a few more.

LaRAIA

LaRaia, who grew up in the Point, attended St. Joseph's School there and was Ward 2 councillor, adds the following to the now-gone list:

"The late Jimmy Thomas' sandwich shop on South St. The Syrian Bakery at the Fore River Circle. The diner across from Whiton Park near the circle.

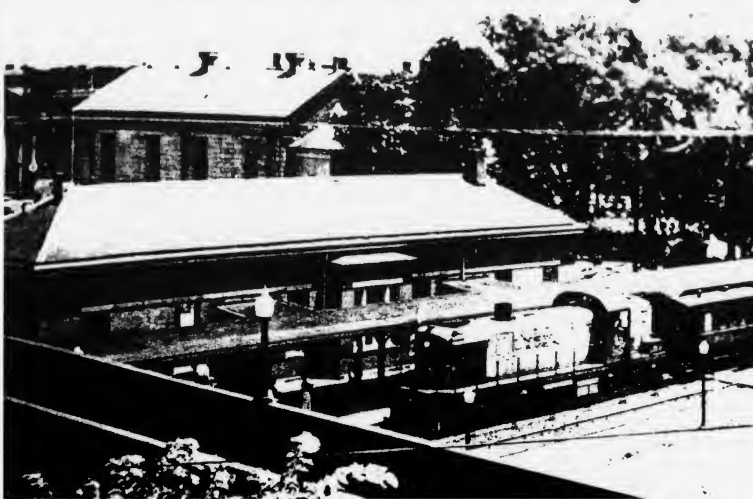

"Mattie's bar near the old Lincoln Theater. Pete's joke shop, the Star Bottling Co. and Joe Mullin's pool hall across from the church. Joe had an artificial arm but was a whiz at pool.

"The Royal Cafe ala the late Jobhy Evangelista. Stone's haberdashery next to the church and the late Fifi's barber shop.

"The Knotty Pine restaurant near the former branch library. The Chew family laundry across from the theater. Zack's clothing store."

LaRaia also remembers when there were seven bars along Washington St. to the Fore River Circle. Four of them have also disappeared. But not missed.

Scenes From Yesterday

Supports Assisted Care And Nursing Home Care

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am a senior living in Quincy and I am writing about the Marina Bay Senior Living Campus. I like the idea of having nursing homes and assisted living centers within the city because it gives senior citizens more options to choose from when they can no longer care for themselves at home.

This is an important issue not just to seniors but to their children and grandchildren. If the city does not support assisted living and nursing home care then it is in the unfortunate position of telling the most loyal and supportive members of the community that when they get old and infirm, Quincy has no more use for them and they should be shipped out. What kind of family values are those?

As the nation's population continues to age, our cities will need more senior living solutions, not less. Since seniors tend to be wealthier than other age groups—and they pay taxes and use relatively few city services, such as schools—cities that take care of their elderly may find it benefits them greatly.

Seniors also vote more than most other age groups. Politicians who do not support assisted living and nursing home care for seniors in Quincy should beware. We will remember when the time comes to cast our votes.

Shipyard Strike Postponed 3rd Time

By PAUL HAROLD

The Fore River shipyard, along with the seven other Bethlehem Steel yards on the East Coast, postponed for the third time a threatened strike. At its eight shipyards, Bethlehem employed 50,000 CIO workers.

Management and union officials were waiting for approval from the Wage Stabilization Board on an agreed upon 15 percent wage increase. A waiver was needed on the new age package since the federal regulations had a ceiling of 10 percent on salary increases.

James McGonnigal, executive secretary of Local 5, said a further postponement or strike action would be decided by the general executive board of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

Rev. Doris Hunton Brown Honored At Brookline Temple

Rev. Doris Hunton Brown of Quincy was recently honored and recognized for many years of faith and service at a special celebration hosted by fellow churchgoers at the First Spiritual Temple in Brookline.

Rev. Brown has been a trustee of the non-denominational Christian church since 1983, along with Rev. Stephen Fulton and Rev. Simeon Stefanidakis. The temple and its Ayer Institute service the Greater Boston community, teaching the concepts of God, Jesus Christ and Spirit.

Rev. Brown, born Feb. 22, 1907 in Newton, graduated from Wheaton College in 1929 with a bachelor of arts degree and went on to receive her master's in social service in 1935 from Boston University. Her professional career began with a decade of social service at the Fernald State School, a brief stint at Cambridge Family Service, and a long tenure at Boston Family Service, until her retirement in 1972, at age 65.

Rev. Brown was ordained in December 1958 and appointed assistant pastor by Rev. Audra Crocker of the Star Light-House in Boston, an independent Spiritualist Church. Rev. Crocker died in July 1971, and Rev. Brown was elected to be the pastor-president.

She continued in that capacity through December 1982, until the Star Light-House closed its doors. Rev. Brown then began her involvement with the First Spiritual Temple as a guest speaker for Sunday Worship Services and church member. As her commitment grew within the faith community, she was asked to serve as a trustee and guardian of the temple's mission and ministry in 1983.

In recognition of her life of service and dedication to the work of spirit, members and friends of the temple gathered to celebrate Rev. Brown's accomplishments and honored her with a special tribute. A star, within the constellation of Andromeda, has been renamed and designated as Doris Hunton Brown.

Mayor's Prayer Breakfast At Bryan Post June 17

The second annual Mayor's Prayer Breakfast will be held Sunday, June 17 at 7:30 a.m. at the Bryan VFW Post, Broad St., Quincy.

The breakfast, sponsored by Mayor James Sheets, is being hosted by Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition. The event began last year as an interfaith event aimed at focusing how the various religions and spiritual traditions of Quincy and the South Shore join the coalition in a common effort to meet the needs of people in the community.

Fr. William McCarthy, who with Sheets, organized the event, noted, "It is a chance to celebrate what joins us, not to focus on our differences. It is also an opportunity to raise some dollars for a worthy project. Only true happiness comes from squandering ourselves in a purpose. What better purpose than to help the homeless and less fortunate."

This year's featured speaker will be Joe Fitzgerald, who will speak on the importance of faith in meeting the needs of people in the community. Fitzgerald ald is currently a columnist for The Boston Herald. He has been in the newspaper business for 32 years, 27 years at the Herald.

Fitzgerald worked exclusively on sports until three years ago when the publisher of the Herald encouraged him to write a column that concentrated on values, standards and beliefs. He has since become known for many of his columns regarding personal stories of the faith and courage of ordinary people.

Fitzgerald has authored eight books, including biographies of Luis Tiant, Red Auerbach and Tom Heinsohn. A native of Roxbury and the parent of three children, he lives in Norwood with his wife of 31 years, Carol.

The breakfast this year will benefit The Mayor's Family Commission's Transitional Housing Program for homeless families. The program aims at identifying and housing homeless families with children in the Quincy schools so they need not seek shelter in other parts of the state and be forced to take children out of the school system. The program, though funded by HUD for the housing and services, needs to raise additional dollars for furnishings and future program development.

Linda Stice, executive director of the Mayor's Commission on the Family, said, "We are grateful for this collaborative effort to raise the important resources necessary to make this program work."

For tickets or more information, call 376-2255.

CELLULITE SELL-OUTS

Who wants wrinkled thighs or a bumpy bottom? No one, of course, which is why the anti-cellulite drug industry has become such a booming business. Unfortunately, many of these anti-fat medications are ineffective at best, dangerous at worst — and expensive almost always. Skin creams containing caffeine or alpha hydroxy have not been proven to have any effect on the dimples characteristic of cellulite. Creams with aminophylline, a drug used in treating asthma, have had some success, but only when used in conjunction with a supervised diet and exercise program. Some of the anti-cellulite herbs and pills now available are simple diuretics, causing temporary fluid loss. Popular drugs containing the substance ephedra have been linked to liver failure, high blood pressure, and even death, but no miracle fat loss.

P.S. People with asthma should talk to their doctor before using aminophylline cream due to the possibility of allergic reaction.

When it comes to caring for your skin, drinking lots of water, eating right, and getting enough sleep are all important ways to support maintaining its health. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension, and cholesterol. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. BEATRICE JUAREZ, a fourth grade student at Point Webster School, plays the flute during Tuesday's topping off ceremony at the Clifford H. Marshall School in Quincy Point.

'Topping Off' Ceremony Held At Marshall School Site

A "topping off" ceremony was held Tuesday at the site of the planned Clifford Marshall Elementary School in Quincy Point.

The school will be located adjacent to the site of the former Pollard School off Southern Artery.

Speakers at the event included Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Peter Kolson, Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, School Committee Vice Chairman Ronald Mariano and Joseph MacDonald, president of the Point-Webster Elementary School PTO. All School Committee members and Councilor Paul Harold also were present.

Point-Webster additionally was represented by its band, staff members, and fourth graders who will make up the Marshall School's first graduating class.

Sheets said the new school is not only an example of the city's continued commitment to educational excellence, but also "a whole new Renaissance" that is occurring in Quincy Point, including the planned reopening of the Fore River shipyard and scheduled improvements to Washington Street.

Raymondi voiced similar sentiments.

"Take a look around," he said. "You see a community on the move, a community on its way back."

Department of Public Works Operations Manager Lester Gerry said the "topping off" event was held because there was no time to hold a groundbreaking ceremony. Construction for the school, which is to open in January, is being handled by Bonfatti Construction of Norwood and is on schedule, he said.

The school is being built to relieve overcrowding at the Sterling Middle School in South Quincy. Middle school students from Quincy Point currently attend classes at Sterling.

Plans call for the Marshall School-named after the late Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall of Quincy--to take the place of the Point-Webster Elementary School, which will be converted to a middle school for the Quincy Point students.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

PROXIMATE CAUSE

In order that an injured party may take action against a tortfeasor (wrongdoer), there must be three general elements involved: a legal duty from the wrongdoer to the injured party, the breach of that duty, and damages that result from that breach. The last of these elements indicates that no liability will exist unless it can be proven that the wrongdoer's conduct was the "proximate cause" of the injured party's damages. The cause of the injury does not necessarily have to be the immediate or direct result of the wrongdoer's action. For proximate cause to exist, it must simply be proven that the injury was the likely consequence or outcome of the negligence of the wrongdoer.

HINT: The issue for the jury to weigh when establishing liability in negligence cases is whether the negligent (in) action of the wrongdoer could have foreseeably led to the injuries involved.

If you have been the victim of someone else's wrongdoing, whether at work, in the home, or in an auto accident, it is to your advantage to consult an attorney before too much time has passed. At our office, we have a proven record of success in this area of the law, and we will represent you aggressively without unnecessary delays. To schedule a free initial consultation, call 773-2880. We're located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

would have followed the same action in reorganizing the inspection services."

Mulvey could not be reached for comment at press time.

Sheets and members of the City Council, who approved the mayor's plans for the new inspection services department, have said the change will make those services more efficient by providing homeowners and business owners convenient "one-stop shopping" for construction and home improvement permits.

The new department will combine Quincy's previously separate building, plumbing, wire inspection, gas, conservation enforcement, and weights and measures departments.

One of results of the change is that the director of the new department will assume two duties currently performed by Mulvey: zoning enforcement and a seat on the Quincy License Board.

The city's inspection services will move from the Department of Public Works Building on Sea Street to the JFK Health Center on Hancock Street by next year following extensive renovations to the center.

turns out specialty publications.

Low is president and chairman of the Prescott Publishing Company and represents the fourth generation of the Low family.

Prospective bidders are seen as including Ottoway, a subsidiary of Dow Jones that owns a number of newspapers including six dailies in Massachusetts, among them the Cape Cod Times and the New Bedford Standard Times, the Gannett chain and Fidelity.

No set price tag has been put publicly on the Prescott company but industry sources estimate it could be worth between $80 and $100 million.

Low said he is seeking a buyer with the resources to compete with giant multimedia competitors while continuing to serve the South Shore area.

"We realized that we needed to be part of something larger to be successful in doing what this market is entitled to," said Low. "There are mega-players competing with us to become dominant information providers for the region south of Boston. We cannot hope to compete effectively with them in the future with the resources of a local family-owned business."

Low also noted that Prescott Publishing is "a lot stronger and more attractive now than two years ago. Then we were in the red, thrashing around because of escalating newsprint prices, and the region is still in an economic slump."

He added, however, that last year the company made "a modest profit" and is expected to make a larger profit this year.

The Ledger, the largest evening newspaper in New England, serves 26 communities south of Boston. It has 400 full-time employees and an average daily readership of about 200,000.

Neighborhood Hero

JIMMY WONG, a Quincy firefighter and a resident of Willard Street, recently received a commendation from Police Chief Francis Mullen for devising a plan that led to the arrest of two men responsible for a series of motor vehicle break-ins in his neighborhood. Wong placed a microphone in his vehicle, keeping the speaker in his apartment, and also hooked up a camera to keep surveillance on neighborhood cars. He subsequently caught the suspects with the assistance of a neighbor and the police.

Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

Homeowners Can Save On Water-Heating Costs

If you're one of the millions of homeowners with an electric water heater, did you know that you might be wasting money unnecessarily?

That's because an electric water heater consumes more energy than just about any other home appliance. Even in areas where electricity rates are relatively low, water-heating costs can be substantial.

They key to reducing electric water heater usage is matching the hot water supply to these heavy-use periods such as morning showers and evening dish washing. A device called an electric water heater timer enables homeowners to achieve this objective by letting users select the time periods when hot water is available such as from 6 to 8 a.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

"Conventional water heaters are set to maintain a consistent water temperature throughout the day," said Bruce Oellerich of Intermatic Inc., a manufacturer of energy control products. "When the temperature drops below a pre-set value, the electricity turns on and energy is supplied to the water until the desired temperature is regained. However, households generally need hot water only during certain time periods."

A study conducted by Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT) confirms that there's an easy way for homeowners with electric water heaters to slash their water-heating bills. The study found that a typical household can save up to 26 percent on its annual water-heating costs by installing a water heater timer.

In a household paying eight cents per kilowatt hour

(about the national average), the 26 percent energy cost reduction translates to an estimated annual savings of $106. Other key factors affecting the actual savings are the household's water usage and the water temperature setting.

Intermatic offers a wide variety of electric water heater timers, including two new digital models. Most of them can be programmed for up to 12 on/off operations daily, and some have an external override switch that allows homeowners to schedule more hot water if it's needed.

Electric water heater timers are available through hardware stores, home centers and electrical contractors.

To obtain free information on the many water heater timer choices available, request Forms 300WH10001 and 300EH10001 from: Intermatic Inc., Intermatic Plaza, Spring Grove, IL 60081-9698.

What To Look For In Replacement Windows

Homeowners who want to make one improvement that can make their whole house look and live better should consider replacement windows and patio doors.

"Consumers are pleasantly surprised to see just how much new windows enhance the beauty and function of their homes," says Chuck Berk, vice president and general manager of Sears Home Improvement Professional Services, which performs more residential window replacements than any other company nationwide.

When Should You Replace Your Windows?

"Today's quality windows can be installed quickly, at any time of year," Berk notes. So, when should homeowners replace them? When they're tired of struggling with storm windows and screens, coping with frequent painting, or enduring drafts from leaky, single-pane construction.

"Properly installed, custom windows and patio doors give your house a neat, well-maintained look,"

Berk explains. "They should operate smoothly, be easy to clean, offer low maintenance, be energy-efficient, and enhance the home in style."

Today's windows offer many choices. They are available in a variety of frame materials, glazing (glass) and styles to suit any home and budget. "Whatever your preference," cautions Berk, "ask about the manufacturer's warranty and consider the installer's reputation, to ensure trouble-free performance that lasts."

Today's most popular frame, vinyl, allows very little heat and cold transference, and is maintenance-free and economical, too. Vinyl-clad wood is a top quality variation that combines wood's extra insulating properties with vinyl's easy care. Solid wood windows are a luxury option for historic and other special houses, while aluminum is available for maximum economy. Whatever the frame material, windows designed to open should come with screens that slide into the frame.

To replace drafty, old single-panes and eliminate the need for storm windows, homeowners can choose double-glazed or triple-glazed construction that insulates with a layer of inert air or argon gas trapped between the layers of glass. Also available is glass with a solar-shield tint or low-E glass to replace ultra-violet rays and reduce sun damage to home furnishings. In general, the more complex the construction, the higher the price, and the more efficient the window.

When it comes to window styles, homeowners can choose an improved version of their home's existing style, or give the house a different look with a new style. Double-hung windows come with traditional six-over-six small glass panes; or without, for a contemporary look. They may lift straight up to open, or swing down for easy cleaning from inside. Contemporary casement windows open outward with a handle, and let in much more light and air than the same sized double-hungs. Bay windows are three or more windows set into a semi-circle and usually feature a combination of fixed and operable windows. Consumers can ask to see the contractor's portfolio of completed jobs to visualize how these and other styles look on various homes.

Whatever the type of window, it should be a custom fit, to become part of the home's integral structure. No more caulk, putty or weather-stripping to worry about.

The right contractor is as important as the right window, so homeowners should ask about the installation process, warranties, and other basics before signing the contract.

How Will Your Contractor Replace Your Window?

Berk notes that Sears windows are factory-crafted to measurements the contractor takes in the home, for a snug custom fit, and no messy on-site construction or damage to the interior wall finish. Working from inside the house, the installer takes just minutes to remove the old window unit and install the new, custom-made one. "A reputable installer will explain his process in detail to the customer, so she knows just what to expect," Berk asserts.

Save Your Lawn From Grass-Grubbing Pests

Most everyone with a lawn or garden is familiar with the sight of flying Japanese beetles in the summer. These pesky insects cause millions of dollars in damage each year by feeding on the leaves of rose bushes, fruit trees and other plants.

Although Japanese beetles are a nuisance, what's even worse is their offspring—the grub.

Each fall, these grass-grubbing larvae cause even more damage than their adult counterparts because they feed on the roots of grass, flowers and bulbs. Grubs can destroy an otherwise healthy lawn by preventing water from reaching the root system. The result of extensive damage is brown and patchy turf which, in some areas, can be pulled up like a carpet.

"The signs of grub infestation are obvious," says John Lucas, senior entomologist at AgrEvo Environmental Health. "If you roll back the grass, you can see the white C-shaped larvae in the soil close to the ground."

So how can you get rid of grubs? Lucas recommends using a product labeled for grub control and offers these tips:

- Timing is everything. The grub is the weakest link in the year-long cycle of the Japanese beetle. For best results, make sure that application takes place in the fall when grubs are newly hatched and feeding, or in the spring before they emerge as adults.

- Measure the size of your lawn in square feet so that you can determine the amount of product needed for accurate control.

- Remember "less is more" when using insecticides. Select a product which offers low dosage rates of less than 3 pounds per 1,000 square feet, like new Intercept-H&G Grub & Insect Control granules.

- Always read and follow label instructions.
- Remove any accumulated thatch (plant litter) so the insecticide can reach the soil.

- Apply uniformly with a broadcast spreader to assure complete coverage. Be sure to calibrate your spreader for the appropriate amount of granules.

- Thoroughly saturate the treated area with water immediately following application for maximum effectiveness.

- As when using any chemical, wear gloves and protective clothing, and always remember to wash hands and materials thoroughly after handling.

How To Get Rid Of Old Appliances

All appliances are made from steel. In fact, appliances are systems of mechanical and electrical components encased in steel bodies. So, what do you do when you want to dispose of an old steel body? Whirlpool, a leading manufacturer in the industry, is also concerned with the environment and the impact of disposing old appliances.

Your chances of the garbage man taking it away for you with the regular trash are pretty slim. As of 1995, 18 states have enacted landfill bans for appliances, meaning that they must be recycled.

Recycling steel makes sense. It saves energy- and natural- resources. In just one year's time, the steel industry saves enough energy to electrically power about 18 million households for 365 days. By participating in the recycling effort you can help conserve one ton of steel, 2,500 pounds of iron ore, 1,000 pounds of coal and 40 pounds of limestone.

There are several options for disposing of used appliances:

- New Appliance Retailers: Many dealers will take away your old appliance when the new one is delivered. Some dealers charge for this service.

- Curbside Collection: Community curbside waste collection services can be contacted to find out what options are available for disposing of old appliances. Some communities have designated appliance collection days, or drop-off points. The waste collector may charge for this service.

- Ferrous (iron) Scrap Processors: Local ferrous scrap processors may accept used appliances. Find the dealers in the Yellow Pages and call first to make sure they accept used appliances, and check on the requirements for refrigerators. Most scrap dealers want the refrigerants removed before they will accept them. Federal law requires the removal of the refrigerants before disposal to help protect the ozone layer.

- Classified Ads: This newspaper section usually contains names of people who will pick up, or allow you to drop off, used appliances. While this option is widely available to consumers on a national basis, it is not recommended as a first choice because people sometimes find themselves allowing strangers into their homes when they have arranged to have the old appliance picked up.

- Steel Recycling Hotline: If you can't find a place to dump your old appliance, call the steel recycling hotline at 800 YES I CAN (800 937-1226) to find out where there's a recycling center in your area.

- Charity Or Thrift Stores: Many will take older, working appliances.

The Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 prohibit individuals from knowingly venting ozone-depleting compounds used as refrigerants into the atmosphere while maintaining, servicing, repairing or disposing of appliances--appliances like refrigerators, freezers, air conditioners and dehumidifiers. Refrigerants must be recovered prior to disposal by a qualified technician.

Appliances by weight contain approximately 75 percent steel and the recycling rate of steel appliances products is currently equal to that. Most of the recycled steel is used again in the production of new appliances and represents valuable feedstock for recycling into new steel products.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

So You Want To Sell Fast

By CAROLE BIAGINI

Sometimes it becomes necessary to sell a home in a hurry. Maybe you have taken a new job in another city, and you want the whole family there with you.

Here are some of the things you can do to accomplish it:

- Price your house a little below the asking price of other houses like it. When houses of the same general quality are for sale, the new listing with the lowest prices usually sell first.

- Make your property look better than those competing against it. Have everyone in your household make the extra effort to keep the property neat and tidy.

- Cosmetics count! Finish those little projects you started last year but never seem to get around to. A little paint goes a long way.

- Give a decorating allowance to prospective buyers.

- Offer financial help by buying down the mortgage rate. The lower rate enables more buyers to qualify, and the payments are lower-advantages that offset the slightly higher price the buydown lets you ask for the house.

- Offer financial incentives, such as financing the loan yourself, to get a buyer who otherwise might not qualify. This could be a great investment for you, too.

- Use a good real estate professional who knows the market and will work well for you. Good agents frequently have contacts with out-of-town buyers, and they work with other agents to find buyers. If you're moving out of town, a good agent can also put you in touch with an agent in your new community, and thus help ease your move. Keep in mind that a good real estate pro can sell your home even though you may have already moved to another city.

SS Habitat, Church To Build New Home For Needy

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset announces a partnership with South Shore Habitat for Humanity to build a home in Quincy.

The project, initiated by the church's Outreach Committee, was unanimously approved by the Vestry April 28. The committee's primary objective in 1997 is to alleviate hunger and inadequate housing, and sponsorship of a Habitat house has appealed to many members of the church as a way to meet that challenge.

In addition to raising the cost of the house, $50,000, St. Stephen's has committed to providing work site crews at least one Saturday a month. The labor for the rest of the construction will be provided by South Shore Habitat.

Habitat for Humanity International was founded 21 years ago in Georgia by Millard Fuller. The fledgling organization gained a boost in visibility by the support of former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Roslyn, who continue to be actively involved. Habitat is a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian housing ministry that has built more than 50,000 houses worldwide.

South Shore Habitat has built or renovated 12 houses in the past 11 years. Many people in Cohasset took part in a local Habitat project, the renovation of the Bates Building on Elm Street.

The house that St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is sponsoring will be one of 10 Habitat houses to be built on a 3.3-acre site in Quincy. Work is expected to begin in September and a partner family will be chosen at that time.

Selection of the family is by the Habitat board using income, need, willingness to partner with Habitat and other criteria. Partner families buy houses that are sold at no profit and are financed with affordable, no interest mortgages. In addition, they invest their own labor—500 hours of sweat equity.

Those interested in getting involved in the St. Stephen's project are invited to attend an informational meeting in Walton Rodgers Hall at 11:30 a.m. after church services, or call Willoughby Hood at 383-1666.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A certain project you've been postponing should be dusted off and made a top priority this week. Home entertaining is not favored. Instead, getting out and about this weekend will fill the bill.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Others are impressed with you on the social scene. However, be sure to clear up those loose ends on the home front. Over the weekend, you tend to overreact to something being said casually.

Tournament Begins This Week

Raiders Earn 'A Huge Win' Over Presidents

By LIAM FITZGERALD

In a showdown of two tournament-bound boys volleyball teams, North Quincy High School overcame a 12-1 deficit to win the first game, 16-14, then went on to defeat crosstown rival and host Quincy High School, 2-1, last Thursday.

The 16-14, 13-15, 15-7 victory, which improved North's record to 13-7, also improved the Red Raiders' chances of hosting a game in the MAA state tournament. The tournament pairings were announced yesterday (Wednesday). Quincy finished at 11-7 and will likely open the tournament on the road.

"This was a huge win for us, because we ended the regular season on a positive note, beat our biggest rival on their home court, and hopefully secured a home game in the tournament," said North Quincy coach John Perkins. "We moved ahead of three teams, which gives us a solid shot at hosting a game."

The Presidents reeled off the match's first eight points, sparked by the serving of Jared Downey, who collected seven service points (including one ace) in the spurt. When Quincy increased its lead to 12-1, Perkins called a timeout to settle his players down and increase their defensive intensity.

"During that timeout, I told them to calm down, keep the ball in the court and play aggressive defense," said Perkins. "It was our defense, not so much our offense, that aided our comeback."

The Raiders clawed their way back, scoring five straight points to tie the game at 14-14, then collected two more points for the 16-14 victory.

"Matt Bromley (17 kills, 12 blocks) playing a very strong game and the serving of Jimmy Wong, who collected eight of his 17 service points in that game, were the keys to our comeback," said Perkins.

Quincy coach Tom Henderson was disappointed with how the Presidents' performance deteriorated once they took control of the opening game.

"We didn't play well defensively as a team," said Henderson. "We seemed to suffer a mental lapse in that first game, and when that

QUINCY'S MATTHEW CHAN sets himself for a dig during the Presidents' regular season finale against North Quincy. Quincy held a 12-1 lead in the opening game, but the Raiders rallied to win the game, 16-14, and the match, 16-14, 13-15, 15-7. (Sun photos/Tom Gorman)

North Defeats Weymouth, Quincy To End Season; Quincy Battles Barnstable

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Finishing the season on a positive note was a goal of the North Quincy High School softball team, which accomplished that with wins over Weymouth and Quincy.

Meanwhile, the Quincy High School squad wrapped up a tough campaign yesterday (Wednesday) against Barnstable.

The Red Raiders went out with a bang, edging host Weymouth, 9-8, last Friday. Catcher Bridget Shaughnessy, the team's only senior, scored the winning run on a sacrifice fly by junior Maura O'Brien in the top of the seventh. North led, 8-3, before Weymouth scored five unanswered runs to tie the game.

Junior Kristen Keohane, who went the distance for the victory, shut down Weymouth in the bottom of the seventh to seal the win. Keohane scattered 10 hits and gave up just three earned runs.

"Kristen did a great job in clutch situations," said NQ coach Bob Doyle, who led the Raiders to an 8-12 overall record, 8-9 in the Old Colony League in his first year as varsity coach. "She got timely outs in the sixth and seventh innings, kept her poise and got the job done. It was a nice way to end the season and the girls were very excited about the win afterwards."

North, which collected 11 hits, was paced offensively by Shaughnessy and Keohane (both three for four, one RBI apiece). Sophomores Rachael Powers and Kristen Bowes (two hits, RBI apiece) also chipped in with some timely hits.

"We lost a lot of close games, so it was good to see the girls hold on here and send us off with a good feeling," said Doyle. "It

North's Tourney Berth On Line NQ Must Win Last Two; Season Over For Quincy

To qualify for its first MIAA state tournament in over a decade, the North Quincy High School baseball team (8-10) had to win yesterday (Wednesday) against Taunton at 4 p.m. and today (Thursday) against South Boston at 4 p.m.

Over at Quincy High School, meanwhile, the struggling Presidents (3-17) hosted Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday and wrapped up its season yesterday (Wednesday) at Brookline at 3:30 p.m.

Last Friday, the Red Raiders suffered one of their toughest defeats of the season in a 4-3 nine-inning loss to visiting Weymouth.

With the score tied, 3-3, Weymouth's Steve Dhooge singled and stole second to lead off the ninth. Dhooge advanced to third on a fly out and scored the winning run on brother Matt Dhooge's suicide squeeze. North could not push home the equalizer in the bottom of the ninth and fell to its OCL foe.

Chris Beston earned the win, going the distance while giving up seven hits and recording 10 strikeouts. Freshman Rob Celata pitched a complete game for North, allowing two earned runs and striking out nine, but was charged with the loss.

The Red Raiders jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the second on a groundout by catcher Bill Walker that drove home first baseman John Sullivan. Sullivan reached on a walk and moved to third on singles by Celata and third baseman Brian Linsky.

North increased its lead to 2-0 in the fourth when Linsky, who had walked and advanced on a sacrifice bunt by Walker, scored on a Weymouth overthrow.

Weymouth rallied for three runs in the fifth to go ahead, 3-2. Two North errors aided Weymouth's comeback. In the bottom of the fifth, North tied the game on a Celata groundout, which drove in Brian Beaton, who had singled and advanced on a Sullivan single.

Last Thursday, the Red Raiders made it season sweep of the Presidents with a 7-3 triumph at Adams Field. Ryan Herlihy went the distance to pick up his second win over Quincy this season.

"I thought both pitchers did a fine job—Herlihy for them and Dennis Palardy for us," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "We just self-destructed and gave away too many runs. We got a couple of runs late, but we had already gotten too far behind at that point."

Junior shortstop Tony Staffier and junior first baseman Steve Wiltshire each collected two hits for Quincy.

The Red Raiders suffered a tough defeat to host Bridgewater-Raynham, 12-8, last Wednesday.

In other action last week, Quincy dropped a 16-0 decision to Barnstable and lost to Silver Lake, 5-2.

"Tommy Daley did a good job for us on the mound against Silver Lake, going into the late innings, but we weren't able to pull it out," said Sylvia. "Staffier and Wiltshire continued to hit the ball better, but we didn't get much offense going. Again, you can't get two, three or four hits and expect to win."

North Quincy coach Dave Perdios was unavailable for comment as of press time.

TRIPLE A

Spillane & Epstein Undefeated

In a come-from-behind victory, Spillane & Epstein remained undefeated at 7-0 by defeating Locker Room, 15-9, in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Triple A action.

Winning pitcher Jeff Tam came in with Spillane trailing, 9-7, and threw three scoreless innings with six strikeouts. Leading Spillane offensively were Eric Healy (three hits), Jonathan Mendez and Darryl Zoia (two hits apiece) and Kosta Kalpakidis, Chris Mercurio, Tam and Tim Smith (one hit apiece). Scoring the runs which brought Spillane from the two-run deficit to a six-run lead were Tommy Cabral, Jarrod Abbott, Joey Scribi, Zoia, Tam, Smith and Mendez.

Making solid contact for Locker Room were Jake McQuinn, Frank Feeley and Rich Churchill. Marc Bertrand, Issac Guertin, Colin Mooney, John Morris, Andy Pang, McQuinn, Feeley and Churchill scored in a nine-run third that gave Locker a temporary 9-7 lead.

In other action, CNA Insurance edged Hurley Insurance, 9-8, in a game that neither deserved to lose. The teams share a mutual respect for each other and for the way youth baseball should be played.

CNA's starting pitcher, Brian Carney, pitched extremely well in his season debut before Rob Richards came on in the fourth and shut down Hurley for his second win. Their combined effort enabled CNA to remain close until it pushed four runs across in the final two innings to overcome Hurley's final lead. Richards was also the offentook a lot of hard work, but they finally started seeing what teamwork and togetherness can do. I'm proud of each and every one of them; they're an excellent group of girls.

"I felt it was a very productive season, and I'm very pleased with their efforts. Even though it wasn't a winning season, it was very close. I'm very excited about next year and I'm sure the girls are looking forward to making a run at it next spring."

Doyle cited the team's only senior, Shaughnessy, for providing leadership on and off the field and improving her play behind the plate as the season wore on.

"After very limited varsity action last year behind Kerry Ginty, Bridget did a tremendous job for us, keeping the team together as one of our leaders," he said. "Her defense improved throughout the year, especially in the last five games."

"She made several putouts, blocked the plate well and made some great flips to Kristy Deputula covering the plate. We're going to miss her presence, along with her bat and glove, next season."

Other key players for North included junior first baseman Kerry Skehan and junior shortstop Laurie Flynn, both of whom were named to the OCL All-Star team. Doyle also noted the improvement in junior pitcher Kristy Deputula, who was selected as North's winner of the OCL Sportsmanship award.

Last Thursday, the Red Raiders claimed their fifth consecutive Mary Pratt Trophy with a 8-5 triumph over crosstown rival Quincy. Timely hitting and three putouts at the plate enabled North to defeat the Presidents for the third time this season.

Deputula picked up the complete-game victory, yielding five hits while collecting eight strikeouts. Deputula helped her own cause with a single and two RBIs.

Leading 5-4 in the fifth, the Red Raiders added three insurance runs to give themselves some breathing room. Bowes walked and later scored, Deputula drove in a run with a fielder's choice and Shaughnessy singled in the third run.

Quincy cut the deficit to 8-5 in the bottom of the fifth on a walk, single and wild pitch, but Deputula shut the Presidents down the rest of the way to preserve the two in the final inning to earn the victory for O'Brien's Bakery in a 17-14 triumph over Noll Electric in recent Quincy Youth Baseball International League action.

Adam Julewicz was the hitting star for O'Brien's with a triple and five RBIs. Also contributing offensively were Colin Maxey, victory. North's third double play cut short

"It was a typical North Quincy-Quincy game, well-played for the most part, though errors hurt us," said Quincy coach Bob Keuther. "Colleen Nichol had a good game, as did Kim Garthwait, who received our OCL Sportsmanship award. We played much better offensively, played with confidence. Lisa (Maconochie) pitched a good game, too."

"We were right there, but we couldn't get the timely hit to get back in it. That's been the story of this season for us. Those three unearned runs in the third also hurt. I want to compliment North and coach Doyle, who has done a great job with a team on the rise."

The Presidents got on the board first, scoring twice in the first inning. With the bases loaded and nobody out, Alisha Ford grounded to Flynn, whose throw got by Shaughnessy at home, allowing Lynn Maconochie (two hits) to score. Shaughnessy quickly recovered the ball, tossing it to Deputula covering to nail Amy Greaulou at the plate. Colleen Nichol's sacrifice fly drove in Quincy's second run.

"The key to the win was the defensive play of Bridget Shaughnessy, Kerry Skehan and Kristy Deputula," said Doyle. "Those double plays were huge; cutting down those runners at the plate was one of the reasons we won the game. It was a tight, close game, going back and forth. It was an important win for us, because we had lost six in a row before that."

North cut the lead to 2-1 in the second, then scored three runs in the third to go ahead, 4-2. Powers had the big hit, an RBI triple. Skehan drove in Powers with a single and later scored on a wild pitch.

The Presidents rallied right back to forge a 4-4 tie in their half of the third. With runners on second and third, Nichol blooped a single to right, scoring Garthwait (two hits, two runs scored) and Ford. Again, NQ's defense turned it up a notch, turning a key double play to end the inning. Lisa Maconochie struck out, but Shaughnessy didn't handle the pitch and threw to Skehan for the out. Skehan then fired it back to Shaughnessy, who tagged out Nichol on a close play to end the inning.

In the fifth, North re-took the lead, 5-4, when Shaughnessy ripped a liner to center and later scored on a wild pitch. Eleven runners left on base proved to be North's downfall in a 3-2 loss to Bridgewater-Raynham last Wednesday.

With one out in the second, consecutive singles by NQ's O'Brien, Flynn (three hits), Bowes and Powers drove in the first two runs of the game. North collected six hits in the first two innings, but managed just three more the rest of the way. Keohane chipped in with two hits.

In the third, B-R cut the lead to 2-1 and tied it in the fifth. North's defense sparked on the game-tying hit, as Powers fielded the deep drive to center, made a strong throw to shortstop Flynn, who relayed the ball to third baseman Deputula, who tagged out the runner trying to stretch a double into a triple. The key defensive play ended the inning as the game remained tied, 2-2.

B-R manufactured the lead run in the sixth with a bunt single, a sacrifice bunt and a single to left. North's best chance to tie came in the seventh when Keohane walked and stole second. Shaughnessy stroked a liner that appeared headed for right field, but the B-R second baseman reached over her head and snared it to end the game.

Shaughnessy, who made a remarkable diving catch of a foul bunt pop-up in the sixth, was robbed of a hit on three separate occasions. In the second, she lined a shot to right, but was thrown out at first. In her third at-bat, Shaughnessy smashed a wicked line drive that the B-R pitcher somehow managed to catch. The third robbery was the aforementioned shot that sealed the win for the victors.

Skehan, in her second start, again kept the Raiders in the game, yielding three runs on six hits with one strikeout and three walks. B-R collected just two hits in the first four innings, but the Trojan bats came alive in the fifth and sixth innings, however, with two hits in each that drove in two runs, including the game-winner.

Following Wednesday's tough loss, an informal banquet was held for North's varsity, JV and freshman teams in the cafeteria of Sacred Heart School. Coach Doyle said information about summer softball camps, which he strongly encouraged the players to attend, will be distributed to the players this week.

Standings after two weeks were: Osco Drug (4-0); Feenan (3-1); SSGA (3-1); O'Brien's (2-1); AFSCME (2-1); Olindy's (2-2); Imaginative (1-1); Everlasting (1-3); Noll (0-3); Canavan and Davis (0-4).

Montclair 'A' Team Wins 1997 Basketball Jamboree

The Quincy Recreation Department recently conducted its annual end of the season Elementary Basketball Jamboree for participants in its city-wide elementary after school and Saturday recreation programs.

According to Barry Welch, director of recreation, over 80 boys and girls participated in the activity which designed to instruct elementary age participants in the skills of basketball while under game conditions. Participation, not competition, is emphasized throughout the program.

In championship action, Montclair's "A" team won the Jamboree Title over Beechwood, 15-11. Montclair coach Dean Zoia congratulated Mike Diaz for his 9-point performance which led the team. Daryl Costa paced Beechwood with 8 points, while Ted Fawell collected a number of rebounds.

Welch presented the Montclair "A" team with championship trophies, and ribbons were presented to the Beechwood team. Welch cited the recreation staff for their leadership and Mike Connor for his shooting clinic presented to the youngsters before the games began.

The semifinal round saw Beechwood get by Montclair's "B" team, 17-15. Daryl Costa led Beechwood with 11 points, while Kyle Costa and Chris Sheenan each chipped in 2 points. Pat Clifford and Ted Fawell scored a point apiece and Cory White, Pat O'Donnell, Jesse Buckley, Dave Oronte and Aaron Senter played well for the winners.

In other semifinal action, the Montclair "A" team defeated Merrymount, 20-13, despite the efforts of Bryan Donovan and Steve Graham.

In first round action, the Montclair "A" team opened with a 14-6 win over Beechwood, led by Mike Diaz (8 points) while Steve Reardon (4 points) and Ivan Wong (2 points) also contributed offensively. Warren happened, we didn't function as well as should have. We needed to pull together as a cohesive unit, but we didn't. I think we could have beaten North Quincy if we had stuck together better.

"They've done it frequently this year, where they'll get a big lead then think they can coast while the other team fights back. That concerns me heading into the tournament, because we'll be playing good teams that will take advantage of our mistakes."

The second game began much like the first, with Quincy controlling the play and claiming a quick 6-0 lead. Again, North fought back and eventually held a 13-8 advantage. Just when North appeared to have the game (and the match) in hand, the momentum immediately shifted to Quincy, which reeled off the final seven points to win the game, 15-13.

With the match knotted 1-1, the third game went back and forth, as each team took the lead before relinquishing it. Trailing 5-3, the Presidents collected four points in a row for a 7-5 lead. Quincy would not score again, however, as the Raiders gained command with 10 consecutive points to clinch the match, 15-7.

Perkins cited the solid overall play of senior captain Mike Johnston in the third game as the primary reason North emerged victorious.

"Mike was unstoppable in that game, picking up seven kills and five blocks," said Perkins. "He took over with blocking and offense and just carried us, finishing with 15 kills and eight blocks. Nick Shea played an excellent defensive game, especially in the third game, diving for a number of saves."

Eddie Tan also played an important role for the Raiders, collecting 11 service points.

Ed Smith paced the Presidents defensively with eight kills and 12 digs, while Don McCarthy contributed 13 kills and 10 digs.

sive leader, scoring three times, including the winning run, and collecting three hits. Brian Lee had two hits and Jamie Losi scored twice with some daring baserunning. Kellan Losi, Steve O'Neill and Mike Tormey anchored a steady defense.

Mike O'Neil was the starter and hard-luck loser for Hurley, striking out 10 and protecting his team's lead until there were two outs in the bottom of the sixth. O'Neil also contributed at the plate with a hit and two runs scored. Kaitlyn Slowe scored two runs and Mike Arrufat scored a run and added two hits. Dan Ivy, Joshua Worth and David Boncek all played alert defensively.

Earlier, CNA Insurance defeated Flavin & Flavin,

23-5, in a game which featured a solid pitching effort by CNA's Mike Merlis, who went five innings for his first win this season, and a rare unassisted double play by CNA left fielder Brian Lee.

In his first start of the year, Merlis struck out six, gave up only one hit and was in control throughout. He was supported offensively by Jonathan O'Connor and Tyler Lagrotteria, each of whom had three RBI, and Rob Richards and Lee, who both scored four times. Merlis also scored four runs and added two hits. Defensively, catcher Kellan Losi threw out a runner, but the play of the game was turned in by Lee, who caught a short fly in left center and doubled off a runner by stepping on third. Lee was awarded the game ball for his efforts.

For Flavin, Steve Saccetti and Harvey Chan were the bright spots: each scored twice and Saccetti pitched well in relief. Kevin French made a couple of nice plays, as did Scott Rosenberger.

Quincy D.A.R.E. won its seventh straight game behind the pitching of James Keenan, who tossed a complete game two-hitter and struck out eight. Keenan was also the hitting star, going four for four and scoring three runs. Roger Layden went two for four (two triples) and drove in two runs, while John Dahlquist, Damian Serviano and John Bergonzi all turned in solid efforts for D.A.R.E.

Marissa Malvesti, who pitched and struck out six, was also the hitting star for Everlasting, going five for five with two triples, three RBI and three runs scored. Defensively, Kelly made a running over-the-shoulder catch in left and also threw out a runner at home to end an inning, and Coughlin made an over-the-shoulder catch on the run at third base.

For the Rascals, Kyle Mansfield pitched and struck out two. Hitting stars were Kelli Nogler (six for six, home run, seven RBI, five runs, four steals), Kristen Lee (four for six, two RBI, two runs), Pam Jacobs (four for six, two RBI, one run scored) and Andrea Verucco ((three for six, double, three RBI, three runs). Kelli Nogler stabbed a hard line drive at first and doubled up a runner to end the game and Kristen Nogler made three putouts at second.

In Dorothy Quincy Division action, Kerri Limousine topped Coffee Break Cafe, 9-4. Lisa Schifone tossed a three-hitter for Kerri Limo, striking out seven and helping herself with two hits in three at-bats. Catcher Courtney Allen caught a strong game.

Also hitting well for Kerri Limo were Beth Goodrich (two for three), Courtney Riley (two for two) and Jackie Reeves (two for two). Ashley Nee and Maria McGinness took control of the infield with their sparkling play.

The solid pitching and catching combination of Lindsey and Danielle Rand kept Coffee Break Cafe within striking distance.

Kerri Limo also defeated Harvard Community Health, 22-18. Sheila Lynch pitched well and helped herself with a four for five effort at the plate. Beth Goodrich (four for five) and Courtney Riley (two for three) each belted home runs.

Maria McGinness, Lisa Schifone, Jackie Reeves, Jackie Tower, Marilyn Power, Kristine Nelson and Ali Ciccarello also contributed to Kerri's offensive explosion. Kristen Dwyer sparked defensively. Ashley Nee continued to burn up the basepaths and dominate the infield, combing with Goodrich on a rally-killing double play in the bottom of the sixth to wrap up the win.

Maura Rogers (five for five) and Megan Sidorowicz (three for four) each crushed home runs for HCH. Danielle Rogers (five for five) and Tonya Carpenter helped spark HCH's dramatic comeback attempt which fell four runs short.

Meghan Chagnon, who pitched a good game, knocked in the winning run in ServiceMaster's 17-16 win over Coffee Break Cafe. Alyssa Hawksley hit a two-run home run, Samantha Farina and Meghan Holt turned a double play and Beth Bloomer played solid defense for ServiceMaster.

JUNIOR LEAGUE

Kiwanis, Keohane's, Jaehnig Club, Burgin Platner Hurley Winners

Other offensive standouts for Kiwanis were Eric Ranstrom and Ryan Conley (two singles apiece), John Mateu (single, double) and Shaun Gibbons (three singles). Mike O'Mahoney, Marc Tucker, Chris Sheehan and Nick Puopolo collected one hit apiece. McFarland also added a single.

Other key hitters for Keohane's were Adam Terlaje (three hits), Kevin O'Connell (two doubles, two singles), Ryan Donahue (double, two singles), Brendan McDonald (single, double) and Chris Dolbear (single, triple). Keohane's turned in a solid defensive team effort.

Ryan Feldhoff, Bruce Maggio and Matt Grazioso all had multiple-hit games for Beacon, while Ryan Hemphill added a double.

In other recent action, the Jaehnig Club rebounded from a six-run first inning deficit to forge a 9-9 tie against the improved Burgin Platner Hurley squad. Pat O'Brien deserved a better fate as he pitched well but fell victim to poor defense in the first. He also chipped in with a double and two RBI. Steve Kelley caught a strong game and cracked a long double.

Jaehnig's Dave Buttomer smashed a double and single, Mike McLaughlin singled and played good defense at first base and Jeff Butts, Pat Maxey and Kyle Cardomy also hit safely. Ben Kelleher scored a key run after being hit by a pitch. David Jaehnig continued his solid defensive play at shortstop.

For The Week*

"True sorrow makes a silence in the heart" and we think even the most obtuse among us know enough not to intrude on such feelings. At such times, however, there is work that must be done - and we, at Deware do it competently, quietly and without intrusion.

This is the essence of our approach to funeral service. We are successful, if months later, when grief has been partially submerged, our efforts are remembered gratefully as having softened somewhat the jagged edges of bereavement.

We realize that making funeral arrangements either in advance or when someone you love dies requires many, many decisions. We realize that there are many needs to be met, concerns to be faced and preferences to think about.

We believe that the key to a worry-free funeral arrangement, both before need or at need, is careful counseling with an experienced and trusted funeral director. At Deware, we are here at any time to talk to you about the options. And remember the decisions will be yours. Satisfying your needs and desires is always our main consideration...

Sugarman's Junkyard Leaving And Staying

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Sugarman's Junkyard is planning to relocate outside of Quincy maybe within a month, but will still continue to operate the business at 299 Centre St., but on a smaller scale.

Although not divulging where they would move to, David Sugarman told the Quincy License board at Tuesday's meeting that the Centre St. location for the past 28 years, will still be in operation, for door trade, but that all heavy trailer trucks, equipment will be at the new site.

Complaints from neighbors have plagued the Sugarman's resulting in several license board meetings in the past year to try to alleviate the problem.

One neighbor John Hart said he can't "even talk" on the telephone because of the noise. When Chairman Joseph Shea told Hart that the sound levels did not record as "high" and that he was "surprised" by the reading, Hart who said he was in disbelief said he would seek the expertise of the DEP for another sound reading.

Although Sugarman said he was reducing stock piles, ceasing Sunday work and removing equipment from Monti Monument Co., next door, he "apologized" to the abutters for the noise caused by using heavy equipment to do so. He said he had recently purchased a magnet for quieter and quicker excavation but commented that there was "no way we can avoid all noise--it is a scrap yard."

Because of cars and trucks parking on Centre St., the board at Fire Chief Tom Gorman's request, voted to require Sugarman's to hire police detail from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 7 to 11:30 a.m. on Saturdays on a trial basis. If cars are parked illegally they will be ticketed.

The board also voted to make sure Sugarman removes all equipment and dumpsters from the Monti property by June 5.

The board will also request city traffic engineer Jack Gillan to devise a traffic pattern.

Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico said Sugarman's business has grown and the site is "too small". He cited safety hazards in the area with persons driving recklessly in and out of the junkyard while some people are walking along the sidewalk on Centre St.

He suggested a loading zone be constructed on the property and said the board should "revoke Sugarman's license" if all regulations are not followed noting that its "not fair to have to come back here every month".

Olin Taylor said he has seen a "big improvement" in the operation of the yard. He showed an American flag with a plaque depicting veterans from World War II and showed how easily it goes in the ground. He credited Sugarman with giving him scrap metal to fix almost 2,000 such plaques.

Shea said he would mail a set of rules and regulations set by the state for auto graveyards and junkyards to the Sugarman's.

He said the first set of rules was devised in 1918, amended in 1938 and again in 1991.

Shea is planning to meet with Sugarman and the license board on June 10.

Police Chief Francis Mullen was unable to attend Tuesday's meeting and Matt Mulvey was absent because of illness.

$6.5 Million For Sewer Project

The city is planning to begin a $6.5 million sewer improvement project in the northern part of the city this fall.

The project will begin with the replacement of a collapsed main interceptor line and some feeder lines in the Bayfield Road area near Wollaston Beach. City officials and engineers expect the work to be completed in about four years.

The project will include repairs for every major sewer line from the beach to Furnace Brook Parkway as well as smaller lines in an area bounded by the beach, East Squantum Street and Fenno Street.

The goal of the project is to prevent groundwater and rain water from leaking into the area's aging, deteriorating sewer lines instead of flowing into storm drains. The extra water backs up the sewer lines and creates flooding in low-lying residential districts.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said the sewer work has been going on the city since the early 1980s, with North Quincy, Wollaston and Montclair being among the last neighborhoods to receive attention.

The work is the result of a study of the sewer systems completed by Weston & Sampson, a Peabody-based consulting engineering firm, this spring. It will be paid for with no-interest loans from the state, according to Colton.

The commissioner said the work will be done in three stages.

During the first stage, The main interceptors, which carry sewage to a Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) pump station near Southern Artery. The station pumps it to the MWRA's treatment plant on Nut Island.

In the second stage, major sources of rain water inflow will then be located and corrected. Some of the water comes from homes and buildings, where pipes are connected to sewer pipes instead of storm drains, according to Weston & Sampson Senior Engineer Denise Conry.

Finally, the third stage calls for specific lines on various streets to be repaired.

Colton said Bayfield Road is the first priority because it is in such bad shape. The lines are so badly collapsed that three sinkholes have formed, he noted.

Temporary above-ground bypass lines will have to be hooked up while the work is done, he added.

Conry said Weston & Sampson, at the request of Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, will join city officials at neighborhood meetings this summer to explain the project before the work starts.

Marina Bay Nightspot To Increase Capacity

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board gave Ed Kane, owner of Waterworks permission to increase the capacity at Waterworks from 1200 to 1500, play live music until 11 p.m. and recorded music until 12:45 a.m.

At Tuesday's meeting lasting more than three hours with one abutter falling asleep in city hall chambers, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman made the motion subject to having the sound committee continue to meet once a week and to address the issue of handicapped parking after a complaint from a resident.

Seconded by Police Chief Francis Mullen, the vote was unanimous. Joseph Prondak, acting building inspector in place of Matt Mulvey said the sound level should not exceed 95 decibels within

Going Before Council June 16 New Housing Plan For Marina Bay

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council will meet in its capacity as a special permit granting authority June 16 at 7 p.m. to discuss a revised plan for a Marina Bay development proposed by two partners from Thorndike Development in Braintree.

The discussion will take place prior to the council's regularly-scheduled meeting in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

The new 152-unit plan calls for 48 single-family homes, 42 townhouses and 62 residential flats to be built on a 20-acre tract off Victory Road. A pedestrian promenade and a village green also are included in the project, which has been dubbed The Landing at Marina Bay.

A previous Thorndike plan for the site was rejected last year 8-1 by the City Council. Councillor Michael Cheney dissented, saying the city would likely lose a legal battle if the developer decided to appeal.

Although an appeal did follow, Atty. David Mahoney—who represents Thorndike Development partners Lloyd Geisinger, David Mayfield and Abbott Stillman—told councillors the ultimate course of action chosen by the plan's proponents is to reapply with a new proposal, rather than push for the older project through the courts.

"Reapplying is the cleanest, easiest way of doing it," he said.

If the council decides the new plan is a "significant and material change" from the previous Thorndike plan to build 268 condominiums, the matter will be sent to the Planning Board which must give it a positive recommendation.

Cheney, Harold At Odds Over Budget Session

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City Councillors Paul Harold and Michael Cheney are at odds over a May 28 session of the council's Finance Committee regarding Mayor James Sheets' proposed Fiscal Year 1998 municipal budget.

Harold says Cheney

"fast-gaveled" the session, which lasted approximately five minutes. He was upset because there were budget items he wished to discuss with fellow councillors.

But Cheney, the Finance Committee chairman, has told Harold that because the

Foy Reappointed Auditor

The City Council unanimously reappointed Robert Foy as city auditor for another three-year term Monday night.

Foy has served five previous terms as auditor since 1982. Previously, he served as Quincy's treasurer-collector for 10 years after being appointed to the position by then-Mayor Walter Hannon in 1972.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, who nominated Foy for reappointment, described him as "the best friend the Quincy taxpayer has" and someone who is invaluable when it comes to advising the council on financial matters.

"He has served the city very well," said Cahill. "I don't think the city could have a better representative."

The other eight members of the council offered similar praise.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, Foy attended Central Junior High School and is a graduate of Quincy High School and Boston College, where he received a bachelor's degree in accounting. He currently lives in Wollaston.

latter was late for the session, he will have to wait for a wrap-up session on the night of the council's last regularly-scheduled meeting June 16 to discuss his areas of concern.

Harold had requested that another session be scheduled.

The Finance Committee has held a series of sessions to discuss the proposed FY98 budget. Only three of the nine councillors--Cheney, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin--were there for the entire May 28 session, although Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico and Councillor Timothy Cahill arrived before it concluded.

Harold and Council President Peter Kolson arrived at the City Council Chambers after the session's conclusion. The budgets for 12 offices and programs, including those for the mayor's and city's clerk's offices, were approved at the session.

Harold, who had traveled from a meeting in Boston to attend the session, wrote to Cheney in a letter dated May 30:

"This is a follow-up to our conversation after the Finance Committee held May 28, 1997 which was fast-gaveled. I am requesting that you reschedule another budget hearing on another date or allow the City Council and Celebrations portions of the municipal budget to be heard again on June 11. I am interested in discussing the mailings sent out from the City Council office.

"The city clerk informed me that only three councillors participated in the meeting discussion and there should be at least five, and six minutes is not a reasonable length of time to open and conduct a meeting of such importance."

None of the other seven city councillors have voiced such concerns.

Meanwhile, Cheney has told Harold in a response dated Monday that the session started when scheduled and was conducted properly. He also wrote, in part:

"...If you wish to raise questions on the items that you outline in your memo, you are free to do so at the conclusion of the scheduled budget session. It is not uncommon for a councillor who wishes to emphasize a point regarding the budget to go back to that particular item and have questions answered. Therefore, I would suggest that you ask your questions relative to Celebrations and City Council mailings before the budget is passed on the night of June 16.

"...Your comment on fast-gaveling through the scheduled items on May 28 personally upset me when I have bent over backwards in an attempt to accommodate you and other councillors in the process--and to make sure that the process is fair and equitable. However, even after I accommodated you on several occasions so that the budget hearings would not conflict with your personal business, you failed to show up without notice on May 21 and on May 28 you showed up late. You have tried to blame me for something that is untrue and unfounded. Therefore, I would expect a full apology for your inept comment."

The matter was not discussed at the council's meeting Monday night.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said after the meeting that although five members of the council generally are required for meetings to proceed, a smaller group of councillors can take action if no one challenges the declaration of a quorum, which no one did May 28.

The council, which can make reductions in the budget but cannot add to it, must pass it in some form before July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. In late April, Sheets proposed a FY98 budget totaling $149.6 million--which is $6.1 million or 4.3 percent higher than the city's FY97 budget--and his proposed spending plan has survived virtually unscathed through the budget sessions held to date.

The last budget session scheduled before the June 16 wrap-up will be held Wednesday, June 11. Items that were to be discussed at a session originally scheduled for tonight (Thursday), which has been cancelled, also will be taken up on that date.

Some of the city's largest budgets, including those for the police, fire and school departments, have yet to be reviewed.

Raymondi Tells QCBPA: Quincy Point Action Plan Will Revitalize Washington St. Area

The Quincy Point Action Plan will make the Washington St. corridor from Southern Artery to the Fore River Bridge a revitalized major gateway to Quincy, says Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

Speaking Tuesday at a meeting of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, Raymondi said the Quincy 2000 backed project is a cooperative one with input from both businesses and residents.

"It has never been business vs. residents," he said. "It's always been what's best for the community."

"We want to build and improve on what is there now. We don't want to trash it."

Noting that "hundreds of vehicles" travel this section of Route 3A every day, he said: "This is a gateway to Quincy."

Raymondi says he thinks the preliminary phase of the plan study will be ready by July or August.

Neighborhood meetings have been held and another is scheduled for Thursday, June 19 at 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse.

Completing the study, Raymondi said, "will open the door for some community block money."

Raymondi said the plan offers Quincy Point an opportunity to overcome the setbacks of the 1980s. He cited the closing of the Fore River Shipyard and the Procter & Gamble plant as two of them.

Raymondi said the reopening of the shipyard could create as many as 3,000 jobs including shipbuilders and clerical employees.

"They could be earning $20,000 to $150,000,"

Raymondi said. "They have to eat and shop somewhere."

Raymondi said that faith in investing in the area was lost in the 1980s but that is changing. He cited Wal-Mart, Roche Brothers, the Bank of Canton and the Harbor Express as examples.

He also noted that during the 1980s the area was down to one school but that there is a new elementary school under construction which will also result in the restoration of a middle school in Quincy Point.

"We are trying to plan our future and plot a course that is in the best interests of the business community and residents," he said.

Michael Rie of Quincy 2000 said his organization had focused in the beginning on programs in Quincy Center "as the heart of the city."

"But other districts are just important," he added, "to keep the whole city alive."

QUINCY RESIDENTS Elizabeth Diaz, Lisa Snow, Sara DiBona and Crystal Kelly were among the 40,000 participants in the recent 28th annual Walk for Hunger in Boston. Nearly 400 soup kitchens and food pantries will benefit from the pledges raised for the event.

Point Pub License Transfer Approved

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted 3-1 to transfer the liquor license from Point Pub, 536 Washington St. to Stephen F. Barrett.

Voting in favor was Chairman Joseph Shea, Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman. Voting against was acting building inspector Joseph Prondak. (Police chief Francis Mullen was not in attendance).

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman in making the motion with restrictions; that there be no pool tables or dart boards. He said Quincy Point needs a "good family restaurant" and once there are pool tables and dart boards, business diminishes and places have been known to "close down."

Gallahue asked Barrett for an extended menu.

The vote to transfer wipes away the 30 day suspension for failing to handle a disturbance there June 5 while on probation.

Ward 6 Councillor Dan Raymondi tried over and over again to sway the board stating "this is a location that ought not to be a barroom any longer."

One neighbor spoke about Point Pub's alleged drug deals made from cabs stopping in front of the pub.

Raymondi spoke of several businesses closing in the Quincy Point area

What To Do?

The four members of Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation have some thinking to do the next month or so about their political futures.

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court is expected to rule within 30 to 60 days on whether term limits are Constitutional.

If the court says they are, legislative and Constitutional office limits would be eight years, starting back to 1994 when the law went into effect after a close referendum vote in 1993.

It would mean that Senator Michael Morrissey and

Reps. Michael

Bellotti, Ron

Mariano and

would have to leave their respective offices

by the year 2,002.

The question

Quincy Democrats: stay put with limited time

of new opportunities knocking on other doors?

Like county offices

which are not now and will not be affected by term

And especially the sheriff and district attorney offices

now held by Republicans finishing unexpired terms

and who must face

election next year.

A Democrat

running out of

have a good shot at either.

Gov. William

Weld named John

Flood to fill out the sheriff's term of the late Clifford

complete the district attorney's term of William

Delahunt who went off to Washington as a Congressman.

Democrats want those two key county offices

back in their camp. And the local Speculation

Corps is work-

two of the four Quincy

FLOOD

Now, if Bellotti decides to run for auditor, lieutenant governor, or sheriff--chances are he will go for one of them--who would be interested in his state representative seat?

Names already being mentioned as possible candidates are Councillors Bruce Ayers, Mike D'Amico and Pat McDermott and former Councillor Larry Chretien.

And who would run for the Mariano and Tobin seats, if they were open? Not much speculation on that right now. But wait awhile, and names will start popping up.

NO SURPRISE TO anyone, Mayor James Sheets has taken out nomination papers for a fifth term bid.

No major challenger is expected to step forward to take him on. This could be his third re-election without opposition. He already has been unopposed twice which is a city political record.

Only two other mayors in the city's history have been given free rides to re-election: Thomas Burgin and Frank McCauley, one-time each.

LOOKS LIKE Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers will have a third challenger. Joseph Newton of Glover Ave. has taken out nomination papers. Patricia Thorley, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, and Daniel Dykens of Shepard St., Squantum, already had them out.

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE gang surprised Mike McFarland with a cake the other day on his 43rd birthday.

McFarland, looks younger and is a candidate for the school committee, prompting Mayor James Sheets to note: "When you're an elected official, Mike, you'll age faster."

Sheets doesn't look much older than he did when he entered the mayor's office eight years ago, but he did turn 62 on Tuesday. And was surprised with a cake at the Chamber's Business Council "Buttonhole" reception at the Summer House at Marina Bay.

McFarland is leaving his executive secretary post July 1 to return to his restaurant business. And this week he began working with his successor, John Keenan, for an orderly transition. Keenan, incidentally, is the brother-in-law of Tom Koch who formerly was executive secretary and now heads the Park-Forestry-Cemetery departments.

McFarland has his first campaign fundraiser coming up June 16, 6 to 8 p.m., at the Adams Inn, North Quincy. Tickets are $50 and can be had by calling Tom McFarland at 328-3200 or obtained at the door.

MILESTONE: Councillor Dan Raymondi and his wife, Sharon, are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary.

And, did you know they were school sweethearts? They met in the seventh grade at Point Junior High School after he attended the Cranch and Coddington elementary schools and she, the Pollard. They graduated together in the class of 1965 at Quincy High School.

THIS ISA 1940 postcard published by the South Shore Buick Company to mark the opening of their new building on Adams Street in Quincy Square. Sleek looking new Buicks can be seen in the new showroom windows. Founded in 1903, the company is the oldest Buick dealer in the country today.

A message on the back of the postcard claims that Buick outsold all others except the three lowest price cars of the time. Well, if they hadn't increased the price shown here, Buick would likely be number one in sales today.

READERS FORUM

Criticizes Sheriff Regarding Employee Firing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

John Flood was appointed to complete the term of deceased Sheriff Clifford Marshall as a political favor after Flood was previously rejected by the Governor's Council for a judgeship based on his behavior and temperament.

Recently, a hearing was conducted at the request of employees and union officials following a questionable firing practice by the interim sheriff. A due process hearing, conducted by an impartial party, ruled against Flood, because the interim sheriff "denied the benefit of progressive disciplinary policy."

This latest episode exemplifies Flood's problematic behavior and calls into question once again Flood's ability to serve in an elected office and administer an organization that requires a manager's experience, not a defeated politician with a purely political agenda.

This letter supports the call by the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) for a review of the appointed Norfolk County sheriff's actions regarding the firing of county employees in what NAGE Vice President Jack Foley called "inappropriate actions as an administrator." The incumbent Republican appointee's actions have been called "vindictive" by labor supporters. This anarchical approach calls into question the incumbent's motives and the inadequacy of his administrative skills, as well as the public's concern for Flood's of quid pro quo politics.

The final and most ironic slap in the face to working men and women and to the due process system was Flood's comments following the impartial ruling against him, saying he might appeal the decision to the Supreme Court and seek a judge's opinion, further wasting taxpayer money to execute his own agenda.

Flood has yet to declare his candidacy for the post he has been temporarily appointed to. The election for Norfolk County sheriff in 1998 will not only determine the voters' choice on who they wish to represent them, but it will also be a time for voters to send a message against politics as usual. Working men and women should continue to scrutinize Flood's form of political lawlessness.

Says Ayers 'Is Very Good To All The Seniors'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Just wanted to let you and your readers know how good to me Ward 6 Councilor Bruce J. Ayers has been.

My wheelchair had a broken wheel and he fixed it with no charge at all. I live in senior housing and many other residents have different types of equipment they have gotten from Bruce. He is very good to all the seniors.

If you have any sort of problem, he is right there, ready to give a helping hand. He will take wheelchairs, hospital beds and walkers that you are no longer using and give them to those that do need them.

I just wanted to let you know what a good person Bruce is. Quincy should be pleased and proud to have this gentleman as a public official.

BURGIN CALLS FOR PROBE OF FIRE STATION

City Councillor Thomas Burgin called for an investigation of the construction of the $200,000 Houghs Neck fire station that remained unfinished, 12 years since it was built.

Burgin was at the station for ceremonies for the delivery of a new 65-foot aerial ladder truck. While there he was given a tour of the station, including its hose tower. When he asked the captain how it was operating, he was told that it was not operating properly because it was never finished. The cost of the tower was $20,000.

JOSEPH HAROLD

in the position of DAV state adjutant for 40 years.

In establishing the memorial fund, Councillor Harold said there is an identified need for the historical society to serve as a repository for the veterans' artifacts.

"The interest from the fund will provide the monies needed for their proper care, organization and interpretation," said Harold. "It's our way of insuring that future generations will know of the sacrifices made by the veterans of our city in preserving the American form of government and the American way of life."

Co-chairmen of the memorial fund are Harold and Joseph Harold III, president of Sagamore Plumbing of Weymouth.

50 feet of its origin.
Atty. Robert Fleming had asked the board to have music continued until 1 a.m. because of sound levels taken by the sound committee were in compliance with the law. He also asked that the capacity at Waterworks be increased to 1600.
Kane told the board that he had made many changes in the sound system including the distribution with smaller speakers around the area.
He also said that drapes were placed in back of the stage as well as plastic all this helping to lessen the noise level.
Kane told the board he had hired a sound manager equipped with a page number that residents can call when the music was too noisy. He said with the hiring of Phil Cocco, he was "hopeful and confident that we don't have a sound problem any more".

Kane said in addition to the new sound equipment and the studies, at a cost of about $40 to 50,000, he also corrected some of the traffic and parking problems as well as improved the clientele of Waterworks.
Even after hearing this, angry residents still opposed the music and complained endlessly about the noise levels.
Chairman Joseph Shea said the sound committee will continue to monitor noise all summer until Sept. 11.

Atty. Peter Eleey who has an office at Marina Bay said he thought a zoning ordinance stated that a night club such as Waterworks should be under a sound insulated structure. He questioned whether a variance was given for concerts.
City Solicitor Steve McGrath said Eleey was "incorrect" and that the Waterworks was permitted under correct zoning.
Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said he was opposed to live music after 11 p.m.
Shea promised the residents of Marina Bay that he would schedule other meetings for other issues including the parking.

including Proctor & Gamble, Fore River shipyard and some Quincy Point Schools.

He then commented on the great improvements at the point including Roche Brothers, the construction of Wal-Mart, Twin Rivers and the new Marshall School under construction.

He said "things are happening here, we don't want to go back to the old Quincy Point.

While the Pub's attorney Louis Cassis was asking the board to transfer the license to Barrett, Raymond urged the board to reject the application of Barrett and continue with its 30 day suspension.

Atty. Robert Fleming representing Barrett told the board the only issue was the transfer of the business to Barrett saying he "deserves an opportunity". and spoke of Barrett's expertise in the restaurant business. He noted several places of business that Barrett took over successfully saying they were once regarded as "pits".

Barrett told the board that he plans to invest from $40 to $50,000 to upgrade the establishment allowing him to charge more rent to his tenants, and improving the clientele. He also said he would have persons with expertise working the bar who would "dispense alcohol correctly."

In other business, the board granted the Quincy Firefighter's Association permission to conduct a fund raiser by phone to benefit charitable organizations.

New Housing Plan For Marina Bay

mentation before it receives final council approval.

Mahoney said the Conservation Commission and Board of Appeals must also give the project the green light.

Geisinger, whose name is not on the new proposal, sued the city in state Land Court late last summer after his original condominiums plan, The Meadows, was rejected by the council. Although technically the case is scheduled for a trial later this month, Mahoney said the developers will not pursue it if the new proposal is given a hearing.

After the rejection of The Meadows, a second Thorndike plan to build 74 single-family homes was never submitted because of opposition from the Marina Bay Neighborhood Association.

Mahoney said the latest plan, which has been submitted by Mayfield and Stillman under the name M.C. Properties Limited Partnership, is more to the liking of neighborhood residents. Among the reasons he cited: the plan is smaller in scale, there is more parking, and the price structure for the units is higher.

After the council meeting, Ward 6 Councillor

Bruce Ayers agreed that neighbors who attended a neighborhood meeting he held May 22 seemed more satisfied with the new plan.

"It's similar to something you'd see on Nantucket, that type of atmosphere," said Ayers. "I think it's a better project."

Should the council decide to let the project move forward, it must hold a public hearing and vote on it within 65 days after it is sent to the Planning Board.

Mahoney said he is hopeful all necessary permits can be obtained by the fall and construction can begin by next spring.

Mulvey Out On Disability certain medical problems.

Sheets said Joe Prondak, an assistant inspector, has been named interim building inspector in Mulvey's absence. Normally, Assistant Building Inspector Roger Wallin would serve in that capacity but he is on vacation, according to Sheets.

Mulvey's position is slated to be eliminated when the creation of a new department of inspection services takes effect in Fiscal Year 1998, which begins July 1.

Sheets has said Mulvey the option of taking a new title, senior building inspector—a nearly $4,000-a-year pay cut—or applying for the position of director of the inspection services department, which will pay about $9,000 more than Mulvey's current annual salary of $56,238.

The city will advertise the new position as soon as possible, the mayor said.

A GUIDE TO HEART DOCTORS

Nothing is more essential to life, nor more routinely ignored, than the heart. Like breathing, our heartbeat simply goes on. We often aren't even aware of it - until something goes wrong. Then the patient may enter the specialized world of cardiac care. Depending on the nature of an individual problem, a primary care physician may recommend a referral to a cardiologist, who is a doctor trained to treat diseases of the heart and blood vessels. Many cardiologists also practice within subspecialties, such as pediatric cardiology. Some cardiologists may perform certain heart procedures, such as installing heart pacemakers or catheters. Cardiac surgeons have completed additional training in performing surgery on the heart, blood vessels, and lungs. Operations such as bypasses and transplants are among those typically done by cardiac surgeons.

P.S. Heart disease remains the number one killer of adults in the United States. Don't ignore any signs of possible problems.

If you are having heart problems which concern you, consult your physician about whether further consultation might be of benefit. For more information, visit AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, at 700 Congress St., in Quincy or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. You'll find that we care about you and it shows in everything we do.

WBZ Meteorologist Named Flag Day Parade Grand Marshal

The Quincy Flag Day Committee announces that WBZ-TV 4 Meteorologist Ed Carroll will serve as Grand Marshal for the 46th annual Flag Day Parade and celebration.

The parade will be held Saturday, June 14 beginning at 7 p.m. It will be preceded by the unveiling of an Abigail Adams statue at 6 p.m. in front of United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Carroll was born and raised in Quincy before becoming one of New England's most recognizable weathermen. He went through the Quincy Public School system and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1982. He went on to earn a bachelor's degree in meteorology from Plymouth State College. He has served as WBZ-TV 4's meteorologist for the past four years.

The Flag Day Parade will feature bands, floats, color guards, specialty units, and the traditional trademark of the parade, 3,000 flag-waving youngsters. There will be a flag-raising ceremony and a dazzling fireworks display after the parade.

The Flag Day Committee chose Carroll as Grand Marshal not only because he is a Quincy resident who has gone on to a successful career, but he also spends countless hours speaking to students in many of Quincy's schools.

"Ed Carroll exemplifies what we hope all of Quincy's kids will become. He has gone on to success in a field he loves and he shares that success with our children by volunteering his time in our schools. He is a role model for Quincy's children," said Flag Day Chairman Thomas Koch.

This will not be Carroll's first time participating in the Flag Day Parade. As a youngster, he marched in the Flag Day Parade with the Koch Club.

"It will be a fun stroll down memory lane for me," said Carroll. "I look forward to participating in a night of good old-fashioned family fun."

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

HOW HEAVY A BURDEN?

Those who are familiar with the dramatic criminal cases portrayed in the movies and on television know that a conviction is dependent upon the prosecutor being able to prove his or her case "beyond a reasonable doubt." In most civil cases, however, the burden of proof does not have to be so convincing. Plaintiffs in civil cases need only convince a judge or jury that each element of their cases is true "by a preponderance of evidence," meaning only marginally better than fifty percent. A stronger burden of proof is required in a few types of civil cases to the point where "clear and convincing evidence" is needed. Even so, victims of negligence and other torts should not be dissuaded from pursuing their cases in the belief that they need to be overwhelmingly convincing.

Hint: Ask your lawyer to explain the legal elements of your case.

Finding yourself in the middle of a legal battle can be unnerving to say the least, and trying to receive adequate compensation can be a difficult task for someone unfamiliar with the law. The experience and understanding of a trained professional can make all the difference in the achievement of a successful outcome. If you've been injured as the result of someone else's negligence, call 773-2880 to schedule a free consultation. Our office is located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street. There is no fee unless recovery is made on your behalf.

'Buy-A-Bulb' Celebration For Veterans Home June 11

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services (QNHS) will hold a "Buy-A-Bulb" celebration Wednesday, June 11 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the lobby of City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

A donation of $1 will sponsor a tulip or daffodil bulb to be planted in the fall at Quincy's new Veterans Home on Burgin Parkway. The building will be home to eight formerly homeless veterans.

QNHS, a member of the Neighborworks Network, will also display photographs of some of its recent projects. The event is in recognition of "Neighborworks Week," a celebration of national neighborhood revitalization accomplishments.

Free Brochure On Flood Insurance

(NAPS)—Don't get soaked. That's the message of a free brochure aimed at helping to educate consumers that flooding and flash floods occur in every state and that damages are not covered under homeowners insurance policies.

The brochure, offered by the Independent Insurance Agents of America (IIAA), and endorsed by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) was published in response to the threat of devastating floods, like those in the Midwest, Ohio River Valley and other areas of the country.

Called Don't Get Soaked!, the brochure is available nationwide through a toll-free consumer hotline—1-800-261-IIAA—as well as through 28,000 independent insurance agencies.

"With the flooding that occurred as a result of Flood insurance is not covered under homeowners insurance policies. A brochure that offers tips about floods and flood insurance is available free from the Independent Insurance Agents of America.

heavy winter storms in the states of Washington, Oregon and California late last year and now across the midwest, we want consumers to be prepared and understand they have options," said Peter van Aartrijk, Jr., spokesman for

IIAA. "This brochure provides consumers with helpful tips on how to prepare for a flood and what to do after a flood strikes."

When reporting a loss due to flooding or other winter storm damage, consumers are urged to assess their damage and contact their independent insurance agents if loss is severe. "But give your agent a chance to get back with you," noted van Aartrijk. "Meanwhile make any necessary temporary repairs, but don't sign any contracts. Remember, many people in your area are in your shoes, and your claims adjuster will have many claims varying in severity."

Consumers can get other helpful insurance information on IIAA's Web site, the Insurance Information Network, located at www.iaa.org or by calling 1 (800) 221-7917.

BURKE'S SEAFOOD at 61 Billings Rd., North Quincy, is among the businesses that has benefited from the Quincy 2000 Signage Improvement Program.

Quincy 2000 Signage Improvement Program Impacting Business Districts

The Quincy 2000 Signage Improvement Program, now in its third year, has made a noticeable impact upon the appearance of the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy business districts.

Quincy 2000 has improved the appearance of the three areas by helping more than 80 businesses replace or renovate their primary business signs.

"Underlying the success of the business districts is their physical appearance," said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino. "Because first impressions can have a lasting influence, it is essential that a commercial district present an appealing image to potential customers, tenants and investors."

"Rehabilitated buildings, attractive storefronts, enticing window displays and clean streets and sidewalks all help to create an inviting environment where people naturally want to shop and spend time. Many of Quincy 2000's programs are aimed at improving these features."

"Primary business signs play a particularly important role in the appearance of commercial areas," added Program Manager Michael

Rie. "Poorly-designed signs can detract from a business' image and the city's overall appearance. Quincy 2000's Signage Improvement Grant Program encourages well-designed and properly-maintained signs that enhance the unique image of each business and the area. This difference translates into every business's cash register."

The Quincy 2000 Signage Improvement Program offers businesses and property owners a grant of 50 percent of the cost, up to a maximum grant of $1,000 per business, to replace or refurbish existing signs or install new business signs. For business tenants with leases of only one year, the maximum matching grant equals 25 percent of the cost of the sign, up to a maximum of $500.

In exchange for the grant, program participants must maintain their signs in good condition for a period of five years. They must apply for the program prior to constructing and installing the signs.

Other policies and procedures apply to the endeavor, which is funded through the federal Community Development Block Grant Program.

VOLLEYBALL

Both Drop Opening Matches Quincy's And North's Seasons Over After Sectional Losses

By LIAM FITZGERALD

The seasons for the North Quincy High School and Quincy High School boys volleyball teams came to an abrupt conclusion last Friday as both fell in the opening round of the South Sectional tournament.

In their 3-2 loss at third-seeded Newton South, the sixth-seeded Red Raiders (13-8) had a golden opportunity to clinch the match but watched it slip through their fingers.

Leading the match, 2-1, North Quincy took a 14-13 lead in the fourth game and held serve, needing just a point to bring home the victory. However, Newton South rallied for three points to win the game, 16-14, and also captured the fifth game to clinch the match.

"Either team could have won, it was that close," said North Quincy coach John Perkins. "Neither team led by more than a few points at any time in the match. We had a chance to clinch it in the fourth game, but we didn't put them away and it ended up costing us in the end."

North lost the two-hour, 45-minute marathon, 11-15, 15-13, 15-12, 14-16, 10-15, despite outstanding performances by senior captain Mike Johnston (27 kills, 15 blocks) and seniors Matt Bromley (19 kills, 22 blocks) and Nick Shea (eight kills, 11 blocks). Eddie Tan (15 service points) also played well for the Red Raiders.

In the first game, Newton South came out hitting, but North was up to the challenge with 23 blocks. Pacing the Raiders were Johnston and Jimmy Wong (six blocks apiece), while Shea and Bromley combined for eight blocks.

The hitting and blocking of Johnston (nine kills, five blocks) and Bromley (seven kills, 10 blocks) paced the Raiders to wins in the second and third games. Sophomore Al King came off the bench and collected three important service points in the third game.

Johnston (eight kills, three blocks), Shea (four blocks), Lewis Man (four service points) and James Cheung (three service points) were the leaders for North in the fourth game.

The fifth and deciding game went back and forth, with Newton holding an 11-10 advantage. Unfortunately for the visitors, Newton reeled off four unanswered points to win the match. Bromley (six blocks) and Johnston (four kills) sparked North in the finale.

"They left nothing on the floor," said Perkins. "They played the best they could, like they did all season. It was a great season with a terrific effort throughout. We're losing nine seniors, all of whom are heading to four-year colleges, and I'm very proud of all of them."

The Red Raiders were well-represented on the Old Colony League All-Star team as middle hitters Johnston and Bromley, outside hitter Shea and senior setter Jerik Warrick made the squad. Johnston, who will attend Eastern Nazarene College along with Warrick, was selected as the OCL Most Valuable Player, the first North boys volleyball player ever to receive that honor.

"Mike missed some time with an injury, so receiving this award is a tribute to his tireless effort and strong performance," said Perkins.

Meanwhile, the seventh-seeded Presidents had their hands full with No. 2 seed Greater New Bedford Vocational, losing 3-0, on the road. The Presidents lost, 12-15, 12-15, 7-15, and finished the season at 11-8.

With the victory, Greater New Bedford improved to 19-2.

Quincy coach Tom Henderson cited blocking difficulties and inconsistent offense as the major reasons for the visitors' downfall.

"We're not a big team, so blocking has been a problem all year, and a strong team is going to take advantage of that," said Henderson. "We also didn't get as consistent an offensive performance as we needed against this team. The games were all pretty close, but we could not get enough sustained offense."

Seniors Geoff King (seven kills) and Don McCarthy (five kills) and junior setter Jared Downey (14 assists, two service aces, 11 digs) provided the highlights for Quincy.

The Presidents were without the services of Ed Smith, who was away for the week.

"Not having Ed changed the way we substituted, and moved some players into new positions they weren't familiar with," said the Quincy coach.

Reflecting on the season, Henderson regretted the season finale loss to North Quincy, which may have resulted in the Presidents' lower seed.

"If we won that last match over North, the seeding may have been reversed, and maybe we'd be the sixth seed," he said. "All in all, I thought we had a good season and if a couple matches went the other way, things would have been different."

The Presidents lost five seniors to graduation, including four-year varsity players McCarthy and Geoff King. Also moving on are Matthew Chan, Paul Pitts-Dilley and Domenic Catrambone.

"The seniors represented themselves, the city and the school very well all year," said Henderson. "I'm very pleased with their performances. We were in every match but a few, so we were competitive, and that's all you can ask for as a coach."

Legion Baseball

Morrisette's Success Rate Depends Upon Its Hitting

Following last year's quick exit from the American Legion playoffs, Morrisette's earliest departure this decade, second-year head coach Mark Kelleher is guardedly optimistic about this season's squad.

"I think our pitching and defense will be there, but the hitting is my main concern," he said. "We have to hit the ball and score some runs, or we won't be successful. There are a lot of strong teams in our division, and if we want to win it, we need to put some runs on the board."

"Until we get out there and face live pitching, we're not sure what to expect. They've been working hard at practice and we hope it pays dividends in the games. If our offense comes through, our pitching stays healthy and our defense is strong, we should be in good shape come playoff time."

Morrisette was scheduled to kick off its season Tuesday at West Roxbury, but that game and yesterday's (Wednesday's) contest at Randolph were postponed due to the high school baseball tournament. Friday's game at 5:45 p.m. at Cohasset is still a possibility, depending on how North Quincy, B.C. High and other teams fare in the tournament. The postponed games will be made up at a later date.

Next week, Morrisette is slated to play three home games at Adams Field: Tuesday, June 10 at 8 p.m. against Milton; Thursday, June 12 at 8 p.m. against rival Quincy; and Sunday, June 15 at 7:30 p.m. against Canton.

Leading an impressive pitching staff are Ryan Herlihy, an 18-year-old North Quincy High School senior, and 17-year-old Mark Kelly, a junior at Quincy High School. Both pitchers, back for another season, have thrown the ball well for their respective high school squads and will be relied upon for strong outings this summer.

Doing most of the closing for Morrisette will be Chad Feetham, an 18-year-old back for another season. Rob Celata, a 15-year-old freshman pitcher at North Quincy High, will pitch and get some at-bats at designated hitter, and Sean Manning, a 16-year-old, will pitch and also play in the infield and outfield. Kelleher said all the pitchers will see action in the outfield.

Catching these hurlers will be 18-year-old Mike Russo and Bill Walker, a 16-year-old. Stephen Maze, a 17-year-old, may also do some of the catching.

Going around the infield from left to right (with ages in parentheses), Morrisette's third basemen will be Steve Clark (17) and Paul Marnikovic (18). Marnikovic and Eric Fagan (17) will share shortstop duties, while Eric Wirtz (18), Chris Bregoli (16) and Maze will man the second base position. Over at first base, Jim Cunio (17) and John Sullivan (17) will see significant playing time. Russo, Marnikovic, Fagan, Wirtz, Maze and Cunio return from last year's team.

Kelleher added that Wirtz will serve as an overall utility infielder, playing second, short and third when called into duty.

"I expect all the infielders to be able to rotate, to be versatile and know all the positions," he said.

In the outfield, Brian Beaton (18) will play center field, flanked by fellow returnees Matt McLoughlin (17) in left field and Ray Cattaneo (17) in right field.

Many New Faces Key To Quincy Improvement

By LIAM FITZGERALD

With a 7-13 record a year ago, the Quincy American Legion baseball team more than doubled the win total of the previous two seasons combined.

While the coaching staff and players are proud of that accomplishment, by no means are they satisfied to stand pat and repeat last year's performance.

"That was a positive step, especially since we turned it around late and won our last four games," said Quincy head coach Larry Taglieri, beginning his second year at the helm. "But we're not satisfied with a 7-13 record. We're looking to improve our squad in every facet and hopefully it will show in the win column."

Quincy was slated to start its season Monday at Weymouth, but that game and yesterday's (Wednesday's) contest against Milton were postponed due to the high school baseball tournament. Quincy's game against Canton Friday at 8 p.m. remains a possibility, depending on how Canton fares in the tournament. The postponements will be made up at a later date.

Next week, Quincy plays three games at Adams Field: Monday, June 9 at 8 p.m. against Randolph; Thursday, June 12 at 8 p.m. against rival Morrisette; and Friday, June 13 at 8 p.m. against Cohasset.

Taglieri and his coaching staff—second-year coaches Wayne Chambers (pitching coach) and John Cristiani (outfield coach) and first-year coach Mark Chambers (infield coach)—will have their work cut for them with 11 new players joining six back from last season.

As long as the players are aware of how Quincy Legion works, said Taglieri, the transition should be smooth.

"With all the new players, it's important they know how we operate here," said Taglieri. "There will definitely be an adjustment period, as many come from different programs, but for the summer, we're a group focused on Quincy Legion baseball and that will make us a team."

Among the returning players is Mike Eddy, the lone 18-year-old back for another campaign. A pitcher and right fielder, Eddy is joined by 17-year-old returnees Pat McGann (second base), Jon Caliri (outfield and pitcher), Dennis Palardy (third base and pitcher) and Stephen Wiltshire (first base). Sean Sperber, a 16-year-old catcher and pitcher, returns for his second season.

Playing for the Legion squad for the first time are 18-year-olds Andrew Byrne (shortstop) and Greg Edgar (catcher and first base), along with 17-year-olds Mike Clark (second base, pitcher, outfield), Bryan Linsky (third base and pitcher), Greg Peck (center field), Dan Toland (outfield and pitcher), Matt Kane (outfield) and Adam Delorey (catcher, first base, third base). Three 16-year-olds round out the Quincy roster: Jason Cuddyer (catcher and infield), William Tracey (outfield and pitcher) and Nathan DoRosario (outfield).

Offensively, Quincy must replace its top four

Win Over B-R Highlight Of Presidents' Campaign

Mark Kelly made his last start for the Quincy High School baseball team a memorable one, going the distance and driving in the winning run in Quincy's 6-5 triumph over Bridgewater-Raynham last Tuesday.

With the game tied 5-5 in the bottom of the seventh, Kelly doubled to score Steve Clarke with the winning run to defeat B-R, the first-place team in the Old Colony League.

"He (Kelly) was the hero of that game," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "He pitched a real strong game, then got the winning hit to culminate a good career at Quincy High. It would be nice to have him back, but we wish him good luck in his future endeavors."

A junior, Kelly received early acceptance to Johnson & Wales University, which he will attend next fall. Sylvia added that Kelly and senior catcher Mike Russo, who went four for four against B-R, were named to the OCL All-Star team.

"Mike deserves recognition for his efforts this year and throughout his career," said Sylvia. "He was a good captain who will be remembered here for a long time to come."

Juniors Stephen Wiltshire and Tony Staffier also collected hits in the B-R game.

The Presidents (4-16) concluded their season last Wednesday with a 10-7 loss at Brookline. Dennis Palardy started for Quincy and was relieved by Tom Daley, who kept the Presidents in the game. Kelly and Daley homered in the finale and Staffier also hit the ball well, said Sylvia.

Reflecting on the season, Sylvia said he hopes the returning players will work in the off-season to improve and come back ready to play.

"To be competitive in this league, a lot of serious challenges need to be met," he said. "We weren't a legitimate competitor this year, but if every kid works on improving his overall game, there's no reason we shouldn't win 10 or more games next season. Anything less would be unacceptable."

Sylvia wished to thank Eric Buckley, a former Quincy High baseball player under Sylvia who volunteered his time as an assistant coach this season.

"He did an outstanding job for us," said Sylvia. "He's a real good kid, a good coach and the kids like him. It's kids like him that make you feel good as a coach, because they're giving back to the program. He volunteered to help out, and I appreciate all he's done for us."

Raiders In Tourney For First Time This Decade

By LIAM FITZGERALD

After losing six of seven to start the season, the North Quincy High School baseball team made a 180-degree turnaround, winning nine of its last 13 to clinch its first state tournament berth this decade.

The Red Raiders (10-10 overall, 9-7 Old Colony League), played a preliminary tournament game yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. on the road against Stoughton. A victory would send North to play at Plymouth North (15-5) Friday at 4 p.m.

North head coach Dave Perdios, in his second year at the helm, praised the Raiders for keeping their spirits up and battling to turn the season around.

"The kids never gave up, never stopped hustling and trying to win every ball game," he said. "They earned this tournament game, and I'm very proud of them. They're to be commended for their effort."

"It's been a great year, and this is a great step towards improving the program. It's been so long since North has been on the map in baseball, and I'm happy to be a part of it."

Perdios was especially proud of the Raiders' four seniors—Ryan Herlihy, Eric Wirtz, Brian Beaton and Mike Sampson—who played two years for him at the JV level and now have played two years for him on the varsity.

"I'm happy for the four seniors who I've coached all four years at North," he said. "All four of them have done a nice job and it's fitting that they get to play in the tournament before their careers are over."

North's opponent in the preliminary round, Stoughton (12-6), is no stranger to the Raiders. Back on April 21 at Adams Field, Stoughton's offense and pitching carried the visitors to a 7-0 non-league triumph.

Perdios realizes that if the Raiders are to defeat Stoughton, they must get a solid start from Herlihy (6-2, 3.20 ERA), timely hitting and strong defense.

"Stoughton hit us real good that day, so for us to win we need to pitch better and get some runs on the board early," he said. "The key will be getting their starting pitcher out of the game. We also played good defense that game, which I hope will be the case again this time around."

To advance to the tournament, North had to win its last two games, both at home, against Taunton and South Boston last week. The Raiders' bats were alive in both games as the topped Taunton, 11-4, and blanked South Boston, 12-0, in the regular season finale.

"We hit the ball well in those games and put a lot of runs on the board, to give our pitchers something to work with," said Perdios.

Freshman Rob Celata threw six strong innings and picked up the win against Taunton, and Herlihy blanked South Boston for his sixth victory of the season.

South Shore Softball Standings

The following are the standings of the Boston South Shore Softball League, which plays its games in Quincy:

380 (4-4); Louis Cafe (3-4); Hofbrau (2-4); Noll Electric (0-6); J.T.S. (0-0).

hitters in the lineup—Justin Elwood, Malachy Higgins, Kevin Nichol and Ken Hanaford—all of whom made significant contributions to last year's squad.

On the mound, Quincy lost pitchers John Chagnon and John Duffy, two valuable hurlers a year ago. Taglieri said he expects to use a number of different pitchers, with Eddy and Palardy starting and Toland possibly getting the starting nod as well. Clark, Caliri, Linskey and Tracey will all likely see action on the mound in 1997.

"Wayne Chambers has been doing a great job with the pitchers," said Taglieri. "He works them hard and helps them improve all aspects of their pitching motion. It's going to come down to who's pitching well. We need good pitching if we're going to improve. If the pitching is solid, and we hit and play defense, there's no reason we won't fare better this year."

What has impressed Taglieri about the entire squad is its determination to work hard and its enthusiasm about the program's goals.

"This is a great group of kids we have here," said Taglieri. "They're all working hard, fighting for starting spots. The practices have been very competitive, and we'll be looking for them to be versatile and play a number of positions."

"You never know when you might be needed to fill in somewhere on a given night. It's going to be tough to select the starters for the season opener. We're all looking forward to the season, because there's nothing better than playing ball at Adams Field on a summer evening."

Editor's note: Last Sunday, the Quincy Legion team raised $1,000 for The Make A Wish Foundation by participating in a 3.1 mile run. Pledge sheets were handed out to the players, who raised money for the charity. The run was organized by the president of Network Plus, Rob Hale. Network Plus, a telecommunications business on Willard St., is a sponsor of the Quincy Legion Baseball Program.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your creative powers are at a peak and should be exploited to their best advantage this week. However, later in the week, it's best to avoid mixing business with pleasure. By week's end, you're really not up for company.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Be careful that you don't overindulge in food or drink this week. Through some meditation, you gain valuable insights about your career. Let your intuition and instinct guide you instead of your fears.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're working hard to solve that domestic concern to your satisfaction. However, you need the cooperation of everyone in the family. Time alone later in the week refreshes you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A close friend is depressed and is dragging you down this week. You need to be more objective and keep away from your friend for a while. A business partner has good news over the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although you're tempted to spend, spend, spend, you'll be left with nothing but regrets. Social activities later in the week, in the form of visiting or entertaining, jazz things up for you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) If you can take some time to relax, you'll come up with inspired business ideas early in the week. Keep your new ideas to yourself for a while, though, because feedback likely would be off the mark.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You know a bargain when you see one, and what you're considering is, as you suspect, overpriced. Try to come up with a new career plan. Someone close needs reassurance.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before going ahead and signing on the dotted line, be sure you have all the details. Some deals have far-reaching consequences. The focus this weekend is on your home and family.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A career or personal matter has you all tangled up this week, leading to a lack of concentration and carelessness on the job. Take a break from all the worry if you can and relax.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're determined to have a good time while socializing this week, but you really don't have the money for it. It's best to put those plans on hold for a while. Guard against becoming overtired this weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who has offended you has done so unintentionally. However, you need to clear the air to avoid hard feelings. That leaves you relieved and restores the relationship.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) While out shopping this week, you'll find just the right gift for that special person's special day. A relative has good advice about a business matter. The weekends finds you moody.

A Thought For The Week

Sometimes we take credit for being patient when we are simply putting off doing something unpleasant... Sometimes we think we are being patient when, in reality, we are being indifferent...

SCOTT DEWARE

"Patience is a two-sided coin. If patience is to be a virtue it must be employed in the willingness to obtain all the facts, to deduce from the facts what should be done, if anything, and to act in time and not too early or too late. If patience is merely to be used as an excuse for inaction, and if you don't do anything but wait and you wait too long and the opportunity is past - or if you convert it into lethargy or inaction, then that is the other side of the coin."... David Saroff

Patience is a virtue few of us possess all of the time, but all of us need. It's too bad that many times it takes such hard work to acquire it!...

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

JUST WHAT IS "SEVERE?"

Many car owners ignore the severe maintenance schedule intervals in their automobile's owner's manuals in the belief that their driving styles do not qualify them for the more frequent maintenance recommendations.

The fact is, however, that the "normal" driving that many of us find ourselves doing actually qualifies as severe. This condition includes such behavior as extended driving in stop-and-go traffic, undertaking many successive short trips, driving in dusty conditions, extended high-speed driving and running the engine under a heavy load (towing). Anyone who subjects his or her car to these types of use should subscribe to the more frequent severe-driving maintenance schedule in the owner's manual.

HINT: Subjecting a car to long periods of highway driving does not qualify as severe because a fully warmed-up engine driving at highway speeds is operating at peak efficiency and is practically wear-free.

Towing a trailer qualifies as severe driving conditions and requires shorter maintenance periods. New Massage Center Opens Meridians Center for Massage recently opened in the Morrison House, 165 Washington St., just outside of Quincy Center.

Meridians is a comprehensive center for body and mind wellness, offering Swedish and sports massage in addition to a wide variety of services and classes.

Massage is increasingly being used either alone or in conjunction with chiropractic or physical therapy to alleviate pain and chronic tension. Because of the many health benefits of massage therapy, including improved circulation and increased relaxation, many people receive regular treatments to enhance physical performance or as part of a healthy lifestyle.

"We really saw a need for a massage center on the South Shore," said Meridians Director Karen Lungari, former owner of Embellish in Quincy. "People are telling us over and over again that they need one place where they can have massage or acupuncture or reflexology, for example, where they can learn about other related modalities."

In addition to massage, Meridians offers acupuncture, reflexology, energy balancing techniques, mineral treatments, biofeedback, breathwork, aromatherapy, hypnotherapy, and Tui Na (Chinese) massage.

Classes on such varied topics as stretching, nutrition, menopause, introductions to hypnosis and energy work, and more are also offered.

Appointments can be made by calling Meridians at 471-5600, Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Council Has Concerns Over Needed Bridge Redesign Old Colony Line Causes Delay For Concourse

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Plans to redesign the Quincy Center Concourse bridge are expected to delay the construction of the downtown roadway by up to three months, city officials said Tuesday.

The City Council will discuss the plans at its June 16 meeting at the request of Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, chairman of the council's Downtown Committee. The subject is scheduled to be taken up at 6:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

McDermott voiced concerns this week regarding what he called a lack of information about how the redesign work will affect the cost and construction of the project. He said other council members, including Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin and Councillor-at-Large Paul Harold have similar concerns.

Meanwhile, Mayor James Sheets and Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, who estimated the work will take two to three months, say it is nothing to be concerned about.

The work is necessary because the MBTA grade for the Old Colony Railroad line, which will run parallel to the T's Red Line in the downtown and is slated to begin operation in the fall, is three inches higher than the grade the city requested. The state-funded Old Colony line will run from Boston to Plymouth.

The concourse's pedestrian-vehicle bridge, located near Burgin Parkway, will run over the Old Colony line. The bridge is part of the first phase or "west link" of the concourse, which will link Burgin Parkway and Hancock Street. The second phase or "east link" will continue from Hancock to Route 3A.

Sheets and Colton said Tuesday the MBTA had agreed, before the Old Colony tracks were laid, to a grade of 16 1/2 feet clearance. For unknown reasons, they said, the grade is three inches too high.

The mayor said any changes to the Old Colony project now would result in a delay in its operation. It makes more sense, he said, to change the concourse design plans.

"It's a temporary problem, not a major problem," said Sheets. "It's easier to make the adjustment in the (concourse) design than it is to adjust the tracks. I certainly don't consider it, in any way, shape or form, to be a major setback."

Colton said the redesign work, which will be done by Earth Tech Infrastructure Services in Concord, will cost about $50,000 to $60,000 and bring the total design cost to $950,000. The city is responsible for that cost but has applied for state reimbursement, he noted.

Colton added that the total construction cost of the Quincy Center Concourse, which is the state's responsibility, will jump from $8.6 million to $9 million.

The commissioner said because of the redesign work, the concourse might not open until late 1998 or early 1999. Initially, mid-1998 was the goal, he said.

McDermott, for his part, said he wants more information about the cost and timetable of the plan. He said he has spoken to fellow councillors, downtown business representatives, residents, and others who feel the same way.

"There's a lot of concern out there," he said.

Told about Colton's estimate on the cost of the

The first forum will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall, 1305

Hancock St., Quincy Center. The second will be Monday, June 23 at 7 p.m. in the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall, 5 Hollis Ave., North Quincy.

All Quincy residents are encouraged to attend.

Sugarman's Removes Equipment As Promised

A promise by Steven Sugarman, owner of Sugarman's Junkyard to remove all equipment and trailers by June 5 from the Monti Monument Co., next door has been kept according to Joseph Shea, chairman of the Quincy License Board. The only equipment left is being used by Monti's, Shea said. Last month when Sugarman appeared before the board, he heard a rash of complaints from neighbors about cars and trucks being parked on the sidewalk and at Monti's. Also loud noise from early morning deliveries.

The board told Sugarman that he would have to hire a police detail and report back to the board June 10. However, Sugarman was unable to attend Tuesday's because of a doctor's appointment. Shea told the board at Tuesday's meeting that in addition to the moving of the equipment, a patrolman has been on duty to make sure "everyone does their business inside the property and not on Centre Street."

Shea said the city's traffic engineer Jack Gillon is devising a traffic plan whereby Sugarman would decrease his junk pile in front of the business and all trucks and carriage trade will be able to get off the street to make deliveries.

Shea said he didn't know exactly how long a patrolman would be on duty and said maybe the detail would be "sporadically".

Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico told the board he was still hearing complaints from neighbors about cars being parked on the sidewalk.

At the last meeting, Sugarman told the board the company plans to relocate outside of Quincy, but would continue to operate in Quincy on a smaller scale.

Shea read a letter from Lesko Kelly Associates, realtors, indicating sites available for the relocation listed in Dorchester, Avon and Weymouth. They plan to meet with Sugarman June 20.

$30,000 Awarded For DARE Summer Camp

Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke has announced the awarding of a $30,000 for the funding of a DARE (Drug Awareness Resistance Education) Summer Camp at Pageant Field in Quincy.

Locke made the announcement Tuesday during a check presentation ceremony at the Quincy Police Department. The funding has been awarded to DARE by the Department of Public Safety.

Six communities—Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Randolph, Avon and Stoughton—will participate in the program, which is designed to teach violence prevention and the dangers of drug, tobacco, and alcohol use among young people.

More than 100 youths will attend the camp programs, which will run July 15 through 22. In addition to leadership, anti-violence, drug and tobacco programs, they will participate in trips to Fenway Park, Georges Island and Water Country.

Locke said the new endeavor is an important one. "I am proud to participate in the partnership between law enforcement, educators, and local officials to continue the teachings of the DARE Program during the summer months," he said. "This grant will permit us to reinforce the message of DARE in a positive, healthy, safe and fun environment."

"It is essential that we continue DARE beyond the core fifth grade curriculum and this summer camp program is an essential component of that effort."

Locke added that funding for DARE camp programs in other Norfolk County cities and towns will be announced in the near future.

Original Owners Will Re-Open Napoli Cafe

The Napoli Cafe, 1570 Hancock St., which has been closed since March will re-open with its original owners Guy and Josephine Consoli.

The Quincy License Board at Tuesday's meeting granted a request for a common victualer license to the Consoli's owners of the building.

The Consoli's were in business at that site from 1961-1987 until they moved to the Cape.

At the present time, they own a restaurant in West Roxbury but are coming back to Quincy where they expect to spend upwards of $100,000 for renovation and all new equipment at the Napoli.

Plans, which are in accord with Quincy 2000 will feature a new front and signage.

The seating will be cut from 60 to 48 seats.

The restaurant, which will keep its name and menu will still serve pizza, cold and hot subs and combination foods and will be open from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week.

A Graduation Footnote

Don't know if you noticed, but there was an historic footnote to the Quincy and North Quincy High School graduations this week.

For the first time, all class officers and the valedictorians from the two schools were girls. All 10.

That's unusual. At one time, boys seemed to have the edge or the class officers were pretty much evenly split between boys and girls.

But this year, it was an all-female cast.

Turn to pages 18 and 19 and you'll find photos of:

Quincy High School: Erin Flaherty, president; Jen Calkins, vice president; Jill Fishman, secretary; Angela Hogrell, treasurer and Felicia Tam, valedictorian.

North Quincy High School: Bridget Shaughnessy, president; Patricia Christello, vice president; Tina Katsarikas, secretary; Courtney Mitchell, treasurer and Kosanna Poon, valedictorian.

Felicia Tam, by the way, will be entering Stanford in the fall where she will be a classmate of Chelsea Clinton.

Congratulations, ladies, all 10 of you.

TIM CAHILL will make it official Tuesday, June 17: he is a candidate for re-election as city councillor.

Cahill will make the announcement at a 6 to 8 p.m. fund-raiser at the Common Market, Willard St. Tickets are $25 and may be obtained at the door or by calling 328-6699.

CAHILL

FORMER MAYOR Frank McCauley is out knocking on doors and collecting signatures on his nomination papers for city councillor at-large.

McCAULEY

"The reaction has been good," he says. "It's nice to be remembered."

McCauley has obtained "about 500" signatures so far. Only 50 are needed.

KEVIN COUGHLIN has set the stage to make his bid for a school committee seat.

Coughlin, who is assistant chief probation officer at Middlesex First Probate Court, checked to be sure there would be no conflict in running for elective office. He now has nomination papers out and resigned as president of the non-political Montclair-Wollaston Association. He's planning a fund-raiser for later this month.

COUGHLIN

ANOTHER CANDIDATE is about to enter the school committee race. Tracy Wilson of Tiirrell St., North Quincy, says she will soon take out nomination papers and make an official announcement. She is in the labor/employment field and will be admitted to the Massachusetts Bar June 20.

AND, SPEAKING OF school committee candidates that fund-raiser for Mike McFarland is Wednesday, June 18, 6 to 8 p.m., at the Adams Inn, North Quincy. Not June 16 as reported here last week. Sorry about that, Mike.

McFARLAND

CONGRESSMAN JOE KENNEDY, who is expected to run for governor but has had his political ups and downs lately, will have an up here Monday. A fundraiser for him is set for 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Ciro's at Marina Bay. Tickets are: $125 (donor) and $200 (sponsor).

Committee members include James Schlager of Salem St., West Quincy and Christine Montillio, wife of Quincy baker George Montillio.

SAD NOTE: St. Anthony's Festival, a fun tradition at St. John's Church for 21 years, has come to an end. The committee recommended that it be discontinued because of a lack of needed volunteers and the rising cost of vendors.

RECENT ITEMS HERE about the Pollard School and Quincy Point bring this note from Jennie Emanuele Inglis of Forestdale Drive, Halifax:

"Thanks for the memories!"

"Being brought up in Quincy (Quincy Point and not far from you) I went to the Pollard School and my husband to the Washington.

"I had all those teachers and they were good teachers, exceptional is the word for them. I can vouch for everything Jim Hardie wrote. (Incidentally, he was in my class.)

"In his letter he brought back so many memories of growing up in Quincy Point. When the Pollard School was being torn down I went and got one of the bricks which I treasure.

"Keep up the good work on your article 'Sunbeams.' Quincy is a great city and you are certainly putting it on the map. I will never forget my years in Quincy Point. Again I'll say 'Thanks for the memories.'

"P.S. I was also at the stadium and saw Dot Lamour that day, too. If the camera moved a little more I would have been in the picture."

PAUL FELDMAN, who got his newspaper start here at The Sun, is making a name for himself at the Los Angeles Times.

FELDMAN

Feldman, who has won previous recognition, was a member of the reporting team that recently won a first place Greater Los Angeles Press Club-Southern California Journalism award for investigative reporting.

Feldman is the son of Marion Feldman Needel and the late Jason Feldman, who, was active in the downtown Quincy business community and served as president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association before his death in 1980.

Paul's wife, Iris, is an award-winning photographer with the LA Times. They have two children, Amanda, 4 1/2 and Janna, 1 1/2.

EILEEN COHEN, former executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, is now living in Laguna Niguel, Calif. and working there as a property manager.

Her daughter and son-in-law Dona and Charles Simonson recently presented her with her third grandchild, Nicole Louise.

And she is awaiting news from her son, Mark, in Florida about a fourth due this month. Congratulations, Granny.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1916 real photo postcard view of the old West Quincy railroad depot on the Granite Branch of the Old Colony Railroad. The depot was located on the corner of California Ave. and Willard St., now the site of Biondi's Service station across from Curry Hardware. This view is from west of the tracks. On the right can be seen a flatbed railroad car loaded with granite and a horse and wagon going north on Willard St. The Granite Branch also had stations at Montclair and East Milton Square. Service on this line was discontinued in 1940 and the railroad right-of-way through this area became the route of the Southeast Expressway.

Joe Harold 'A Tireless Advocate' For Veterans And Their Families

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In the shadow of the imposing Doughboy Statue on the grounds of the Quincy Historical Society housed in the Adams Academy, a ceremony to establish The Joseph R. Harold Sr. Memorial Fund was held in honor of that tireless advocate of the veteran and his family, the late Joe Harold.

The beautiful sunshine-drenched afternoon, two days after the 53rd anniversary of the D-Day Normandy Invasion, made a fine setting for the attendees, among which was the Color Guard of the George F. Bryan Post #613 of the VFW, led by Present Post Commander Ed McCarthy and four past Post commanders.

The mayor of Quincy, the Honorable James Sheets, City Councillor Paul Harold--son of the Scholarship Fund's namesake, Joe Harold Sr.--and other dignitaries made a few uplifting remarks and reminded us all of the significance of upcoming Flag Day and July 4 commemorations.

The Bryan Post and other veterans' organizations concur with the speakers, as they cherished the memory of Joseph R. Harold Sr., a man who devoted the bulk of his waking hours on behalf of his fellow veterans and their families. Requisite In Pace.

Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Family Day 'Great Success'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I want to take this opportunity to publicly acknowledge those who helped support the second

It was a great success in terms of the no cost, family fun provided for several hundred parents and children who attended to mark the installation of new toilet equipment secured by Councillor Pat McDermott.

'Old Kneel Buster' To Be Blasted

By PAUL HAROLD

"Old kneel buster," a 100-ton rock located 40 feet north-east off the Quincy Yacht Club floats, was scheduled for demolition this week.

The McDonald Blasting Company of Boston was hired to remove what has been a hazard to navigation for the 76 years that the QYC had been in operation. At low tide it showed two feet above the water, while at high tide it was hidden just below the water line.

One old timer said, "If I had a dollar for every boat that scraped that rock I'd be a millionaire."

NEW HAVEN RR ENDS STATION TICKET SALES

The New Haven Railroad announced that as part of a money savings plan, it would end sale of tickets at four Quincy stations: Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston and Quincy Adams. The stations would, however, still be open for waiting passengers.

Patrons who used "commutation" tickets could buy tickets at South Station, while infrequent travelers could buy their tickets from conductors.

DEWOLFE PAYS SURPRISE VISIT TO SCHOOL

He also visited the Wollaston home of Barbara DeWolfe, whose father started him on his career and gave him his own name as a stage name.

Laura's Pork Chops

I guess I've cooked pork chops every way from frying, barbecuing, stuffed and sometimes in tomato sauce.

Our daughter Nancy has been raving over her neighbor Laura's recipe for pork chops and after trying them, I have to say we all agreed.

Laura's Pork Chops

6 pork chops (medium to thick) french dressing (you can use fat free) corn flakes crumbs mixed with seasoned bread crumbs

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Coat each chop generously with the dressing and then the crumbs.

Place in a slightly greased baking pan side by side and bake covered for 30 minutes and uncovered for 10 minutes. This process really tenderized the chops. We enjoyed them along with butternut squash and broccoli spears.

A Painful Rugby Injury Leads To Career Decision

Dr. Robert Clark Opens Quincy Chiropractic Office

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Dr. Robert J. Clark of Clark Chiropractic, 40 Willard St., Quincy, feels your pain--literally.

A talented rugby player for nearly 20 years who played for the U.S. national team, Dr. Clark suffered an injury during a match in 1991 that directly influenced his decision to become a chiropractor.

"I took a blow to the back of the head, and felt pain shoot down my arm," said Dr. Clark, a Milton native who competed in football and wrestling at Milton High School. "I also had a loss of feeling in my left hand as a result of the injury. I didn't want to use medication or have any medical procedures, but I didn't know what else to do.

"I decided to see a chiropractor, who did a very good job at relieving the pain. I was amazed at how good I felt and how much more energy I had after the treatment. I recognized the healing and wellness aspect of chiropractic and saw it as a way I could help people improve the quality of their lives. It just seemed like a meaningful goal for me."

Later that same year, Dr. Clark and his wife, Cathy, and their daughter, Vicki, packed up their belongings and moved to Marietta, Ga., while Dr. Clark trained at Life College, the largest chiropractic college in the world.

A June 1996 graduate of Life College, Dr. Clark decided to return to his roots and in April, he opened his own chiropractic offices in Quincy, just over the Milton line. "I grew up in Milton and always liked the South Shore, and I wanted to come back and help people benefit from chiropractic work," he said. "I met Tom Feenan, the owner of the building, and really liked the location and accessibility.

"It's a nice, comfortable environment and a good size (1300 sq. ft.). I'm real happy with where we're at, and we're growing rapidly."

As a chiropractor who is relatively new to the field, what does Dr. Clark believe is the primary reason people seek chiropractic care?

"The No. 1 thing that brings people here is pain," he said. "They live with it for a while, then come in to see us. Once they see the results, our patients feel great, they have muscle strengthening, their ligaments stabilize and they can function at optimum level."

So what is the first step towards relieving the pain?

"I would advise the person to call and set up an appointment for the initial consultation," said Dr. Clark, who is available for appointments weekdays from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to noon. "We'll explain what chiropractic is and what the benefits of treatment are. We'll also show a seven-minute video which helps explain chiropractic in a visual manner.

"We'll ask the person if all the information makes sense, and once he or she says yes, we can start chiropractic care. We'll do a chiropractic examination and take x-rays if necessary, to determine what your care plan will look like. Then, we'll take care of the symptoms and help you get relief quickly.

"After that, we'll work on a long-term plan to keep you pain-free. We'll also work on muscle and ligament strengthening, to ensure stability. Drugs mask symptoms; we go after the cause of the pain and realign the spine to get rid of nerve interference."

Dr. Clark, who holds a bachelor of science degree in engineering from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, said patients typically have three questions regarding chiropractic care: Can you help me? How much will it cost? How long will it take to get relief?

"In most cases, the answer to the first question is a resounding yes," he said. "As far as the cost goes, some people think it costs a lot, but one of my goals is to make it affordable for everyone. I want to provide excellent care at a price patients can afford.

"The answer to the third question is that often, patients are given relief very quickly, within just a few visits. Soon, most symptoms disappear. After that, occasional visits usually suffice to maintain well-being."

For those who worry about the safety of undergoing chiropractic care, Dr. Clark assures that they have nothing to fear.

"Chiropractic care doesn't hurt," he said. "It's a safe, gentle, drug-free solution to many, many people. We have the latest state-of-the-art equipment, including a high frequency x-ray unit which emits the lowest amount of radiation dosage."

And once treatment has been administered and the pain has disappeared, the general reaction is amazement, said Dr. Clark.

"You're supposed to be energized, but the pain saps your energy, wears you down and drains you," he said. "Consequently, people are amazed at the amount of energy they have. With just a series of simple adjustments, you're out of that pain and your mobility improves."

One of the more gratifying parts of the business, said Dr. Clark, is that reaction of patients who are relieved to be out of pain.

"I get charged up when I see the smiles on patients' faces," he said. "Once people get results, they realize it works. It's mainly a referral business, because a lot of people who have been helped go and tell their friends, who tell their friends, and so on."

Chiropractic care is just one of what Dr. Clark termed his "Five Pillars of Health." He also stresses a positive mental attitude, along with proper rest, nutrition and exercise to maintain your overall health.

"More and more people are realizing the wellness aspect of chiropractic and how it saves time and money in the long run," he said. "Like a dentist, you come for check-ups, to see how you're doing. We'll check the alignment, maybe make a slight adjustment, safely and quickly."

Dr. Clark also pointed out the universality of chiropractic and how it can benefit anyone at any point in their lives.

"It applies to everyone, from age 1 to 99," he said. "Chiropractic care is for all ages, and not just for those in pain. It can lead to better health, and everyone should have that opportunity."

"It's not just for back or skeletal problems, either; it's for your overall health. Nerves innervate the whole body, and when there's nerve interference, you can't work at optimum level. Getting rid of the nerve interference enables you to be the best you can be."

For those interested in learning more about chiropractic and its benefits, Dr. Clark said, "I invite them to call me at 479-2400. One of my goals is to have people understand chiropractic, and realize that it is not just pain relief, but also wellness care that is life-enhancing."

DR. ROBERT CLARK of Clark Chiropractic, 40 Willard St., Quincy, became interested in chiropractic care after suffering a rugby injury. "I realized the wellness aspect of chiropractic and saw it as a way I could help people live better lives," said Dr. Clark.

Mayor's Prayer Breakfast At Bryan Post June 17

The second annual Mayor's Prayer Breakfast will be held Tuesday, June 17 at 7:30 a.m. at the Bryan VFW Post, Broad St., Quincy.

The breakfast, sponsored by Mayor James Sheets, is being hosted by Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition. The event began last year as an interfaith event aimed at focusing how the various religions and spiritual traditions of Quincy and the South Shore join the coalition in a common effort to meet the needs of people in the community.

Sheets organized the event with Fr. William McCarthy of St. John the Baptist Church.

This year's featured speaker will be Joe Fitzgerald, who will speak on the importance of faith in meeting the needs of people in the community. Fitzgerald is currently a columnist for The Boston Herald. He has been in the newspaper business for 32 years, 27 years at the Herald.

The breakfast this year will benefit The Mayor's Family Commission's Transitional Housing Program for homeless families. The program aims at identifying and housing homeless families with children in the Quincy schools so they need not seek shelter in other parts of the state and be forced to take children out of the school system. The program, though funded by HUD for the housing and services, needs to raise additional dollars for furnishings and future program development.

For tickets or more information, call 376-2255.

WHAT IS YOUR CASE WORTH?

When lawyers estimate the worth of their clients' cases, they usually draw upon their experiences with similar cases, as well as review reports of what juries have awarded in similar cases. This is somewhat akin to the survey real estate agents conduct of comparable homes in the neighborhood when setting the price of a home for sale. And, just as no two homes are exactly the same and therefore worth the same, no two cases are exactly alike. Such factors as the location of the accident and makeup of the jury come into play to make each case unique. Still, a lawyer can find cases that are similar enough to the one at hand to give a client an idea of his or her case's worth.

HINT: It is more difficult to assess the worth of cases with emotional injuries than those with physical injuries.

When you need a lawyer, you want someone with experience and familiarity of similar past cases. At our office, we can help you to build the strongest case possible and earn the maximum compensation you are entitled to for your injuries. My dedicated support staff and I will work hard to represent you and settle your case as fairly and as quickly as possible. To schedule a free consultation, call 773-2880. CHECK FOR $10,000 from the Disabled American Veterans Department of Massachusetts is presented by DAV State Adjutant Thomas Daley to City Councillor Paul Harold, who accepted the award Sunday on behalf of the Quincy Historical Society on the steps of Adams Academy. The gift will be used by the society to start the Joseph R. Harold Memorial Fund in memory of the late DAV state adjutant who was also the councillor's father. The fund will provide monies for the preservation, restoration and display of records and artifacts of veterans and veterans' organizations in the Quincy area.

Veterans' Memorabilia Collection At Historical Society

$10,000 DAV Gift Starts Joseph Harold Memorial Fund

More than 200 attended a Quincy Historical Society ceremony Sunday that included the establishment of the Joseph R. Harold Sr. Memorial Fund and the unveiling of a new collection of Quincy-area veterans' and veterans organizations' memorabilia.

The ceremony was held at Adams Academy.

Named for Quincy resident Joseph Harold, father of City Councillor Paul Harold, the fund will be used for the collection, preservation and display of the veterans' memorabilia. A lead gift of $10,000 to start the fund was presented on behalf of the Department of Massachusetts, Disabled American Veterans (DAV) by State Adjutant Thomas Daley.

Joseph Harold had served in the position of DAV state adjutant for 40 years.

Councillor Harold and Joseph Harold III of Hingham will serve as co-chairmen of the fund.

Among those in attendance Sunday were Councillor Harold, Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Michael Bel-lotti, City Council President Peter Kolson, Sen. William Keating (D-Sharon), and Joseph Harold's brother and sister, James Harold of Westwood and Edith Brick-house of Braintree.

Two men presented items Sunday that will serve as part of the memorabilia collection.

Al Megna of the 26th Yankee Division presented five New England flags (every state except Massachusetts), dating back to at least 1920, that formerly had hung in a church in France following World War I. The flags will now hang next to the U.S. and Massachusetts flags at the Historical Society.

John "Butch" Mahoney, social health coordinator of the Quincy Public Schools, presented a miniature version of "The Lone Sailor" statue in Washington, D.C.

HELP WITH HEALTH INSURANCE

For better or worse, staying healthy today means taking care of body, mind — and insurance company. Learning to work with the ins and outs of your health insurance can be key to getting the treatment you need. Often the place to start is with the person at your place of employment who deals directly with the insurance company. This person typically has the inside contacts to get the information you need, including the names of people with the power to help you. Before you call, organize all the materials you have to support the request you are making. Also, keep a written record of the names of the insurance representatives and their departments with whom you speak. P.S. All insurance companies have set appeal procedures. If your request is rejected be polite — but persistent!

Keeping a written record as you go is one of your best weapons against misunderstandings when it comes to insurance companies. Be sure to note the date, whom you spoke with, and the topic discussed. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I treat both acute and chronic conditions. We are at 700 Congress St., Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. NQHS Students Create Quilt For Day Care Students

North Quincy High School students enrolled in child care classes recently presented 30 patchwork quilts to infants and toddlers at the newly renamed Beth Kaiser Day Care Center at 9 Bicknell St., Quincy.

The Day Care Center is a program of South Shore Mental Health.

Child Care teacher Sara Yaroschuk oversaw the group of 22 students ages 15-17 who chose, as their community service project, to create the patchwork quilts for the children. A total of 90 students are enrolled in this year's child care course.

Students conducted fund-raising activities, including a bake sale at North Quincy High, to raise money for the supplies needed to create the quilts.

The Beth Kaiser Day Care Center, formally known as Step One Infant/Toddler Day Care, first opened its doors in 1987, offering its services to both low-income families and the public. At presented, eight infants and 22 toddlers are enrolled in the program.

The Day Care Program has been renamed in honor of Elizabeth Kaiser as a lasting tribute to the Quincy woman whose dedication and compassion for helping children and families was the hallmark of her 40-year career at South Shore Mental Health. The name change also helps end confusion between the Day Care Center and Step One Early Intervention, also a program of SSMH.

Step One Early Intervention provides services for infants and children, birth to three years of age, who have been diagnosed, or who are at risk of becoming, developmentally delayed.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School students enrolled in child care classes recently presented 30 patchwork quilts to infants and toddlers at the newly re-named Beth Kaiser Day Care Center, 9 Bicknell St., Quincy. Yaroschuk, North Quincy High School child growth and development teacher; youngsters Sunny, Chad, Ashley, Sarina, Victor; Sandra Sullivan, North Quincy High School child care student; Danielle; Tricia Dixon, North Quincy High child care student; Amber; and Sheila DeBettencourt, Beth Kaiser Day Care Center director.

redesign work, McDermott added: "My initial reaction to that is, we have to spend $60,000 for something that shouldn't have been a problem in the first place? To cover up a mistake? We're talking a lot of money here."

McDermott said he wants to know where the city intends to come up with the money for the work. He and his fellow councillors will need good reasons to approve more municipal funding for the concourse, he said.

"The last I heard, we were talking about a groundbreaking for the concourse that would happen this September," he said. "I don't see how that's possible now."

McDermott said he expects representatives from the DPW and Earth Tech to be on hand next Monday night to answer the council's questions. Others who have been invited include: number of abutters and representatives from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association the Quincy Center Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) appointed by Sheets, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and other groups, he noted.

He added that it was the CAC that initially suggested an informational meeting be held.

Officials have said the Quincy Center Concourse will both help downtown revitalization--by making the downtown more accessible to motorists--and ease traffic problems in the area.

Frank Brillo To Receive Koch Youth Service Award

The Quincy Flag Day Committee announces that Frank Brillo of Quincy Point has been named the recipient of the second annual Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The award is given to an individual who has made a significant contribution to the youth community in Quincy. It will be presented at the Flag Day Ceremony at Adams Field on Saturday.

Brillo has been a coach and administrator with the Quincy Youth Football League for almost 30 years. He has devoted countless hours to the many CYO programs at St. Joseph's Parish in Quincy Point. His work with these organizations has impacted the lives of thousands of Quincy's youngsters.

Brillo is a veteran of the Vietnam War and a recipient of the Purple Heart. He lives with his wife Maureen and their three children, Timothy, Jonathan and Catlin.

The Flag Day Committee formed the award last year to honor Richard J. Koch, founder of the Flag Day Parade and the Koch Club. He is considered to be one of the finest public servants the city has ever known. His programs still provide opportunities for children.

"For more than 30 years, Frank Brillo has served Quincy Point and its youth. After he served his country in Vietnam, Frank came home and continued to serve by working with countless programs for our youngsters. The committee thought it appropriate to recognize his service and let him know we are grateful for all that he has done," said Flag Day Chairman Thomas Koch.

The parade will begin at 7 p.m. and will be followed by the Flag Raising Ceremony at Adams Field, where the Koch Award will be presented at 8 p.m. The evening will be capped off by a fireworks display beginning at 9 p.m. at Pageant Field.

Abigail Adams Statue Unveiling Saturday

p.m. on Coddington St. and proceed along Hancock St. to Adams Field. Other festivities include a flag raising ceremony at 8 p.m. at Adams Field and at 9 p.m. fireworks at Pageant Field.

All events are open to the public.

Abigail Smith Adams is being commemorated for her commitment to education, family and nation, said Adams National Historic Site Supt. Marianne Peak. She is the only woman in American history to be wife of one President and mother of another. Abigail's letters provide a vivid picture of the exceptional times in which she lived and have made her a preeminent historian. The future first lady enjoined her husband in a letter dated March 31, 1776:

"I long to hear that you have declared an independency and by the way in the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make I desire you would Remember the Ladies, and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors."

Abigail's plea to her husband was one of the first and boldest calls for fair and just treatment of women. She endured separation from her husband while he represented his country at home and abroad for nearly a decade. She remained in Braintree (now Quincy) to care for her family and manage the farm. With great courage, she inspired her son John Quincy to join John Adams abroad to expand his horizons by witnessing firsthand the formative phase of American diplomacy. In June 1778, shortly after her son arrived in Europe, Abigail wrote to him:

"Improve your understanding for acquiring useful knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to your parents."

Abigail's painful separation from her son was her country's gain as John Quincy Adams went on to become one of the nation's preeminent diplomats and statesmen. This critical event is vividly interpreted in Lloyd Lillie's sculpture.

Lillie a professor of arts at Boston University, is renowned for his artistic work including the sculptures exhibited near Faneuil Hall of Boston Celtics legendary coach Arnold "Red" Auerbach, Boston Mayor James Michael Curley, and a bronze bust of Frederick Douglass on exhibit in Faneuil Hall.

The Quincy Partnership is a group of leaders from business, government, non-profit organizations and the public whose purpose is to enhance the quality of life in Quincy. Edward Keohane, Partnership president since its inception, said Quincy's diverse heritage provides a solid foundation for the board-based coalitions vision for the future.

Keohane said the organization sponsored several fundraisers to raise $60,000 in support of the Abigail Adams statue project. Other projects completed include lighting several local historic structures, and installing welcoming signs at each major entrance to the city.

Multi-Family Home Sales Show Modest Increase

Sales of two-, three- and four-family homes rose 2.2 percent in Massachusetts during the first quarter of 1997, increasing from 1,071 units closed in the first three months of 1996 to 1,096 in the same period this year, according to data compiled by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

The increase marks the seventh consecutive quarter in which multi-family home sales have improved in the Bay State over the same period one year earlier, the MAR report said.

"The steady activity we've seen in the multi-family market over the past 12 months reflects the gradual turnaround in the state's economy," said MAR President Richard DiIs. "As job growth and price stability have spread from east to west across the state, confidence in the multi-family market has returned and sales have risen correspondingly," he said.

The great improvement in activity occurred in the western four counties of the Commonwealth, where multi-family home sales increased 17.8 percent in the first quarter of 1997 as compared to the same period last year. Steady sales growth also was observed in southeastern Massachusetts and the Northeast region of the state, where sales increased by 12.8 percent and 4.5 percent during the first quarter respectively.

Elsewhere, sales activity declined by small margins in the greater Boston, Cape Cod and islands, Central and South Shore regions of the state.

The MAR report also found the total dollar volume for multi-family home sales increased 6.9 percent during the first quarter of the year, climbing from $125,867,215 in the first quarter a year ago to $134,496,045 in the same period in 1997. While price comparisons are not available for two-, three- and four-family homes separately, the overall increase in dollar volume suggests the average value of multi-family property has risen 4.5 percent statewide since the first quarter of 1996.

The outlook for the multi-family market remains bright, according to DiIs, who pointed to a 17.2 percent increase in multi-family building permits in 1996 as a barometer for the immediate future. "With recent declines in rental vacancy rates sparking interest from investors, and the final phase-out of rent control restrictions last year creating new home ownership opportunities for young, urban buyers, two-, three- and four-family properties are becoming desirable again" he said.

Home Warranties Good Marketing Tool

Q. Should I consider buying a home warranty when selling my home?

A. Home warranties are a good marketing tool to have in your favor when the time comes to sell your home. Without one, the buyer would have to pay excessive amounts of money in the first year if some appliances would happen to break down.

With one, a simple toll-free number takes care of many problems in the home. This makes your house containing a home warranty more appealing to buyers than the house down the street without one.

If your home is an older one, it is also a good idea to consider a home warranty because some things tend to break down after time.

Also, if you are not entirely familiar with the mechanics of the home or if you're selling a home you haven't lived in, a home warranty just may be the safest and most practical choice you can make come selling time.

Legion Baseball

Both Won Season Openers

Quincy, Morrisette Square Off Tonight

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Tonight (Thursday) at 8 at Adams Field, the city's two American Legion baseball teams, Morrisette and Quincy, square off in the first of three meetings this season.

After waiting a week to start their seasons due to the high school tournaments, both Quincy and Morrisette won their season openers. Quincy blanked Randolph, 4-0, Monday night and Morrisette held on to defeat West Roxbury, 10-8, Sunday. Morrisette also hosted Milton Tuesday night.

In Quincy's opening night triumph, Dennis Palardy tossed a masterful five-hit, complete-game shutout at Adams Field. Randolph managed just a single in the first, second, third, sixth and seventh innings and stranded seven baserunners. Palardy also had control of all his pitches, striking out six and walking just two.

"He came out and did what we want our pitchers to do—throw strikes and kept the ball around the plate," said Quincy head coach Larry Taglieri. "He also changed speeds well and got some strikeouts with his curve, which he's been working on with (pitching coach) Wayne Chambers."

"Dennis has been working hard, since back in January, and pitched well for Quincy High, but he's not at his best yet. I believe he'll get even better as the season goes on."

A scoreless game through three, Quincy notched the game's first run in the fourth. With one out, Will Tracey, tapped a slow dribbler down the third base line for an infield single. A wild pitch sent Tracey to second, followed by a Pat McGann single to center, scoring Tracey.

Quincy added three insurance runs in the fifth with two outs. Bryan Linskey singled to center with one out and stole second. One out later, Stephen Wiltshire scorched a double to the right center field gap, scoring Linskey. The next batter, Greg Peck, ripped a drive to deep center for an inside-the-park home run, driving in Wiltshire ahead of him for a 4-0 Quincy lead.

"We got some nice hitting by the bottom of the order," said Taglieri. "Peck's hit was a big one for us and Stephen also had a nice shot that drove in a run. Pat McGann, in the ninth spot, picked up two hits and a run batted in, too."

"That's the kind of team we are. We stress making contact and hitting line drives, and the kids did that tonight. It was a great way to start the season, with strong pitching, timely hitting and exceptional defense."

Following tonight's game, Quincy next plays Friday night at 8 against visiting Cohasset. Next Tuesday, June 16, Quincy travels to Cohasset for a 5:45 p.m. tilt. All home games are at Adams Field.

In Morrisette's victory over host West Roxbury, reliever John Sullivan picked up the win and was also the hitting star with three doubles and four RBI.

Trailing 6-5 in the sixth, Morrisette's offense erupted, sending 10 men to the late and scoring five runs for a 10-6 lead. West Roxbury rallied for two late runs but Sullivan held off the home squad to seal the win.

Sullivan tossed 3 2/3 innings, allowed three runs, struck out three and walked none. Starter Mark Kelly pitched 3 1/3 innings, giving up five runs (four earned) on six hits.

"Both Mark and John pitched extremely well; they weren't hard, but some miscues due mainly to the field conditions gave West Roxbury a couple breaks," said Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo, in his 28th season as the team's manager.

"I was glad to get out of there with a win. The last few years, we've lost some tough games there to start the season, so we're happy about this one."

Joining Sullivan in Morrisette's hit parade were Chris Bregoli (3 for 5, RBI), Matt McLoughlin (2 for 3, RBI), Brian Beaton (2 for 3), Eric Wirtz (2 for 4) and Bill Walker (1 for 3).

"We hit the ball good, which is nice to see in the first game," said Cattaneo. "Everybody made good contact and hit the ball hard, even those who didn't get hits. Sullivan had some key hits for us and helped us hold on to win."

After tonight's contest, Morrisette hosts Canton Sunday at 8. Next Monday night, June 16, Morrisette hosts Weymouth. Next Wednesday night, June 18 at 8, Morrisette visits Braintree. All home games are at Adams Field.

QUINCY SILVER BULLETS, a special needs basketball team, received two City Council commendations during a recent council meeting. Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers presented the commendations to Bill Ketcham (left), coach of the Bullets' "first" team that won a gold medal during the state championship in April and Henry Picwick, who coached the "second" team to a silver medal. Tourney Loss Closes Book On North Quincy

Winning nine of its last 13 to qualify for the Division I South Sectional, the North Quincy High School baseball team was on a roll heading into last Wednesday's preliminary-round game at Stoughton High School.

The Red Raiders, seeded 22nd, had senior ace Ryan Herlihy on the mound and felt optimistic about their chances against Stoughton, the No. 11 seed.

Control problems, however, plagued Herlihy (5 1/3 innings, seven hits, five runs, six strikeouts, five walks) in the first two innings, resulting in four Stoughton runs.

Meanwhile, Herlihy's counterpart, senior Jarrod Rotondo, tossed a solid complete-game five-hitter, striking out nine and walking five. The result: a 5-3 victory for Stoughton, ending North's season on a sour note.

"Walks will kill you, and four of them scored today," said North Quincy coach Dave Perdios. "Ryan's been very good this year as our senior captain, but struggled early with his control. He settled down after the first couple innings, but we just didn't hit the ball, which has been the story all year."

Herlihy's run into trouble right off the bat, walking the first two hitters he faced (Paul McCarthy and Joe Ulrich). With two outs, Andy MacKarron singled past senior Eric Wirtz at second to drive in McCarthy with the game's first run. Jason Minassian then singled to left to score Joe Apotheker from second base for a 2-0 lead.

After North went down in order in the second, Stoughton used two more walks to score two more runs. With one out, Ken O'Neil drew a walk, and after a McCarthy strikeout, Ulrich walked. The next batter, Apotheker, lifted a short, wind-aided fly over second base that neither Wirtz nor senior center fielder Brian Beaton could track down, which scored both runners for a 4-0 lead.

"If you make the play on that pop fly, it's a 2-0 ballgame," said Perdios. "Brian made a good effort, but it dropped in and they doubled their lead on that one play."

The Red Raiders got on the board in the fourth when Beaton, who was hit by a pitch and moved to third on John Sullivan's single, scored on a wild pitch. North could have further cut into the deficit, but Bill Walker and Rob Celata both struck out while the bases loaded to end the rally.

Stoughton came back with a run in its half of the fourth when Ulrich doubled home McCarthy, who had walked.

Freshman Rob Celata, who relieved Herlihy in the sixth, tossed two-plus innings of shutout ball, yielding one hit and one walk while striking out four.

Walks helped North cut the lead to 5-3 with two runs in the seventh. With one out, Greg Peck ripped a single to right, followed by walks to Wirtz and Rob Kane to load the bases. Chris Gregoli lifted a sacrifice fly to right, scoring Peck and sending Wirtz to third.

Beaton walked to load the bases, and Sullivan grounded to O'Neil at first for what appeared to be the third out. But O'Neil mishandled the grounder and slipped on his way to first, unable to beat Sullivan to the bag. Wirtz scored on the play to cut the lead to 5-3.

North nearly tied it when Bryan Linsky lifted a fly down the left field line, but third baseman McCarthy made an over-the-shoulder catch to end the inning, leaving the bases loaded.

Rotondo, who threw over 140 pitches, retired the side in order in the ninth to clinch the victory.

Softball

Future Looks Bright For Quincy After Tough Season

The softball team at Quincy High School recently wrapped up a tough season with a 9-0 loss to Barnstable, dropping its record to 1-21.

"This was not the way we wanted to finish up, but their pitcher pitched a great game against us," said Quincy coach Bob Keuther.

Despite the Presidents' struggles throughout the season, Keuther was proud of the effort of each and every player.

"They never quit, they played hard and I'm pleased with their effort from start to finish," he said. "We were one of the few teams to start four freshmen, so you're going to take your lumps at some point. But the experience the girls got, especially the freshmen, will help them in the future."

Among the bright spots Keuther noted was the continued improvement of freshman catcher Colleen Nichol and sophomore pitcher Lisa Maconochie.

"I was very impressed with Colleen's development as the season went on," he said. "She was outstanding this year and will be a force to reckon with in the Old Colony League for years to come. Lisa, our sophomore starting pitcher, also developed into a fine pitcher as she took over the No. 1 slot later in the season."

Keuther also praised the other younger players, including Amy Grealou, Jen Grogan, Kaitlyn McLaughlin, Caitlin Nichol and Tabitha McLelland, the "nucleus" of next season's squad.

Of the 13 varsity players, nine will return in 1998, while a number of JV players will move up to the varsity. The entire JV squad was comprised of freshmen, who got valuable experience and playing time, said Keuther.

"This was a tough year, but we got through it, and the future of Quincy softball looks bright," he concluded.

NQHS Volleyball Camp July 14-18; Training Camp At NQHS Aug. 18-21

CONFIRMING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ABS

Up until now, studies have failed to confirm the effectiveness of anti-lock brakes (ABS) in promoting safety (perhaps because drivers drove more recklessly with ABS or failed to use the system correctly). Now, Highway & Vehicle Safety Report says that a new study finds that ABS results in fewer accidents and injuries.

When compared to non-ABS cars, vehicles with four-wheel ABS experienced 9 to 10 percent lower overall accident rates and 10 to 13 percent lower overall rates for injuries resulting from accidents. On wet, snowy, or icy roads, automobiles with ABS experienced 17 to 19 percent fewer accidents and 24 to 28 percent fewer injuries from accidents. Of course, in order to work, ABS must be utilized properly. Drivers in ABS-equipped cars must realize that they have to apply firm and continuous pressure to their brake pedals throughout an emergency stop.

HINT: Having an ABS-equipped car does not give drivers license to drive recklessly with the false assumption that ABS will bail them out of dangerous situations.

Leading 10-9 after one inning, Local scored seven runs in the second and added six more in the third. Joe Norris paced Local offensively, going three for four with a single, double and home run. Norris also caught a strong game with three putouts behind the plate. Paul McLaughlin, Paul McLean, Frank Boudreau and Chris Tierney collected two hits apiece.

Flavin was paced by strong efforts from the Griffith brothers, Michael and Jonathan.

CNA battled Locker Room down to the wire, claiming a hard-fought 10-8 victory. Kellan Losi, in his first start, pitched into the fifth for the win before being relieved by Rob Richards, who got the save. Combined they had nine strikeouts.

The game was not decided until CNA catcher Jonathan O'Connor threw out the lead runner attempting to steal third. Richards (three hits, two runs), Brian Lee (double, triple, two runs), Mike Merlis (two RBI, including the insurance run in the sixth) and Justin Petkus (two runs, RBI) paced the CNA offense. Steve O'Neill and Jamie Losi made key defensive plays.

Andrew Pangrazz started for Locker and went the distance, striking out seven. Frank Feeley (two hits, RBI) and Ian Jorgenson (triple, run, RBI) were Locker's top hitters, while Issac Guerin and John Morris anchored a steady defense.

In a 12-11 triumph over Kenny's Lock, CNA scored four times with two outs in the bottom of the sixth, the game-winner scoring on a clutch single by Tyler La-groteria. CNA has won four in a row and its record is 7-2.

Mike Merlis got the start for CNA and pitched into the fifth before tiring. He was relieved by Rob Richards, who gave up two runs in two innings to earn his fourth win. Richards, Merlis, Brian Lee and Mike Tormey all scored twice, and Justin Petkus chipped in with a big single. Paul Hardiman, who replaced Petkus, began the sixth-inning rally with a surprise punt.

For Kenny's, Chris Haldoupis started and went the first three innings before Bryan Eaton relieved him. Eaton was untouchable for two innings, striking out five. However, in the decisive sixth, up by three runs, Kenny's was unable to get third out and Lagroteria came through with the game-winning hit. Two five-run innings helped Kenny's battle back from a seven-run deficit. Brendan McNeil (two hits, two runs), Nolan Green (two-run triple), Jacob Smith (double, run) sparked Kenny's offense. McNeil was also the defensive standout with three putouts.

five innings before he was relieved by Chris Scherer. IHOP's bright stars were Mike Rooney (two hits, RBI) and Kozak and Mark Kiesel (one hit apiece). Defensively, Mike Marshall and Rooney had strong games.

A Thought For The Week

"Give us a nation of good fathers, and we will have a nation of good children. Give us a nation of fathers who love their children, who set them an example of moderation and decency, and we will have a nation of children who love their parents and respect their ideals."

Give us a nation of fathers who have the courage to say, "No," when their children make unreasonable demands, and we will have a nation of children with the character to say "No," to any proposal that will hurt their family. Give us a nation of fathers whom their children can respect, and we will have a nation of children whom the community will respect." - Nuggets, June 1960

Your Social Security

Never Too Late To Start Planning For Retirement

By CAROL BOYLE

It's never too late to start planning for retirement. It's true that the earlier you start, the better, but experts agree that a late plan is better than no plan at all.

While your options may not be as great if you're over 50, you do have some options. The important thing is that you recognize what they are and factor them into a plan of action. You need to understand, for example, that, statistically speaking, you need to plan on living longer than your parents and grandparents did. And people over age 85 represent the largest growing segment of the population.

If you are within 10 years of retirement, here are some Social Security considerations:

Find out what you've got coming from Social Security. You should call 1-800-772-1213 to get a copy of a "Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement." That's a report on the earnings you have credited to your Social Security account, and the retirement, survivors, or disability benefits payable on those earnings.

Remember, benefits decrease if you retire early. Although many people retire early, this may not be your best option. You can retire as early as age 62, but benefits are decreased for each month before age 65 you are receiving benefits, up to a maximum of 20 percent.

Note that benefits increase if you delay retirement. If you're in good health and don't mind working, you should know that Social Security benefits increase for each month after full retirement age (65 in 1997) you delay retirement. In 1997, the "delayed retirement credit" is five percent, but it's scheduled to go up to eight percent by the year 2008.

Know how other retirement income may affect your Social Security benefits. Most types of retirement income will not affect your Social Security benefits. This means you can have income from savings and investments and other pensions over and above your Social Security benefits. In general, earnings are the most common income that may affect benefits.

Know how much you can earn in retirement. There is a retirement test that limits how much you can make and still receive Social Security benefits. It increases annually with increases in general wage levels. In 1997, people age 65 and over can earn up to $13,500 without affecting their Social Security benefits. Benefits are reduced $1 for every $3 of earnings. Beneficiaries under 65 can earn up to $8,640 a year. Earnings over the limit would reduce benefits $1 for every $2.

The earnings limits do not apply to beneficiaries age 70 and older.

Social Security is a good starting point even for late retirement planners. It's designed to be a floor of income protection that increases with the cost of living and lasts for the rest of your life. It's something you can build on.

For more details on the information here, call Social Security's tollfree number (1-800-772-1213) and ask for the publication, "Retirement."

Statue Of First Lady Unveiled

'I Can't Help But Think Abigail Adams Is Smiling'

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

It took three years of special effort for the Abigail Adams statue to become a reality, but it was well worth waiting for.

That was the consensus of several hundred on-lookers as the statue was unveiled Saturday in the center of the community she called home 200 years ago.

"I can't help but think that perhaps under that veil, Abigail Adams is smiling," said Marianne Peak, Adams National Historic Site superintendent, before the statue was uncovered.

Peak was among five speakers during the 45-minute ceremony which attracted several hundred people from city officials wearing flag-decorated ties to children on their parents' shoulders waving small flags.

Under sunny skies tempered by a gentle breeze, the Alumni Band played patriotic songs. Honored guests included the wives of six Quincy mayors, as well as descendants of the Adams family.

"We'd like to thank each and every one of you for your participation in the fund-raising to make this event possible," said Edward Keohane, president of the Quincy

Council Approves $149.6M City Budget Up $6 Million

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council unanimously passed a Fiscal Year 1998 municipal budget totaling $149,616,795 Monday night.

The final budget is only $25,600 less than the original $149,642,395 FY98 municipal budget proposed in April by Mayor James Sheets.

The council, which has the power to make cuts in the budget but cannot add to it, had to pass it in some form before July 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

After several council budget sessions, the only cuts made were $25,000 in workers' compensation costs and $600 to the Quincy Health Department's out-of-state travel budget.

Councillor Michael Cheney, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, voiced satisfaction with the budgetary process and complimented the mayor for submitting a tight budget and his fellow councillors for their work during the budget sessions.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, the Finance Committee vice chairman, said after the meeting he also is happy with the final budget.

"What we were given [for a proposed budget] this year was tighter than what we've received in the past few years, so therefore there was nothing to cut," said Cahill. "Hopefully, this budget will mean there won't be any need to raise taxes that much this year, maybe not at all."

Last year's FY97 budget passed by the City Council totaled $143,511,315, a figure 4.3 percent or $6.1 million less than what the mayor proposed for FY98.

The increase in this year's budget includes more than $3.1 million for the city's public schools and nearly $3 million for various city departments.

Sheets has said the $3.1 million school department increase will be used to pay for employee raises, utility costs, and special education expenditures.

More than one-third of the city increase is earmarked for new community patrol officers and negotiated raises for the Quincy Police Department, according to Sheets. The rest will go toward various operational costs in several city departments, including the park and data processing departments, he said.

Despite 17 Arrests 'Operation Graduation' Has Positive Side, Too

An undercover investigation at Quincy High School and in North Quincy that resulted in 17 drug-related arrests—mostly for marijuana—was part of a broader effort that included concerns about possible gang activity and weapons possession.

John "Butch" Mahoney, social health coordinator of the Quincy Public Schools who spearheaded the seven-month effort dubbed "Operation Graduation II," said drugs were only part of the story.

"Drugs were not the only issue," said Mahoney, who ran the investigation with Detective Patrick Glynn from the police department's narcotics unit. "What we found out what that there is no gang activity, no weapons problem, and a small amount of drugs. It also led to information about stolen cars, 'chop shops' and things like that.

"We arrested 17, but we did an awful lot more to help other kids. The end result is very positive. That's what should be emphasized: all the positive things."

The investigation was run with the assistance of a young deputy sheriff from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department who posed as a work study student at Quincy High School and in the North Quincy area.

Mahoney said his involvement with the New England Community Education Institute (NECEI), which held its 12th annual conference two months ago in Springfield, helped provide ideas on how to run the investigation. The NECEI is composed of law enforcement officials, educators and others who collectively work to combat social issues such as youth violence, race relations, and others.

Previous actions taken in Quincy as part of the investigation include two operations at the city's high schools last fall that have been dubbed "Operation Sweep" and "Operation Flush," Mahoney noted.

The first effort, which took place at North Quincy High School, was an eradication sweep of illegal substances. The sweep, which Mahoney said was successful, included officers and Executive Director Joseph Mannarino and consultants working on the project have been invited.

- Provide an environment that is both attractive and convenient for pedestrians and vehicular use.

•Build upon the area's existing assets.

Sheets Asks $4.4M In Bonds For Buildings, Streets

Mayor James Sheets has submitted a $4,410,000 bond package for improvements to public buildings, roadways and sidewalks, and other city projects to the City Council.

The council placed the mayor's bond proposal into its Finance Committee without discussion Monday night. A public hearing will be held before any action on the bond is taken.

The bond package includes:

- $1.25 million for the remodeling, reconstruction and/or repairs to various public buildings. Sheets said the work includes new windows for the Atherton Hough School, ventilation/heating repairs at the Sterling and Central middle schools, renovations to the City Council Chambers at City Hall, ventilation repairs at several of the city's fire stations and security upgrading at City Hall, schools and other buildings that will include new locks, camera equipment and more.

The school repairs are part of a planned 10-year school renovation program that could cost the city more than $50 million to upgrade the city's 18 public schools.

- $1 million for road and sidewalk improvements throughout the city.

- $490,000 for engineering services related to the planned Quincy Center Concourse.

- $900,000 for various departmental equipment including a new street sweeper, trucks for the park and traffic departments, and more.

- $70,000 for the construction of seawalls and dikes. The work mainly consists of repairs in the Norton Road section of Merrymount, according to Sheets.

- $700,000 for the construction and reconstruction of municipal outdoor recreational and athletic facilities. Sheets said the work will consist of three new soccer fields—one at the Mound Street Beach and two on Quarry Street—eight or nine tot lots across the city, improvements to Faxon Park, and more.

Sheets said he is confident the city can afford to bond for the projects.

"The guidelines we've set for ourselves is that we make a payment each year that's below 5 percent of the total city budget for the fiscal year," said the mayor. "In the 1980s, the number was up around 7 or 8 percent. I'm very comfortable that we are spending wisely."

Sheets said in Fiscal Year 1998, which begins July 1, the city will make a payment of about $6.9 million on money it has bonded. The percentage of the budget paid during the fiscal year, which includes the new bond package, totals about 4.8 or 4.9 percent of the city budget, he said.

Sheets added that in some cases, the city is not even responsible for paying back an entire bond amount. For example, he said, since 63 percent of every major school project is eventually reimbursed by the state, the city is only responsible for $3.7 million (plus interest) of the $10 million it bonded for the Clifford Marshall Elementary School which will open next year.

Police Chief To Retire In August Council Honors Mullen For 41-Year Career

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Police Chief Francis Mullen was honored by the City Council Monday night for serving 41 years with the Quincy Police Department.

Mullen, who has served as chief since September 1990, will retire at the end of August when turns 65.

The council presented Mullen with a hand-made clock which bears Quincy's city seal on its face. There is also an inscription below which reads: "Chief Francis E. Mullen—Integrity and Leadership During an Outstanding 41-Year Career With the Quincy Police Department."

Councillors also took turns offering similar words of praise.

"You have been a credit to your profession," said Council President Peter Kolson. "You've always carried yourself with dignity, and I respect you."

Kolson added that if one word could be used to sum up Mullen's career, "professionalism" would be at the top of the list.

"He's an individual who has dedicated his entire life...to public service," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel

Other councillors praised Mullen for making improvements in their wards

Josiah Quincy House
Open For Summer

The Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA) announces the Josiah Quincy House is open for the summer season.

In celebration of the new season, SPNEA is sponsoring an Open House at all 23 of its historic house museum properties. The event entitles all visitors to complimentary admission to the house and SPNEA's other historic properties located throughout New England.

Located at 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, the Josiah Quincy House is one of Quincy's oldest and most significant historic sites. Through October 15, the house will be open for tours Saturdays and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. with tours offered on the hour. Admission is $2 for adults and is free to Quincy residents and SPNEA members.

In 1770, the house was built as a country estate and was originally surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. It was built by Revolutionary War leader Col. Josiah Quincy.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamases to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life in Massachusetts and the nation. The family produced three Boston mayors and a president of Harvard University.

The house, considered to be one of the finest extant examples of New England Georgian architecture, is a repository of the Quincy family history. Its grounds boast of a small reflective perennial garden shaped like a musical note.

The Josiah Quincy House is one of 23 historic house museums and operated by SPNEA, a non-profit, membership-based organization dedicated to the preservation of New England's social, architectural, and landscape history.

Abigail's Place Of Honor

Abigail Adams now has a special place of honor in the adopted hometown she loved.

She has long had a unique spot in history as the only woman ever to be the wife of one U.S. president and the mother of another. (And she almost became the grandmother of a vice president.)

Now she has that special place of honor--and prominence--beside historic United First Parish Church across from City Hall in Quincy Sq.

A life-sized statue of Abigail at about age 32 and her son, John Quincy as a 10-year-old boy, was unveiled Saturday at an impressive ceremony attended by several hundred.

A special recognition for a special woman and person. And a long over-due one.

The community active Quincy Partnership headed by Edward Keohane deserves a "well done" in carrying the fund-raising ball to make it happen. The group sponsored a number of events over a three-year period to raise over $60,000 to commission the statue and turn a dream into a reality.

The statue of Abigail and young John Quincy standing on a base of Quincy granite with her hand on his shoulders in a motherly gesture, is a thing of beauty in bronze created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. It is a handsome and appropriate addition to the historic Quincy scene and will surely become another "must" attraction for visitors to the city.

Abigail is usually remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another, an honor shared by no other woman.

But she was more than that. She was a remarkable woman on her own and one ahead of her times.

Born in Weymouth, Nov. 11, 1744, the daughter of Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister, and Elizabeth Quincy Smith, she had no formal schooling. But through tutoring by her father and mother and reading, she became a well known writer of letters that have served to help chronicle American history.

She was an early advocate of women's rights as attested in one of her famous letters to her husband who was often away. She wrote:

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire that you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors."

And, she strongly added:

"Do not put such unlimited powers into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

No doubt there are a few feminists around today who would say Abigail deserves a statue just for those words only.

She was a brave woman, too. She was often left alone for long periods of time to care for the children and run the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of the fledgling country.

Early in their marriage, he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country, and she sailed to meet him in Paris. They had not seen one another in five years.

They were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. Philadelphia was the capital when Adams took office as the second president succeeding George Washington March 4, 1797.

John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800, when it was called the President's Palace.

No fancy airs about Abigail. She gained notoriety by hanging laundry by the fireplace in the East Room. She was just being practical. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer ones for drying wet clothing.

Adams and Thomas Jefferson were close friends during and after the Revolutionary War and worked together to produce the precious Declaration of Independence. History gives Jefferson the credit as the author but he acknowledged Adams' important input.

The two friends later had a falling out and became political enemies. Jefferson defeated Adams in his bid for re-election. Adams was so bitter he refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural in 1801 and came home to Quincy and the Adams Mansion.

Abigail became a peacemaker through letters to Jefferson and thanks to her efforts the two former Presidents patched things up before they died.

Both succumbed July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Adams was in his 91st year, the longest longevity among presidents.

Adams lived to see his son, John Quincy, elected the sixth president in 1824. But Abigail did not. She died six years earlier Oct. 28, 1818, one month shy of 74. (A grandson, Charles Francis Adams, unsuccessfully ran for vice president in 1848).

John and Abigail were married 54 years and it was a happy marriage despite frequent and long separations in the early years.

Abigail was the woman behind a husband and son who encouraged and helped them in their distinguished service to their country on their way to the Presidency.

The Abigail Adams statue appropriately is just a few feet from the church crypt where she, her husband, her son and daughter-in-law Louisa Catherine are entombed.

The very spot from which she now looks out onto Quincy Sq. is where she walked when the area was an open field.

The oldest bank in America, in continuous operation is the Bank of New York, founded in 1834 by Alexander Hamilton.

Scenes From Yesterday

THE BOULEVARD, W. QUINCY, MASS.

THIS IS A 1913 postcard view of the newly built Furnace Brook Parkway somewhere in West Quincy. Originally named the Metropolitan Parkway, the road was part of an extensive network built by the newly commissioned MDC. Note the gaslights and the lack of a pavement on the dirt roadway. It is difficult to place the exact site of this view because of the lack of buildings, the curves in the road are the only clue. Those curves and the boulevard plantings show that landscape architects probably designed this parkway, not engineers.

What Happened To The U.S. Flag?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

At this time of year, with Patriots Day, Memorial Day and Flag Day just having passed, and July 4 on its way, the American flag that has flown on the top of the bank building constantly for at least the last 40 years in missing.

What happened, that the top of the building, located in the downtown center of Quincy, is lacking the flag of our nation? No matter the name changes of the bank over the years, the American flag has always flown proudly over this great gray edifice. Has it become passé to fly the flag? Is there a reason or a financial hardship that "BankBoston" has forgone this symbol?

On behalf of the many veterans and average folks that come to, live in, visit or work in Quincy, we miss it. Though only a symbol, we have always had a sense of pride when we saw the flag caught in the breeze.

Please return it to its rightful station.

Praises Those Who Taught At Pollard School

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a former resident of Quincy and a subscriber to The Quincy Sun, I read with regret of the passing of Ruth Abbiatti, an outstanding teacher.

The mentioning of other teachers at Thomas Pollard brought back many fond memories. I'm sure it was Miss Salvucci and Miss Hofferly who rode their bikes past my home on South St. to go to school. Miss Litchfield helped me so much with math.

Whenever I hear the song, "Santa Lucia," I think of Miss Salvucci. Miss DiBartholomeo, if I'm not mistaken, gave us painting lessons using the Prang watercolor pans. I am now an artist. I wonder if she instilled the first interest.

Things were a little rough in those days, but the teachers at Pollard School helped so much to make life more pleasant.

Miss Sweeney was principal at the time and Miss Abbiatti was her assistant and occasionally had to leave the classroom.

I don't remember any students disrupting class or causing any problems when she was out of the room.

She was strict but very much respected.

When my children were in elementary school in Zanesville, Ohio, I was a teacher's aide and volunteer for many activities. The teacher were good and very caring but I honestly have never encountered any better than the ones at Thomas Pollard School.

Cancer Support Groups Help People Become 'Empowered'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

June 1 was National Cancer Survivors Day, a day of reflection for millions of cancer survivors. Even though I developed cancer in both breasts 13 years ago, I am now cancer-free, and I feel it is my mission to help other women with breast cancer.

My message to these women is to have hope, and to find the best care-givers and support groups available on the South Shore.

Looking back, I had moved to Quincy shortly before I became ill. With no friends or family in the area, I felt overwhelmed when I was diagnosed. At that time, I depended solely on my doctors and nurse at Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology in Quincy, Weymouth, Milton, and Dorchester. They became my primary family and friends, and they encouraged me to participate in my own care and recovery.

I became empowered! I joined the local breast cancer support group "Best of Friends," founded by my medical oncologist Walt Kagan, M.D., Ph.D., and oncology nurse practitioner, Shirley Shuster, RN, OCN. After seeing the positive influence of this group, I helped to form the Quincy Hospital Breast Cancer Support Group that meets twice monthly.

My experience is that specific breast cancer support groups are more effective than general cancer support groups in dealing with the physiological and psychological impact of cancer.

Unfortunately, there's a long way to go in the fight against breast cancer, and early detection is critical. I encourage women to do breast self exams and have screening mammographies, regardless of their insurance. The American Cancer Society and private trusts like the Marie Curry Foundation at Quincy Hospital enable women to have mammographies even if they don't have health insurance.

In short, this disease has actually given me gifts that I am honored to share in helping other women with breast cancer.

Apple-Spice Biscotti

Because it was so cool on the holiday, supposedly kicking off the summer season, most of our Memorial Day activities this year were inside.

I got an early start and decided experimenting baking my eggless, milkless cake using just apples. (in place of raisins) However, when it was baked, I wasn't happy with the results. It seemed too moist. So just as if I were baking biscotti's I waited about 10 minutes and then sliced the cake as I would a biscotti. If they didn't come out edible, I would just throw them out. The results got raves so here is the recipe.

Apple Spice Biscotti

1 1/4 cups cut up apple
2 cups water
1 stick butter (or margarine)
1 3/4 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda

1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1/4 teaspoon cloves

Peel and cut apples in small pieces. Boil the two cups of water along with the apples. Boil about 5 minutes, turn off heat and add the margarine. Let cool. Add all the rest of the ingredients and mix with a spoon until well blended. Bake in a greased bun pan (with a center) so that you can slice easily.

After it has cooled, cut in slices (about 1/2 inch thick) and place on an ungreased cookie sheet in a 400 degree oven for about 15 minutes, turn once and bake another few minutes until they are crispy. Mine came out chewy, rather than crispy, so it's a good idea to try them at various times.

CLIFFORD'S FLOWER SHOP of Quincy Center recently sponsored its third annual "Hat's Off To Moms" writing contest. Students in grades four and five are invited to submit a brief essay of 250 words or less explaining why their "mom" is the best mom. Essays explain mom's qualities, her job, guidance and favorite flower. This year there were two winners: Evelyn McInnes (front left) and Rose Bell, both fifth graders at the Merrymount School. Evelyn wrote about her mom, Janet Gaebring (rear, second from left) and Rose about her deceased grandmother, Frances Levine. With her is her mom, Leslie Bell (rear, second right). Presenting bouquets to the winners are Eleanor Kopp, Clifford's marketing director; and Jim Clifford, owner. More than 200 students submitted entries.

Annual Blues Festival Affordable Family Fun

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Five years ago, Joe Hajjar approached the Quincy Center Professional Business Association (QCPBA) with a concept about staging a blues music festival in Quincy.

The owner of the Yard Rock Blues Club in Quincy, Hajjar wanted to create a day for local residents and visitors to enjoy blues music played by talented artists in a peaceful, non-alcoholic setting.

"I really wanted it to be family event, something kids could do with their parents," said Hajjar, a Quincy native. "I also wanted to make it affordable, and at $10 a ticket for adults ($12 at the gate), $2 for kids 6-16 and no charge for kids under 6, parents can afford to hang out with their children."

With the assistance of the QCPBA and the Mayor's Office, Hajjar worked on the project and made it a reality in 1993, when the first City of Presidents Blues Festival was held.

Now in its fifth year, the blues festival has gained widespread recognition for providing a day for people of all ages and backgrounds to visit Quincy and enjoy the blues music, the art and photography show and the multi-cultural food bazaar. It is also the largest family-oriented, alcohol-free music and arts event in New England, said Hajjar.

This year's festival is slated for Sunday, June 29 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Gates open at 11 a.m., with music from noon to 8 p.m.

Headlining this year's event in Mighty Sam McClain, who has twice performed at the festival and is regarded as one of the most talented contemporary blues singers.

Also appearing on the bill are festival veterans Steve Murphy and the Yardrockers ("The host band and central act," said Hajjar), Susan Tedeschi Band, Monster Mike Welch, The Radio Kings, and John Putnam & Used Blues. Madeleine Hall & The Rhythm Hounds with Chris "Stoval" Brown will make their second appearance at the festival.

Playing the festival for the first time will be The Swinging Steaks, The Fat City Band, Young Neil & The Vipers, Paul Rishell & Annie Raines, and Russ Costa.

"Young Neil is one of the hottest guitarists in Providence, Rishell & Raines are the top acoustic act in New England and Costa is a Quincy High graduate, a guitarist and a well-known blues and rock band leader," said Hajjar. "Every act we have is one that people want to see play; this is a major talent show."

Costa is not the only local musician playing the festival. Murphy (guitarist) and Tony Mathews (saxophone) of Steve Murphy and the Yardrockers are also Quincy High graduates and The Swinging Steaks are led by Quincy native Jimmy Gambino. The Fat City Band, featuring the vocals of Quincy's Paul Redmond, is one of the most accomplished roadhouse bands in the area, said Hajjar.

Joe Lamparelli, a Quincy businessman, comes to the festival every year dressed in a tuxedo and opens the show with a rendition of the national anthem.

Emcees for the event will be Holly Harris of WBOS-FM, a WC Handy Award winner, and Peter Black of WATD-FM.

The festival will include a juried photography and art show presented by the Quincy Art Association (QAA) and Presidential Camera. John Black, a member of the QAA and owner of Presidential Camera, will oversee the photography and art show.

Proceeds from the festival go to the City of Quincy to promote tourism and future special events. It features the best blues acts in N.E., each of which has played at the award-winning Yard Rock Blues Club.

Hajjar, who along with the Yard Rock produces the festival every year, thanked a long list of sponsors and volunteers for all their cooperation, dedication, and tireless efforts.

"So many people behind the scenes help me put this together every year," he said. "I've been very lucky to be so well-received by the people I go to seek help from. Nearly everyone I've spoken to has helped in one way or another, and I'm very grateful to all of them."

"I especially want to thank Bernice Mader of the Mayor's Office, who has been the go-between person every year. She helps write letters and is a major contributor to the festival's success."

Hajjar's family also gets involved in the festival. His oldest son, Joe, 26, and daughter, Nicole, 24, coordinate approximately 70 volunteers from the Quincy Housing Authority and the Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Church. Also, 30 of their friends serve as volunteer staff management.

Another group of volunteers Hajjar cited for their annual contribution is Quincy Emergency Management, headed by Tony Siciliano.

"Not enough can be said about Tony," he said. "He's at 10 places at one, doing whatever he can to help. He and the field of volunteer auxiliary police aid us with parking detail, among other things. Tony is one of Quincy's best assets."

From the Planning Department, Angelito Santos and Matthew Walsh helped Hajjar create a computer-generated budget plan.

"They gave it the real professional business look it needed, which makes it a lot easier to keep track of finances," said Hajjar.

Maria Magarolas of Axion Graphics in Quincy created the festival flyer and South Shore Printing in Quincy gives Hajjar and his staff "free reign of the printing shop; they've been very generous with whatever I've needed from day one."

Hajjar also thanked Tom Koch of the Quincy Park Department, the Quincy High School and North Quincy High School Boosters and Continental Cablevision.

Among the sponsors lending a helping hand to the festival are the Greater Boston Tourism and Convention Bureau, Signature Signs, Stop & Shop, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Strawberries record stores and Quincy Telemessaging.

"With the Greater Boston Tourism and Convention Bureau, a major sponsor has joined our team," he said. "Over at Signature Signs, Chris Wilson and his wife, Jane, have donated over $3,000 for signs. They're major sponsors every year who help give the festival the look the community sees.

"Stop & Shop-donated courtesy booths for professional ticket outlets and provide amenities for the artists backstage. Harvard Pilgrim Health Care has stepped forward and covered the cost of t-shirts and hats for volunteers, along with providing printing and other services."

Along with the Strawberries record store in Quincy, all 110 outlets in New England are selling tickets to the festival, according to Hajjar. Quincy Telemessaging is providing 24-hour phone service at 376-3676, which is the number to call for information or to purchase tickets. For more information, call 472-9383 after 2 p.m.

Tickets are also available at The Yard Rock Blues Club, 132 East Howard St., and all South Shore Stop & Shops.

Other sponsors include The City of Quincy, The Patriot Ledger, WBOS, WATD, Bank of Boston, Zildjian, Blues Audience and Boston Blues Society.

With four festivals in the books and a fifth one on the way, what does Hajjar believe the festival has accomplished for the city?

"I think it's become almost a 'Woodstock' for families," he said. "It's for the benefit of the City of Quincy, and is one of the events that helps show the city and its people in the finest light. That's the image I'd like to create, that Quincy is a great place to visit and have a good time."

Plans To Increase Fleet, Staff

Fallon Awarded 911 Contract

Fallon Ambulance Service has been awarded a three-year contract to provide 911 municipal and ambulance ambulance services in Quincy.

Peter Racicot, marketing director for Fallon, estimates the contract with Quincy will mean between 15 and 30 ambulance runs per day. Under the agreement, the company is required to provide an additional three vehicles, two offering Advanced Life Support (ALS) and one with Basic Life Support (BLS).

Racicot said the his company will exceed that number, and increase its ambulance fleet, currently at 64, by between seven and 10 vehicles. Additionally, the company expects to increase its staffing by between 20 and 40 employees, and the firm will add a Quincy office.

Fallon Ambulance, a 60-year-old, three-generation family-run business, won the contract against competition from American Medical Responses Inc., the national's largest ambulance company and current provider of Quincy's ambulance services. Under the new arrangement, Quincy Hospital will be responsible for the city and all requests from Quincy Hospital.

"Quincy Hospital staff and representatives from the city's various departments spent a great deal of time reviewing and evaluating the proposals," said Doris Sinkevich, RN, MS, vice president of patient services at Quincy Hospital.

"The selection of Fallon Ambulance was based on the strength of their proposal. This is an essential service for this community, and we considered this selection with the utmost concern," she said.

Racicot said the company will launch a number of additional community programs to benefit residents, the Charles A. Bemazzani Elementary School in Quincy. The ambulance company works with students at that school to help them learn more about the world of business and work.

Fallon also provides ambulance tours, instruction in emergency medical care such as cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), participation in health fairs, and field trips to ambulance headquarters.

Fallon Ambulance participates in a number of outreach programs, including the QUIL (Quincy Independent Living and Learning) program, a non-profit organization that assists adults with developmental disabilities. Additionally, the company provides free airport-to-hospital transportation for children who have been flown to Boston for medical treatment under the American Airlines "Miles for Kids" program, and this year launched a "Night Safety" program in conjunction with Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Week.

Mullen, whose wife Mary was on hand for the presentation, received a standing ovation from those in the Council Chambers as he accepted his award. Characteristically, he offered only a few modest words about his career.

After the meeting, he added, "It's been an honor to serve the City of Quincy, and a great honor to serve the Quincy Police Department. I think we're one of the outstanding departments in the Commonwealth."

Kolson said Mullen will be honored by the city again when a retirement party is held for him Sept. 11.

She is a volunteer for the American Cancer Society's Reach to Recovery Program, and also serves as a board member and advisor to the Encore Program at the YMCA in Boston. Gale has made over 100 appearances to address health and self-advocacy issues.

Since Donna Pimental was diagnosed with breast cancer, she and her husband,

The Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women opened at Quincy Hospital earlier this year. It houses two mammography suites, two ultrasound rooms, and an education area.

The staff is comprised of only female technologists certified by the American Registry of Radiological Technologists with advanced certification in mammography. The center was designed to provide a comfortable, private, and confidential environment for women.

IS DIETING DANGEROUS?

When the news hit that "yo-yo" dieting could be worse for your health than staying overweight, more than a few dieters probably turned in their calorie counters. They may want to get out their scales again, though. An analysis by the National Institutes of Health of 30 years' worth of studies has concluded that the hazards of "weight cycling" (losing weight, gaining it back, etc.) have been exaggerated. Contrary to popular belief, weight cycling was not found to lower metabolism, decrease muscle, add fat, or raise the risk of heart disease and diabetes. The documented dangers of obesity including the risks of heart disease and diabetes - far outweigh any possible damage done by up-and-down dieting.

P.S. Extreme dieting or use of diet products CAN be dangerous. Discuss any significant dietary changes with your doctor.

Keeping your weight fairly even is actually helpful for emotional reasons as well. One can enjoy what one eats without overfocusing on it all the time and feeling the guilt that can accompany dieting. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I do everything possible to ensure your good health. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're at 700 Congress St. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550.

Kevin Coughlin Candidate For School Committee

Kevin Coughlin of 19 Small St., North Quincy, announces his candidacy for School Committee.

Coughlin is president of the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association and vice chairman of the Quincy Family Council. A lifelong resident of the city and a community activist, he has twice been nominated for Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year" and was honored last year as a "Community Hero" for his efforts in the area of young substance prevention.

Concerned about the easy availability of alcohol to youth and the desensitizing of children to alcohol use and abuse, he and Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott led a fight against the granting of a beer and wine license to Stop & Shop in North Quincy, taking the battle to City Hall and the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

Coughlin is a proactive member of the Montclair School PTO and a member of the Parent Advisory Council and the Atlantic Middle School PTO. He has been an advocate of school improvement in the areas of infrastructure, technology and the maintaining of reasonable class size. He has testified before the School Committee, City Council and other municipal and state boards regarding issues affecting children and families.

An assistant chief probation officer with the Middlesex Probate and Family Court where he has worked for 18 years, he recently received approval from Chief Justice John Irwin to seek elective office, approval that is required for certain judicial employees. He has been recognized by judges, members of the Bar Association and mental health professionals, including the director of Massachusetts General Hospital's Children and the Law Program for his career of advocacy on behalf of children and families.

Coughlin is a director of the Quincy Lions Club, outside guard for Council 180, Knights of Columbus, and a coach for Sacred Heart Youth Basketball.

A graduate of Boston College High School and Boston University, he is married to Domenica Coughlin, a former teacher and a licensed child care provider. They have three children: Maria, James and Matthew.

A formal campaign announcement and fundraiser will be held Tuesday, June 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus, Hancock St. All are invited.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

NOT THE BEST OF INTENTIONS

Negligence may be the more common tort (civil wrongdoing), but intentional torts also cover a wide range of injuries. Such willful torts as assault and battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, false arrest, trespass, nuisance, and invasion of privacy are all undertaken with the desire to bring about a particular result. When this result proves to be injurious to another person, the injured party may have reason to file a civil suit. Potential plaintiffs should bear in mind that the time they have in which to sue (statute of limitations) is usually shorter than those pertaining to negligence actions. Thus, it is in the injured party's best interest to seek the counsel of an attorney as soon as possible after suffering an injury due to an intentional act. Hint: Defamation of character by virtue of the written word (libel) or the spoken word (slander) are grounds for bringing a legal action.

Today there are more attorneys than ever to choose from, and we want our clients to know why they should choose us rather than other law offices. In short, we try to treat clients the way we would want to be treated if we were the client and not the attorney. With the complexities of the law and society, you need a lawyer with both experience and a track record of success. Call 773-2880 today to schedule a free consultation. We're located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

The Facts About Braces

By DR. FRED ATTARZADEH

If you're already decided to get braces, you've made a wise choice, not only for the look of your smile, but for a lifetime of dental health.

If you're just thinking about braces, we hope the information provided here will help you with your decision.

Whether you are considering braces to correct teeth, jaw or gum problems, or just to have a nicer smile, there are important things to know and understand before making your decision.

What Are Braces?

Braces are specially designed oral appliances developed to move and gently align the teeth into their proper positions. Braces consist of brackets or bands and wires. The brackets are bonded to the teeth by adhesives and serve as handles for the doctor to grab the teeth. The wires, commonly referred to as arch wires, are what connect the brackets and move the teeth.

The science of studying, diagnosing and treating misaligned teeth and jaws is called orthodontics. Dentists who continue for two additional years of very specialized study in this field are called orthodontists.

How Do I Know

If I Need Braces?

Are your teeth noticeably crooked? It is estimated that more than 50 percent of the population could benefit from some type of orthodontic treatment.

Do you have gaps between teeth due to lost primary or permanent teeth? Are your teeth crowded? (If it is difficult or impossible to floss, your teeth may be crowded.) Do you have an overbite, vertical overlapping or upper teeth over lower teeth; an overjet, horizontal projection of upper teeth beyond the lower teeth; or an open bite where some teeth cannot be brought into contact with opposing teeth. Do you have difficulty chewing your food?

Other signs that braces might be appropriate treatment are chronic headaches, neck or jaw pain, and/or clicking sounds when chew, all of which can be symptomatic of temporomandibular joint syndrome (TMJ). Finally, if you are hesitant to smile, laugh or even talk in public, because of the way your teeth look, it is time to seriously consider braces.

Many tooth, jaw and gum problems are not detectable to the non-professional. An orthodontic specialist is the most reliable source for proper diagnosis and treatment.

Why Are Braces Important?

Braces lead to a good feeling about your appearance. This improves your confidence and self-esteem. Equally important, your straightened teeth 1) make cleaning easier, thus reducing the chance of gum disease; 2) prevent uneven wear on teeth; 3) help to correct problems such as TMJ and 4) create a healthy environment for your teeth to last a lifetime. With proper care, they can!

[Dr. Fred Attarzadeh is a Boston University School of Graduate Dentistry graduate who achieved his orthodontic special program from Tufts University School of Dental Medicine in 1981. He has over 25 years of experience in teaching, research and practice. Currently, he is in private practice at 1253 Hancock St., Quincy.]

Cahill Candidate For Re-Election To Council

Tim Cahill, a five-term member of the Quincy City Council and current Norfolk County treasurer, announces he is seeking a sixth term as councillor-at-large.

Cahill, 38, is the second oldest of Theresa and Paul Cahill's nine children who grew up at 35 Packard Lane, Southwest Quincy. He and his wife, Tina, and four daughters live at 51 Grenwood Rd.

First elected to the City Council in 1987, Cahill has served on a variety of committees, including chairing the Downtown Economic Development and Finance Committees. Early in his career he focused on downtown revitalization. Since then he has concentrated on keeping city costs down while providing better than adequate services for taxpayers.

Since he chaired his

first Finance Committee meeting, Cahill has overseen budgets that have not required the city to raise tax rates two years in a row and only minimally increasing them this past year.

Cahill has also been instrumental in starting and continuing the city's "Adopt-An-Island" program which he said played an integral role in focusing the city on beautification. The past two years he has been a leading advocate for the Thomas Crane Public Library expansion project.

"When I was first elected 10 years ago, we were coming to the end of an era of cost cutting, school closings and consolidations. Now over the past few years we have begun to rebuild, to restore and even to expand; especially with regards to public education.

"As the only candidate for councillor-at-large with children in the public school system I seek to be a voice for that growth within the tax-paying limits of our citizens," Cahill said.

Before being elected Norfolk County treasurer last fall, Cahill worked at North American Security. Previously, he founded and operated Handshakes Cafe in Quincy Square for over a decade.

Carleton LaRoche Honored For Volunteer Work With Veterans

Carleton A. LaRoche of Quincy was recently presented an award from the VA Medical Center, Boston, for his volunteer work with veterans.

LaRoche, an Army veteran, volunteers at the hospital by greeting patients and assisting them to clinic appointments.

"Volunteers such as Mr. LaRoche are vital to our success in providing veterans health care," said Dr. Elwood Headley, medical center director. "These people are making a dynamic difference in our medical center and outpatient clinics."

The Boston VA Medical Center is part of a comprehensive, integrated system of health care, providing high quality clinical programs and services to veterans throughout New England. The center, affiliated with Boston University School of Medicine, consists of two outpatient clinics in Boston and Lowell.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Are You A Wall Knocker?

(NAPS)—Are you a wall knocker? That's a term real estate people use to describe house hunters who knock on walls, listen for sounds and sniff around corners. These househunters would get better value if they knew what to knock and listen for. For example, while looking at the beauty of the kitchen and master bedroom and bathroom in a model home, or while viewing plans, industry experts suggest buyers thoroughly examine the structural construction and materials to be used in the building of their new homes.

"What it really comes down to is asking builders lots of questions and coming armed with information," explains David Boivin, vice president of marketing for building products manufacturer CertainTeed Corporation.

For instance, while quality can be easily demonstrated via such items as a hardwood floor or brand of appliance, some things within a home can be hidden or overlooked because they are not easily seen. One example of this is insulation. Insulation is usually not visible to the potential buyer, especially in sidewalls. How does a homeowner then know what material is in the wall and what the quality of the product is? This is especially important when you consider that insulation is a product that must be installed correctly otherwise thermal performance is sacrificed.

To ensure high quality insulation installations, the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) Research Center has developed a Certified Contractor Program, the only program of its kind where an independent third party certifies the installation of insulation in new homes.

"This program is setting new quality standards in the housing industry for the installation of insulation," explains Liza Bowles, president of the NAHB Research Center. "Now home builders that use a certified insulation contractor and the buyers that purchase from these builders are assured of the overall quality of the insulation in their houses."

In only a year in operation nearly 100 insulation contractors have been certified in the program across the country and the NAHB Research Center is looking to expand the effort into other subcontracting fields.

Therefore when looking at prospective new homes or discussing a custom home with your builder ask him if he uses a certified contractor, as they have established a recognized quality system, effectively trained their employees and passed a series of stringent criteria in a thorough third-party audit.

For a brochure on the Certified Program or a list of local certified insulation contractors call 1-800-782-8777 or visit the Institute on the Internet at <http://www.certainteed.com>.

How to Select the Right Door To Dress Up Your Home

(NU) - You can dress up your home with a minimum of fuss and expense merely by changing your doors.

But there is a staggering array of decorative door models to choose from. Each style lends a special personality to a room.

Do you know how to select the door that's right for the space and light requirements of the room?

The experts at Wing Industries offer the following suggestions.

- Frosted glass panels provide privacy while allowing more light to flow into a room — ideal for the bedroom and bath.

- Decorative glass doors add interesting textures to the walls of a long hallway.

- Louvered doors help air circulate and are a good choice for laundry rooms or bath pantries. They also provide "breathing room" to separate sections of a master bathroom.

- Mirrored doors are an ideal way to cover long expanse of wall space and make a small room seem larger and brighter.

- Cafe doors are a great way to divide dining rooms and kitchens, dressing rooms and bedrooms, and hallways and family rooms.

- French style doors add elegance to a room and provide soundproofing while sharing light between rooms. Frosted models provide additional privacy.

Once you've selected the door style you want, then choose the door type. Bifold doors and sliders provide additional room in tight spaces. Solid passage doors provide better sound proofing, have a more sturdy feel and can be locked.

Next, if you are choosing a prehung passage door, determine the door swing you need. When the door opens toward you and the knob is on the left, it is a left hand swing. When the door opens toward you and the knob is on the right, it is a right hand swing.

Measure both the height and width of your finished opening in two places and record the smaller of each pair of measurements.

Many of Wing Industries doors are stocked in standard sizes at your local home improvement store. If not, they can be special ordered.

For a free brochure, call 1-800-ASK-WING.

Five Basic Roof Care Tips

News USA

(NU) - A new roof that's chosen carefully and installed correctly should require minimal maintenance. And to assure it will offer years of value and quality service, the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association (ARMA) offers these tips:

- Inspect your roof at least once a year for possible damage.

- Keep downspouts, gutters and roof surfaces free of leaves, twigs and other litter so water will drain freely.

- Never allow water from a downspout to pour onto the roof below to avoid excessive loss of protective mineral granules; keep the downspout connected to the gutter that drains the lower roof.

- Keep nearby trees trimmed to prevent scuffing of the roof by branches or possible damage from falling limbs. Keep any climbing roses or vines trimmed.

- Don't walk on the roof. It's dangerous and could damage the shingles. If you need to check on the condition of the roof, use binoculars as you circle the roof from the ground. When necessary to work on the roof, use ladders, workboards or scaffolding.

Mayor JAMES SHEETS
"You have created a living reminder of those values."

Partnership which raised $60,000 for the bronze statue sculpted by Lloyd Lillie.

Located next to United First Parish Church where Abigail's remains are held, the statue sits on a base of Quincy granite. Set in 1776, it depicts her at age 32 standing with her 10 year-old son, John Quincy, who would later follow in the footsteps of his father, John Adams, to become a U.S. president.

"We are very proud that this is the day it is going to be unveiled," said Keohane, who noted that the day was also the 50th anniversary of the Abigail Adams Society in Weymouth, some of whose members were in attendance.

"It is also the 200th anniversary of Abigail Adams being a First Lady for our country," said Keohane, who noted the project began with an idea three years ago.

The Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister of United First Parish church, described the area where the statue is located at the time when Abigail lived.

"We might meet Abigail Adams right in this very place," said Rev. Bennett. "For 54 years, this was her home. And she would walk this place and she would greet her fellow townspeople and gather the news of the day and speak her mind, no doubt.

"As we now dedicate this statue in honor of Abigail Adams and her son, John Quincy Adams, may the spirit that filled their lives inspire us today."

Mayor James Sheets whose office across the street at City Hall affords a view of the statue, said the sculpture would speak not only to this generation but also to future generations.

"You have not simply provided us with a statue made in bronze, you have created a living reminder of those values that bind all generations of Americans together, values that shall ever keep this nation strong and free."

Peak said that Abigail would smile that the four bibles stolen last year from the Adams National Historic Site's library a few miles away will be returned.

She would also be happy with the local community, according to Peak.

"It's very obvious to me that you are a part of that community and excitement that she wanted to instill, that spirit and energy to forge ahead, to have vision to the future. And you are Abigail Adams hope for the future."

Featured speaker Abigail Adams Browne, a direct descendant of Abigail Adams, said that she has never lived in Quincy.

"But I must have been here and to the church and to the Old House 100-150 times in my life. And whenever I'm here, I feel like I'm returning home."

Browne told a story of a six-year old Abigail cutting circles out of her brand new white dress in an attempt to hide the ink spots that she had spilled there.

"She was stunned when her mother noticed," said Browne. "But it was that ingenuity that was going to stand her in good stead through the rest of her life.

"She faced more challenges under more extreme circumstances than all of us, I think, probably together. We don't have to go to our well to get our water, and we don't have to kill the animals to get our food. But she did that and at the same time she did so much else."

Browne said, 'She responded to the events of the time, she took part always in her community and in her country. She never stood on the sidelines and said let someone else do it.

"It is a wonderful thing that Quincy is using this ceremony and this statue to honor her. And from all of her descendants, and from all of the family, I would like to thank you."

Browne joined six of Quincy's first ladies in unveiling the statue. Participating in the ceremony were: Joanne Sheets, wife of Mayor James Sheets; Sheila

McIntyre, wife of the late former Mayor James McIntyre; Patricia Hannon, wife of former Mayor Walter Hannon; Louise LaRaia, wife of former Mayor Joseph LaRaia; Shirley Tobin, wife of former Mayor

Arthur Tobin; and Sandra McCauley, wife of former Mayor Francis McCauley.

As the Alumni Band played "American the Beautiful", the women were presented with bouquets of American Beauty Roses, as was Barbara Lilly, wife of the sculptor.

A professor of arts at Boston University, Lillie is known for sculptures such as those of Boston Celtics coach Arnold "Red" Auerbach and Boston Mayor James Michael Curley at Faneuil Hall in Boston.

"This was truly a great honor and I thank you all very much," said Lillie.

McDermott To Host Jimmy Fund Event Saturday

Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott will host the sixth annual Kick Off The Summer Classic Saturday at The Waterworks in Marina Bay.

All proceeds will directly benefit the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC).

The PMC, now in its 17th year, is a 192-mile bike ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown and will be held Aug. 2 and 3. It serves as the largest single fundraiser for the Jimmy Fund of the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, having raised over $21 million for cancer research and treatment.

McDermott has been participating in the ride for the past six years, raising over $10,000 with his brother Christopher who also rides.

"This event is truly remarkable," said McDermott. "Over 2,000 rides, 75,000 sponsors, and countless volunteers make PMC weekend a unique event."

The McDermott brothers dedicate their ride every year to their mother, Patricia, who died from cancer in

PATRICK McDERMOTT
December 1989.

"There has been no greater pain in my life than the loss of my mother," he said. "To lose her life at such a young age is indeed a tragedy."

McDermott also commented on the sadness of the recent death of his uncle, Paul Morris of Weymouth, who also lost his struggle with the disease.

"Cancer does not discriminate," he said. "It hits people of all ages and races. I unfortunately have seen first-hand the devastating effect this disease has on families. I just want to try to do my part to see the day when we can declare a full victory over this disease."

The theme for this year's event at The Waterworks is "Eight Hours, Eight Bands, Eight Bucks" (see the ad on this page for more information). Tickets are available at The Waterworks, 689-0600, or by calling McDermott at 471-3366.

Those unable to attend who would like to contribute can forward checks made payable to "PMC/Jimmy Fund" to 146 Taylor St., Quincy, MA 02170 c/o Patrick McDermott.

canine from the Quincy, Braintree, Sandwich and Stoughton police departments and the Norfolk and Plymouth County Sheriff's Departments. No arrests were made.

The second action, "Operation Flush," took place at Quincy High School. Due to the heat and work load at the time, the dogs were unable to function properly. However, Mahoney said, by placing the canines and activating cruiser blue lights in front of the school, authorities were able to intimidate students into dumping illegal substances into toilets and flushing them—actions witnessed by the undercover investigator.

Mahoney also noted that he took offense at a story in The Patriot Ledger that referred to the undercover operation as a "sting." He said it reminded him of the movie "The Sting," in which a group of con men steal money from a ruthless gangster.

"The reason for Operation Graduation II was not to steal money from the bad guys, like in the movie, but rather to gather intelligence on the existence of illegal substances, gang activity and to identify the presence of weapons," he said. "The undercover person was to, and did, act in a passive mode obtaining the data. He was not, as instructed, carrying a weapon, and he did not act in an enforcement capacity."

"The undercover person did not make any friend, nor did he socialize with any of the dealers. He acted in an undercover capacity to gather for the Quincy Police Department Narcotics Unit tasked to gather narcotics intelligence, identify narcotics dealers, purchase illegal drugs from traffickers and to infiltrate any gang or other criminal activity within the Quincy school system."

The Ledger also ran a follow-up story in which a parent described the undercover investigator's actions as "entrapment." Mahoney said that is not the case, and that he believes the majority of parents know officials were taking necessary action to protect the overwhelming majority of law-abiding students.

The undercover operation was the fifth conducted in the schools since 1970. The undercover investigator dug up information on where he could buy drugs and got offers from 17 youths who were working individually, not together, according to Mahoney.

The drug deals were hand-to-hand sales with the undercover man. Mahoney said they were made, in most cases, inside the school but completed on street corners or at students' homes. No drugs were found on school property, he noted.

The 17 arrested, who include 12 juveniles and five adults, are all students at Quincy High or North Quincy High School. They were arrested either at school or at home and arraigned June 6, 9 and 10. All were released on their promise to return to court.

The five adults arrested and the charges they face include:

•Eric Hanlon, 19, of 346 Granite St.: distribution of marijuana, distributing a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school zone, and conspiracy to violate drug laws.

•Scott Pyer, 19, of 19 Lenox St.: distribution of marijuana within 1,000 feet of a school zone.

•John Stappen, 18, of 1 Filbert St.: possession of marijuana, possession of marijuana with the intent to distribute, distribution of LSD, and distributing a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school zone.

•Lenny Wallace, 18, of 45 Broad Ave.: possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and distributing a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school zone.

•Erin Zanon, 18, of 43 Trafford St.: distributing marijuana and distributing a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school zone.

Of the 12 juveniles, seven were charged with possession of marijuana, one was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, three were charged with distributing marijuana, distributing a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school zone, and conspiracy to violate drug laws; and one was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, distribution of a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a school zone, and conspiracy to violate drug laws.

The case is being prosecuted by the Norfolk County district attorney's office.

Mahoney noted that the investigation was handled on a "need to know" basis. For instance, the only school official other than Mahoney to know about the operation was School Supt. Eugene Creedon. Others who knew included Mayor James Sheets and Police Chief Francis Mullen.

In addition, the district attorney's office was not brought in until after the arrests were made, Mahoney said.

A number of officials, including Mahoney, Sheets, Mullen, Norfolk County Sheriff Jack Flood, City Council and School Committee members and others voiced support of the investigation at a June 11 press conference.

Officials said the investigation showed more positive results than the last such operation five years ago, which ended in arrests for possession of guns, robbery of a pedestrian, and attempts to sell cocaine, LSD and marijuana. Those at the press conference said the fact that only 17 were arrested this time around, mainly on marijuana charges—with nearly 9,000 students in the Quincy Public Schools—shows the city's DARE (Drug Awareness Resistance Education) programs and other efforts to curb such activities are working.

Timely Hitting, Strong Pitching Key Morrisette

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Undeclared through its first five games, the Morrisette American Legion team visited Braintree last night (Wednesday) at 7:30. Tonight (Thursday) at 8, Morrisette hosts West Roxbury.

Next Monday night at 8, Morrisette takes on visiting Randolph and next Wednesday night at 8, Cohasset visits Morrisette. All home games are at Adams Field.

Morrisette picked up its fifth win, edging visiting Weymouth, 8-6, Monday night at Adams Field. Lefty Rob Celata earned his second victory, giving up six runs on two hits while striking out nine and walking three.

John Sullivan was the hitting star for the winners, collecting a single, double and triple in three at-bats and driving in three runs. Brian Beaton added two hits, including a double, and two RBI. Matt McLoughlin belted a triple and a single and scored two runs.

Weymouth jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first, taking advantage of a walk, an error, two stolen bases and a wild pitch. Celata struck out the side and did not allow a hit in the inning.

The home team struck back in its half of the first, scoring six runs on seven hits. Eric Fagan drew a leadoff walk, moved to second on McLoughlin's single and scored on a Beaton single. One out later, Sullivan drove McLoughlin and Beaton home with a line drive double for a 3-2 lead.

Following a Ray Cattaneo single, Paul Marnikovic singled home Sullivan. Cattaneo scored on a wild pitch and Marnikovic crossed the plate for the sixth run on an Eric Wirtz single.

"I'm very pleased with how we're hitting the ball," said Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo. "We got those runs right back, and that was the game right there."

Morrisette added to its lead with a two-run second. McLoughlin led off with a triple and scored on a Beaton double. Sullivan picked up his third RBI with a sharp single, driving in Jim Cunio, who had reached on fielder's choice. Morrisette led, 8-2, after two innings.

The visitors did not give up, rallying for three runs in the third. The first two batters walked and scored on a double by Jay Estano. Estano later crossed the plate when Marnikovic bobbled a grounder, cutting the lead to 8-5.

In the sixth, Weymouth added a run when Estano tripled to right and scored on a wild pitch. Celata regained his composure and struck out the final two batter of the inning to halt the rally.

"Rob beared down when he had to," said Cattaneo. "He got some big outs in key situations."

Closer Chad Feetham, who has hurled three perfect innings this season, pitched the seventh and struck out two of the three batters he faced to preserve the victory.

"It's great to have a kid like that, especially in close games," said Cattaneo. "He does a great job not letting anyone on base, just goes out there and gets it done. He's a big plus, consistently closing out games for us."

Last Sunday against visiting Canton, Mark Kelly struck out eight, yielded two hits and an unearned run in six innings as Morrisette

Quincy Drops Three After Winning Opener

Following a victory in its season opener, the Quincy American Legion baseball team has lost three in a row, two to Cohasset and one to Morrisette.

Quincy will seek to end its current losing skid Friday when it takes on visiting Braintree at Adams Field at 8 p.m.

Including Friday's contest, Quincy plays four games in four days. Saturday at 7:30 p.m., Quincy hosts Randolph. Sunday at 4 p.m., Quincy travels to Weymouth in a makeup of the original season opener. Monday at 5:45 p.m., Quincy visits Milton.

Next Thursday (June 26) at 5:45 p.m., Quincy goes up against host Canton.

In a 7-4 loss to host Cohasset on Monday, Quincy was paced offensively by Matt Kane (one for three, stolen base, walk, run), Greg Edgar (one for two, two walks), Adam Delorey (one for three, run, RBI), Andy Byrne (two for two, stolen base, run), Mike Eddy (single, RBI) and Steve Wiltshire (single, run).

Quincy took a 1-0 lead in its first at-bat when Kane walked, stole second and third and scored on an errant throw by the Cohasset catcher.

Starting pitcher Mike Eddy, who was charged with the loss, took a 1-0 lead into the third. Cohasset then scored four times in the inning to go ahead, 4-1.

The visitors answered with two runs in the fourth on three hits. Wiltshire singled and scored on Delorey's double and Eddy singled in Delorey to cut the lead to 4-3.

Cohasset padded its lead with single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. The closest Quincy would get in the later innings would be 6-4, when Byrne doubled, moved to third on an error and scored on a wild pitch in the sixth.

For Quincy, Eddy pitched four innings, allowing six runs on five hits with four strikeouts and four walks. Reliever Bryan Linskey tossed two innings, yielding one run on two hits while striking out two and walking three.

The Brodeur Construction Co. Pirates continue their winning ways, picking up win No. 8. The Pirates are a close-knit team, and with the acquisition of "Little John," brother of Pirate Tom Pasquantonio, the Pirates have four sets of brothers. Matt and Dan Quigley, Craig and Sam Calley, and Ted and Dave Finnegan comprise virtually half of the Pirate roster.

Competing during the summer and working hard on fundamentals is the hallmark of this team. Travel, scheduling, hours of practice and dedication to the game is the goal of these players. They work hard, take the game seriously, yet have fun and enjoy the rewards of playing well. Their efforts are very much appreciated by parents, fans and coaches.

Veteran players are encouraged to fully develop their skills and gain confidence and seasoning in this three-year farm league program. Ballplayers can develop fully once they learn to concentrate, communicate and anticipate. Emphasis is placed on their final year which is crucial to their maturing process. They paid their dues then they will be able to set an example to younger players waiting their turn.

On a lighter note, Chris Akoury continues to handle his pitchers well as the Pirates' main signal-caller. Veteran Steve Mochtman continues to improve and is working hard at his game. Craig Perry, Anthony Adams, Jeff Walgreen and Dave Hennessey contribute often and are very much a part of the Pirates' success. Drew Loud has compiled five wins and three saves while relinquishing only one hit all season. Craig Calley is developing his pitching skills and has notched three wins and two saves. First baseman Matt Quigley has risen to the occasion on the mound, earning two saves while displaying excellent control.

Dave Djerf, Quigley, Craig Calley and Loud have been on a tear at the plate. They comprise the heart of the Pirate lineup and are a force to be reckoned with. They just blister the ball.

edged Canton, 2-1. Feetham earned the save, pitching a perfect seventh.

"Billy Cochran (pitching coach) has done a heck of a job with that staff," said Gus Russo, Morrisette athletic officer. "He's been working with Mark on keeping the ball down and throwing strikes, and he did a lot of that against Canton."

Morrisette scored both of its runs in the first inning on three singles and an error. Chris Bregoli and McLoughlin singled to start the game. One out later, Cunio singled to load the bases.

The next batter, Sullivan, hit a grounder to the second baseman, who threw wildly past first base, allowing Bregoli and McLoughlin to cross the plate for a 2-0 lead. Two singles by Cavanaugh were all the offense Morrisette would muster the rest of the game.

Last Thursday at Adams Field, Morrisette erupted for 10 runs in the second en route to a 24-2 victory over rival Quincy. McLoughlin paced the offense, going four for four with four RBI. Sullivan and Walker both added two hits with one RBI and Beaton drove in with a double. Cattaneo, Fagan and Marnikovic each collected a hit and two RBI.

Ryan Herlihy was the winning pitcher, going four innings and allowing two runs on four hits. He also struck out nine and walked one. Shawn Manning hurled two scoreless innings and Feetham struck out two in one inning of work to close out the game.

In Morrisette's 7-1 triumph over visiting Milton last Tuesday, Celata picked up his first win, hurling a complete game five-hitter with 10 strikeouts and three walks. Bregoli (two for three, two RBI, run), McLoughlin (two for four, two RBI, run) and Beaton (two RBI) were the offensive leaders.

Last Friday, Quincy hosted Cohasset and lost, 6-4, in nine innings. In his first start, Dan Toland threw five innings of four-hit ball, giving up three runs, striking out three and walking three. Dennis Palardy, the losing pitcher, tossed the last four innings, yielding three runs on eight hits, recording 10 strikeouts and three walks.

Palardy cruised through the sixth, seventh and eighth innings, but Cohasset collected five singles and three runs in the ninth.

"Dennis did his job the first three innings, but we couldn't push anything across," said Quincy head coach Larry Taglieri. "They strung a bunch of singles together and we were done after that."

Trailing 3-0 in the bottom of the fifth, Quincy knotted the game with a three-run inning. Toland and McGann walked and later scored on a double by Greg Peck. Peck then stole third and scored the tying run on an errant throw by Cohasset's catcher.

Quincy battled its rival, Morrisette, last Thursday at Adams Field and came up on the losing end of a 24-2 score. Edgar (three for four, RBI single) sparked Quincy's offense, with assistance from Linskey (RBI single), Toland (triple) and Peck (single).

JUNIOR LEAGUE

Keohane's, Beacon, Burke, Jaehnig, Triumphant

Chris Dolbear doubled, hit a two-run homer and also picked up the win, striking out eight as Keohane topped Kiwanis, 5-2, in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Junior League action.

Ryan Donahue also belted a two-run homer for Keohane's, which scored four runs in the third to build a 5-0 lead. Brendan McDonald made a tremendous catch in center to end a third-inning Kiwanis rally and Adam Terlaja made several outstanding plays.

For Kiwanis, Mark Tucker pitched well, striking out eight, but gave up both two-run homers. He scattered six other hits.

In other action, Beacon came from behind to edge the Elks, 4-3. Bruce Maggio struck out two and earned the victory, while Ryan Feldhoff (double, two singles) and Dean Sandomato (two singles) sparked the Beacon offense. Defensive standouts were Mike Cafano and Paul Lennon.

For the Elks, Rogers took the loss, striking out six. He added two hits, including a triple. Playing well defensively was Josh Hershey.

The Jaehnig Chiropractic Club has been playing solid baseball as of late and currently sits in a third-place tie with a record of 8-4-2.

Patrick O'Brien pitched a complete-game three-hitter with six strikeouts to lead Jaehnig to a 6-2 triumph over Rotary. Derek Keezer hit a double and single and made an outstanding backhand catch and throw from third base. Mark Tobin, Jeff Butts and David Jaehnig each hit safely for the visitors.

Steve Pizzi (two hits, three innings of dominating relief pitching) was the star for Rotary while James Spellman cracked a single.

Kiwanis caught the Jaehnig Club napping and used strong hitting and aggressive baserunning to take advantage of sloppy defense and score five first-inning runs. Fortunately, Butts closed the door with five scoreless innings of one-hit relief with nine strikeouts. The Jaehnig Club chipped away and picked up a 7-5 comeback win. Butts helped his own cause with two hits and scored two runs. Pat O'Brien and David Buttomor also collected two hits while Mike McLaughlin (double, two RBI), Kyle Carmody and Keezer had solid hits.

In a wild and woolly affair, Jaehnig and Keohane's battled to a 10-10 tie. In a game that had just about everything, McLaughlin's clutch, two-out, two-strike double plated the tying run for Jaehnig in the bottom of the sixth (last) inning to send everyone home happy.

Keohane's jumped to a three-run lead only to see Jaehnig come back with four in the third. Keohane's took a 6-4 lead, before Jaehnig tied it in the fourth and went ahead in the fifth. Brendan McDonald's towering last-inning homer ignited Keohane's to a four-run sixth and a seemingly safe three-run lead. However, the never-say-die Jaehnig squad put three runs on the board to forge the tie.

Ben Kelleher and Brian Donovan made outstanding catches in the outfield for Jaehnig. Carmody (four hits-double), Keezer (three hits-double) continued to swing hot bats. Pat Maxey had a single and a big sacrifice fly in the last inning. David Jaehnig's key, two-out single drove in the go-ahead run in the fifth. Butts and Buttomor also singled.

For Keohane's, Kevin O'Connell, Chris Dolbear and Adam Terlaja (two hits apiece) complimented McDonald's offensive outburst. Steve Hettman saved three runs with a running catch and Ryan Donohue was rock solid behind the plate.

The Jaehnig Club wrapped up the week with an offensive eruption, collecting 15 hits to defeat an undermanned Burgin Platter squad, 10-5. Keezer (three for three), O'Brien (two long doubles), Maxey (single, double) and Steve Kelly (two for two) were the big hitters for Jaehnig.

Dave Jaehnig scorched a triple and continued his strong play at shortstop.

Chris Marinilli, Mark Tobin, Buttomor, Carmody and Butts each collected a hit. John Fitzgerald handled a half-dozen chances flawlessly at second. Butts improved to 5-1 as he struck out eight.

Tim Watson and Casey Winters belted fence-scraping doubles for BP while Jim Burke, Bill Eagles and Tony Pejonovic singled. Bob Newcomb had a strong defensive game at second.

In Burke's 13-1 triumph over Rotary, Dan Cosgrove struck out seven and yielded one run on one hit. In the first, Steve O'Brien (two doubles, single) doubled, followed by singles from Cosgrove and his brother Bill to give Burke the lead.

Jake O'Donnell homered, doubled and singled for Burke. The Cosgrove boys and Randy Jacobs all doubled, singled and drove in two runs apiece. Steve Pizzi, George Phipps and Andy McDonough played strong defense.

Brian Rooney scattered seven hits and struck out five for Burke in a 13-4 win over the Police. Rooney helped himself with a single and triple. In the first, Dan Cosgrove (two hits) and John Norton (three hits) singled and Jake O'Donnell (three hits) and Randy Jacobs doubled. Steven Stratz and Steve O'Brien led Burke defensively.

For the Police, Bill Shaw and Paul McAtter had two hits apiece, while Matt Lavery had a strong game behind the plate.

In an 8-4 triumph over the Police, Beacon put four runs on the board in the sixth to pull away. Matt Grazioso, who struck out three, got the win, and Dean Sandomato came on to record the save.

A's, Giants, Red Sox, Yankees All Pick Up League Victories

The Procure Physical Therapy A's rallied from a four-run deficit to upend the Dairy Freeze Yankees, 12-8, in recent St. John's Little League action.

For the A's, Joe Priscella had an excellent game defensively behind the plate, tagging out several runners. His brother, Steve, made an amazing diving catch of a long fly ball hit by Anthony Boyle that fans in attendance said was the "catch of the year."

A's rookies Tom Chermack and Dan Nutley helped the cause, scoring three runs between them from the bottom of the order. Steve Ohlson and Bonnie Hirtle also chipped in with hits. Mike Chermack was outstanding on the mound, allowing one run in three innings.

In other action, James Hutchings collected the game-winning hit in the South Quincy Bocce Club Red Sox' 7-6 triumph over the A's.

The A's used heads up baserunning to take the early 5-3 lead, but struggled at the plate and missed out on several scoring chances. Excellent defense kept the A's in it, turning a double play in the first to halt a Red Sox rally.

Correction: Scott Horigan of the A's was incorrectly identified as Scott Morrison in a recent issue. The Sun regrets the error.

Bolea-Buonfiglio Giants raced out to a 6-0 first-inning lead en route to an 8-4 win over the Gilcoine/Burke Insurance Indians. In the first, giant hitter Chris Kirschner drove home Kelly Powers and Marc "Hollywood" Lopez belted a two-run, ground-rule double to score Kirschner and James Collins. Ray Marchand's long hit to center plated Lopez, and Marchand came around to score on Jimmy Callahan's sac fly. Joe Quigley drove in the sixth run, Jessie Powers, with a hit.

Kirschner tossed the first three innings, allowing two runs and was relieved by Lopez, who gave up two runs in the final three innings to nail down the win. The Giants' record improved to 7-3.

Earlier, the Giants used two big innings to build an 8-0 lead and held off a late rally to defeat the A.H. Campbell & Sons Mets, 8-5. For the Giants, Callahan and Collins scored on a line drive by Lopez, who then scored on Marchand's hit in the first inning. Lopez had the key hit in the third, driving in Mike Leoncello, Callahan and Collins with a long drive. Kelly Powers' strong hit scored Lopez with the inning's fifth and final run.

Continental Cablevision A's edged the Dairy Freeze Yankees, 12-9. For the Yankees, everyone hit well. Ryan Flynn played a good game at third, Shawn McRea excelled at the plate and on the basepaths, with a number of steals. Jared Fontaine pitched a strong final inning.

In a 9-8 seven-inning loss to the SQBC Red Sox, the Yankees' Patrick Mullen was unstoppable stealing a number of bases. Bobby Joelecur played steady defense at second base, and Anthony Boyle and Ryan Lynch were tough to hit on the mound.

Council Approves Grant Application For Shipyard

The City Council Monday night approved a city application for a state "economic opportunity area" grant for the Fore River shipyard.

The grant would make Greek shipbuilder Sotirios Emmanouil eligible for a larger investment tax credit and an extra business deduction for the modernization of the shipyard currently taking place. Emmanouil plans to bring shipbuilding back to the yard.

The council's support comes a month after it gave Emmanouil a five-year, 100 percent property tax abatement.

Should Emmanouil receive the grant, he can claim a 5 percent tax credit instead of the usual 3 percent—and he can take a 10 percent deduction for 10 abandoned buildings contractors are clearing from the 130-acre site.

On July 31, the Town of Braintree will hold a special town meeting to vote on similar tax abatements and an economic grant application for the 35 acres of the shipyard in the town.

Quincy, in addition to the five-year tax break, has contributed a $1 million federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant, and secured a $7.8 million HUD loan guarantee for Emmanouil, who has a $322 proposal to build six double-hulled tankers at the shipyard.

The Fore River shipyard has been closed since the 1986 departure of General Dynamics. The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), which owned the shipyard before Emmanouil, pays the city $2.9 million annually—mainly for mitigation for its sewage sludge processing plant—but no property taxes.

The grant and loan guarantees were approved by HUD last week. The loans will allow Emmanouil's Swampscott-based firm, Massachusetts Heavy Industries, to sell an equal amount of commercial bonds, while the $1 million grant will be used for startup costs.

FleetBank of Boston has given Emmanouil $10.5 million, his first commercial financing, which he used to buy the shipyard earlier this spring from the MWRA. In return, the bank will apparently receive a special break of its own: officials have said the bank may lease a small part of the shipyard for automatic teller machines.

The U.S. Maritime Administration has approved $54.5 million in federal loan guarantees for the shipyard modernization, but still must approve $240 million in guarantees for the tanker construction.

Emmanouil hopes to get those guarantees as soon as possible and lay the keel of his first tanker in November. An estimated 1,000 jobs could result from the reopening of the shipyard.

Councillor Paul Harold was the only councillor to vote against the state grant application Monday night, saying he needs more financial details. But other councillors, including Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond and Councillor Michael Cheney, said the city has nothing to lose and everything to gain by supporting Emmanouil.

Marina Bay Plan Sent To Planning Board

The City Council has sent a revised plan for a Marina Bay development proposed by two partners from Thorndike Development in Braintree to the Quincy Planning Board for its consideration.

The council met in its capacity as a special permit granting authority to discuss the matter Monday night. Councillors agreed that the new project constitutes "a significant and material change" from the previous Thorndike plan.

The council must now hold a public hearing on the matter within 65 days. Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said he wants the hearing to be held after the Planning Board discusses the matter July 16.

If the Planning Board does not offer a favorable recommendation on the project, a council hearing will not be necessary. But if the board supports the plan, the council will take a final vote after the hearing is held.

Atty. David Mahoney, who represents the plan's proponents, said the Conservation Commission and Board of Appeals must also give the project the green light. Mahoney offered councillors a brief presentation on the project Monday night.

The new 152-unit plan calls for 48 single-family homes, 42 townhouses and 62 residential flats to be built on a 20-acre tract off Victory Road. A pedestrian promenade and a village green also are included in the project, which has been dubbed The Landing at Marina Bay.

A previous Thorndike plan for 268 condominiums at the site was rejected last year 8-1 by the City Council. Councillor Michael Cheney dissented, saying the city would likely lose a legal battle if the developer decided to appeal.

Mahoney—who represents Thorndike Development partners Lloyd Geisinger, David Mayfield and Abbott Stillman—told councillors two weeks ago the ultimate course of action chosen by his clients was to reapply with a new proposal, rather than push for the older project through the courts.

Geisinger, whose name is not on the new proposal, sued the city in state Land

Court late last summer after his original condominiums plan, The Meadows, was rejected by the council. Mahoney has said the developers will not pursue it if the new proposal is given a hearing.

After the rejection of The Meadows, a second Thorndike plan to build 74 single-family homes was never submitted because of opposition from the Marina Bay Neighborhood Association.

Mahoney has said the latest plan, which has been submitted by Mayfield and Stillman under the name M.C. Properties Limited Partnership, is more to the liking of neighborhood residents. Among the reasons he cited: the plan is smaller in scale, there is more parking, and the price structure for the units is higher.

Ayers also has said neighbors who attended a neighborhood meeting he held May 22 seemed more satisfied with the new plan.

Mahoney has said he is hopeful all necessary permits can be obtained by the fall and construction can begin by next spring.

Perchard To Replace Retiring Laracy Mullen Appoints New Liquor Inspector

Police Chief Francis Mullen has selected Sgt. Robert Perchard to replace Sgt. Richard Laracy as the city's liquor inspector.

Mullen said Laracy, 65, will retire as the end of the month.

"Needless to say, we're going to miss Dick Laracy," said the chief, who will retire himself in August. "He did a great job. I found him to be a dedicated police officer who did a fine job representing me and reflecting the professionalism of the department."

Laracy has been a member of the department since 1961, a sergeant since 1971, and liquor inspector since 1989.

Perchard, 55, has been on the force since 1970 and a sergeant since 1980.

"He's the guy that I think should take over," said Mullen. "I think he'll do a fine job."

The liquor inspector serves as the liaison between the police chief and the Quincy License Board, working on various investigations for the board out of the police department's detective bureau.

Longtime Patrol Officer Retiring

Police Chief Francis Mullen announces that Ed Blinn, a longtime member of the Quincy Police Department, will retire at the end of June.

Mullen said Blinn, 63, who has been on the force since 1965, served many years working nights as a patrol officer before he began working a desk job a few years ago.

A Thought For The Week

SUPERSTITIONS... Are you a superstitious person? What are your feelings about walking under ladders, avoiding black cats, broken mirrors, knocking on wood?

Superstitions have fretted people with fears and follies a long, long time. The world-wide habit of believing in supernatural influence dates back to Plato's time - 400 years B.C. - perhaps longer. Some people are very superstitious. You will never convince them that superstition may be nothing other than an unfounded idea or a coincidence... In fact, superstitions are often funny and it requires a sense of humor to witness the antics and behavior of some people who are superstitious. Mostly, superstitions are harmless as long as a custom or legend does not disturb a mind with incredulity or contempt of Divine Power.

CITY OF QUINCY

ORDER NO. 97-071

ORDERED:

June 16, 1997

Be it ordained by the City Council that the revised ordinances of the City of Quincy, 1993, as amended be further amended by adding in Chapter Two a new section, Section 2.138, entitled Community Oriented Policing and Problem Solving Commission.

COMMUNITY ORIENTED POLICING AND PROBLEM SOLVING COMMISSION SECTION 2.138.010: PREAMBLE

Over the years, maintaining public order has shifted from being primarily the responsibility of families, communities and individuals — assisted by police officers — to being primarily the responsibility of the police alone. In the process, enforcing laws and exacting penalties have become the principal if not the sole response to public order and safety issues.

Community Policing reverses that trend by recognizing that the community at large is responsible for the conditions that generate crime. Deterrence, law enforcement and incarceration, by themselves cannot resolve the underlying conditions that cause crime and social disorder. In fact, specific responsible people within the community have as much to do with the overall policing of the community and the regulation of conduct as uniformed police officers.

To cultivate this transition, an educational process and heightening of awareness must take place. The community must accept and share responsibility with the police for social order and both must work cooperatively in order to identify problems and develop pro-active community wide solutions. The police must acknowledge that they cannot do the job alone—recognize that they have valuable resources available to them within the community and understand that the community must be involved in the problem solving process. In turn, government and community leaders must recognize and accept responsibility for keeping their neighborhoods safe. Communities must take a unified stand against crime, violence and disregard for the law. The police department must help build stronger, more safe-sufficient communities — communities in which crime and disorder will not thrive.

Community Policing is democracy in action. All who share a concern for the welfare of the neighborhood should bear responsibility for safeguarding that welfare.

SECTION 2.138.020: ESTABLISHMENT, MEMBERSHIP, TERM AND SHARE

There shall be a community oriented policing and problem solving commission (hereinafter referred to as THE COMMISSION consisting of nineteen (19) members appointed by the Mayor of the City of Quincy unless otherwise noted. Commission members shall include permanent members and private members. The following permanent members shall serve on the Commission until their successor is appointed: Police and Fire Chiefs, Executive Director of Park Department, Director of Recreation, Superintendent of Schools, City of Quincy Captain Community Policing, City of Quincy President Police Patrolmans Union and a Community Police Officer appointed by the City of Quincy Chief of Police. The following members shall be asked to serve on the Commission until their successor is appointed - the Executive Director of the Quincy Housing Authority, an individual from the Probation Department of the Quincy District Court appointed by the Presiding Justice of the Quincy District Court, an individual from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department appointed by the Norfolk County Sheriff, a representative from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Division of Social Services, and an individual from the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office appointed by the Norfolk County District Attorney. In addition, the Mayor shall make every effort to appoint three (3) private members from the following: Court System, Social Service Agencies and Clergy. In addition, there shall be three (3) neighborhood representatives from a Community Policing area appointed by the Mayor upon the recommendation of the Community Police Officer. The following shall be resources to the Board: Commissioner of Public Works, Planning Director, Commissioner of Public Health, Director of Inspectional Services and business leaders. All members of the Commission shall serve without compensation. A vacancy shall be filled for the remainder of the term. Upon the expiration of the term of office of a member, his/her successor shall be appointed in the same manner aforesaid. The Chair of the Commission shall be the Police Chief of the City of Quincy. There shall be an Executive Director of the Commission who shall be a resident of the City of Quincy. The compensation of the Executive Director shall be established by the Mayor.

SECTION 2.138.030: RULES AND REGULATIONS

A majority of the Commission shall constitute a quorum and the affirmative vote of a majority of all the members of the Commission shall be necessary in order to adopt any motion or resolution. The Commission shall, from time to time, establish rules for its proceedings. Regular and Special Meetings of the Commission shall be held at a time and place fixed by the Commission. The sessions of the Commission shall be open to the public and every matter coming before the Commission for action shall be put to a vote, the result of which shall be duly recorded. A full and accurate journal of the proceedings of the Commission shall be kept and shall be open. All existing collective bargaining agreements by the City of Quincy and all employees of the Quincy Police Department are recognized and shall be binding upon all actions of the Commission.

SECTION 2.138.040: FUNCTIONS AND PURPOSE

The Commission is established to create a Quincy organization which will assist Quincy's communities in building partnerships with the Quincy Police Department and in assisting the Quincy Police Department in its mission to serve and to protect and to enhance and expand community policing and problem solving efforts. The work, function and purpose of the Commission shall be limited to the following:

1. Prepare a strategic plan and mission statement based on needs and objectives of community and to update same as needed and deemed necessary.
2. Identify and prioritize problems that plague communities.
3. Develop, implement and support community police officers with innovative and effective responses.
4. Organize neighborhood groups of citizens to become activists with City officials to deter criminal activity.
5. Support the community police officer in his/her efforts to identify problems and solve problems within the community.
6. Cultivate cooperative problem solving relationships between private and public agencies and the community.
7. Educate and inform the public about community policing.
8. Establish and maintain a channel for Quincy residents to volunteer and/or assist in Quincy's community policing efforts.
9. Foster a recognition that community policing is democracy in action that requires the active participation of all citizens.
10. Maximize Quincy's share of grant monies.

At U.S. Conference Of Mayors Sheets To Accept HUD Award For City

The city will receive a Blue Ribbon Award from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) when Mayor James Sheets attends the U.S. Conference of Mayors in San Francisco, Calif.

Sheets, who leaves for California Thursday and returns to Quincy next week, will accept the award at the conference.

The mayor said the city did not apply for the HUD award and he does not know exactly why Quincy has been chosen. However, he believes the city's reputation in the area of housing-- because of the homeless shelter Fr. Bill's Place, a soon-to-be-opened home for formerly homeless veterans on Burgin Parkway, and planned senior housing facilities at Squantum Gardens--is the reason.

Sheets added that as a recipient of the award, the city is now considered a model in that area and he has been invited to speak on the subject during a conference in Houston, Texas on July 7 and 8. He will be accompanied on that trip by Quincy Planning Director Richard Meade.

As for the mayor's conference, which is held every winter in Washington, D.C. and every summer in a different major city, Sheets said issues that will be discussed include housing, education, community policing and others. Among the scheduled speakers are President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore.

College Marketing Program Divided Into Two Zones

Quincy College has divided the South Shore into primary and secondary recruitment zones as part of its expanded marketing program.

College President Dr. Jeremiah Ryan recently announced the segmentation of the recruitment area and emphasized that the college's marketing resources, totaling around $400,000 next year, will target the towns which have been identified.

High priority recruitment cities and townships are Boston, Milton, Quincy, Randolph, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Norwell, Marshfield, Pembroke, Kingston, Carver, Plymouth, and Wareham.

Medium priority recruitment areas include Cambridge, Dedham, Avon, Holbrook, Abington, Rockland, Hanover, Hanson, Halifax, Plymouth, and Middleborough.

The college's recruitment program includes advertising, publications, and admissions personnel visiting high schools and community service agencies.

STAGING IS SET up in front of the John Adams Birthplace on Franklin Street—part of the Adams National Historic Site—where renovations are currently underway. The John Quincy Adams Birthplace next door, as well as the "Old House" on Adams Street, also are receiving a facelift as part of a $175,000 project being funded by the National Park Service which operates the Adams Site.

Won't Hinder Tourists $175,000 Facelift For Adams Site

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Adams National Historic Site is currently undergoing $175,000 in renovations at two of its locations as part of a project that will last throughout the summer.

Gene Gabriel, the site's facility manager, said at press time the work will not interfere with tourism.

Gabriel said the work includes:

- $125,000 in renovations at the Adams Birthplaces, located at 133 and 141 Franklin St. Gabriel said both roofs must be done over, a number of windows replaced, and several exterior beams at the buildings must be replaced or stabilized.

- $50,000 in renovations to the entrance gate and brick walls in front of the "Old House" at 135 Adams St.

Age is the main reason the work needs to be done. Gabriel noted that in the case of the "Old House" walls, the street level has been raised over the years to the point where the city sidewalks are now 2 1/2 feet higher than the property level. The walls have begun to fall over as a result and must be fixed up, he said.

Funding for the work, Gabriel said, will come from the National Park Service which operates the Adams Site. It is being done by regular Adams Site employees and members of the preservation crew from the Park Service's Building Conservation Branch in Lowell, he added.

The specific renovations taking place are first-time work for both locations, according to Gabriel.

"It's never been done before," he said.

Still, he added, there are always renovations going on somewhere at the Adams Site, although some projects are not as noticeable as others.

"It's all part of the cyclic maintenance program," he

Fallon Takes Over Ambulance Service July 1

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Fallon Ambulance Service will take over emergency services in Quincy with three ambulances 24 hours a day beginning July 1.

Fallon succeeds AMR Ambulance Service.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted unanimously for the takeover which includes a permit to store 200 gallons of diesel fuel in the tanks of five ambulances being garaged at 83 Penn St. and a permit to store 1,200 gallons of diesel fuel in the tanks of 30 ambulances at 2 Hancock St.

Tim Fallon told the board that at the Penn St. site, one ambulance will cover Quincy, while others will cover area towns, and that at the Hancock St. site, two ambulances will cover Quincy and the others will cover other areas.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers spoke in "full support" of the Fallon's citing the Hancock St. site as a positive move for residents of Squantum and the Marina Bay area.

Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico said he thought the move to Penn St. was an "exciting move" with easy access for West and South Quincy.

Fallon praised Steve Wallace, paramedic for the company as one with "great experience".

Ed Roberts, a consultant with emergency management in Quincy also spoke in full support of the Fallon's.

The only stipulation made by the board was that no flashing lights or sirens be heard from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Also on the suggestion of Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, a building permit and plan be submitted to the board within 90 days.

Mullen Issues Warning To 3 Bars

Police Chief Francis Mullen is issuing a stern written warning to three liquor establishments for violation of closing guidelines which if not adhered to will result in a 12 midnight closing time instead of 1 a.m.

The Quincy License Board at Tuesday's meeting heard the violations read by Det. Richard Laracy, liquor inspector, regarding The Chantey, 333 Victory Rd., at Marina Bay, Rouillard's, 139 Copeland St., and Bobby D's, 226 Water St.

Laracy said on June 1, persons were still drinking at 1:20 a.m. at The Chantey.

William Phelan, attorney for Gail Morash owner of The Chantey said Morash had spoken to the manager and said she would not "tolerate any more violations.". Phelan said Morash has hired a police detail on Saturday nights.

Laracy said on June 6 at Rouillard's, the bartender was still talking to patrons having beer at 2:30 a.m. Kevin Gates, owner, apologized to the board and said the two persons involved have since been terminated.

On June 6, Laracy reported that patrons were drinking at 2:35 a.m. at Bobby D's. Rita DiBona, primary stockholder also apologized to the board and said the "trusted employee" has also been terminated.

Mullen said "we take all of this seriously, and will not put up with it." He added "they need reminders from time to time."

Chairman Joseph Shea told all three that they may appeal to the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) within five days.

Public Hearing June 30 On Proposed Dog Ban

The Ordinance Committee and the Park and Recreation Committee of the City Council will hold a public hearing on a proposed ban of dogs from parks and school playgrounds Monday, June 30 at 7 p.m.

The hearing will be held in the second floor Conference Room of City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The proposal calls for a citywide ban of dogs from parks and elementary school playgrounds from April through November of each year. It was introduced April 22 by Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, chairman of the Ordinance Committee and Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, chairman of the Park and Recreation Committee.

The council passed a resolution on that evening requesting that Mayor James Sheets and the School Committee consider the ban and report to the council with recommendations.

Because Of Quincy Sun Reader Ahern Memorial Dedicated At Beechwood Knoll School Nearly 30 Years Later

An observant Quincy Sun reader recently helped correct a nearly 30-year-old oversight and establish a memorial at the Beechwood Knoll School in honor of a Wollaston resident who died in South Vietnam.

Peter Doherty, a Beechwood Knoll parent, saw an item in The Sun's "Quincy's Yesterdays" column several months ago about the fact that around 1970, city officials wanted to dedicate a memorial stone to Lance Cpl. Brian Ahern, 20, of the U.S. Marines who was killed in action on Jan. 7,

Doherty looked into the matter and found that the memorial, originally slated to be located at the corner of Rice Road and Fenno Street, was never dedicated for some reason.

Doherty then decided to do something about it. He enlisted the help of Quincy Veterans Services Director Henry Bradley, Ward 5 City Councillor Stephen Durkin, Councillor Paul Harold, who writes the "Yesterdays" column and Doherty's wife Cheryl, who serves as president of the Beechwood Knoll PTO. Together, the group worked toward having a stone put at the school, located at 225 Fenno St.

With the blessing of the Ahern family and the approval of the Quincy School Committee, the Brian P. Ahern Memorial was dedicated at the school on June 13.

Harold said he was pleased that an item in his column led to the memorial dedication.

"I guess it pays to read The Quincy Sun," he said with a laugh.

Farmers' Market Opens Friday

The Quincy Farmers' Market will open its 15th season at the Hancock Parking Lot across from Quincy District Court on Chestnut St. this Friday at 11:30 a.m.

The market will continue through the summer months every Friday at the same location. Many of last year's farmers will return this season.

The Farmers' Market invites gardeners in Quincy and the South Shore who wish to participate to call 479-1601 for more information.

Garden clubs are invited to have a plant and bulb sale at the market for outreach and to provide a service for their community beautification efforts. In September, voter registration will take place at the market under the direction of the election office.

Strawberries, lettuce, flowers and plants, rhubarb, asparagus, and greens are some of the items that will be at the market. As the season advances, additional produce becomes available, giving the market a different look each week.

In July, corn, field ripened tomatoes, string beans and cool cucumbers are at their peak flavor.

Produce at the market is picked ripe and sold that day. There are also unusual varieties of fruits and vegetables, those that are grown for flavor, not for uniform size or ability to travel. The produce is grown under clean environment, free of toxic chemicals.

The markets also put more money in the farmers' pockets, and buying from the farmer assures consumers the availability of local produce. Working farms preserve open space.

State wide Farmers' Market listings are available in the lobby at City Hall.

MEMORIAL STONE was recently dedicated at the Beechwood Knoll School in honor of Lance Cpl. Brian Ahern of the U.S. Marines who was killed in South Vietnam in 1968. The dedication was the result of the work of an observant Quincy Sun reader, Peter Doherty, who read in The Sun's "Quincy's Yesterdays" column about the city's plans in the early 1970s to go forward with such a memorial. Upon learning those plans never came to fruition, Doherty worked with city officials and his wife, Cheryl, to see a stone was dedicated.

6-Year Old Michael Story Stars In Special Story

He's only six years old, but he has already received a citation from the Boston Fire Department and the Boston City Council.

Michael Story, formerly of Quincy was riding his big wheel bicycle around his neighborhood in Dorchester a couple of weeks ago, when he noticed smoke coming out of a neighbor's window.

He rode his bike to the nearest fire box, which was about a block away, and because he couldn't reach the alarm, climbed onto the seat of his bike and pulled the alarm, and saved a neighbor's house from flames. No one was at home at the time.

Michael is the son of Jonathon Story of Quincy and the great-grandson of Alpha Story of Quincy.

He made a guest appearance on the David Letterman Show last week where Letterman interviewed him amidst an enthusiastic audience.

According to his great-grandmother, Michael wants to be a guess what - a fireman when he grows up.

$40,000 For Quincy Residents QCAP Presents Checks For Sewer, Water Aid

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) Executive Director Rosemary Wahlberg presented checks Tuesday on behalf of the 958 residents of four communities who qualified for the state's Sewer and Water Assistance Program.

The check presentation at the Weymouth Department of Public Works marks the end of the first year of the state-funded program. Local officials and area legislators were on hand for the presentation.

Through the program, income-eligible homeowners in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton will receive a credit on their water and sewer bill equal to 25 percent of their annual bill, up to a maximum of $200.

Working as a contractor for the state, QCAP served 958 households. Of those, 502 are in Quincy, 264 in Weymouth, 131 in Braintree and 61 in Milton. Sixty-three percent are 60 or older and 71 percent are female-headed households. The average benefit paid to each recipient was $84.16.

The average benefit per Quincy household was $79.75. In all, residents of the city received $40,033.35.

Wahlberg said, "As sewer and water bills have increased, low-income homeowners have been hurt in much the same way they are hurt by the cost of energy and other necessities. This new state program is not a budget buster—I believe that it cost the state less than $1 million for this fiscal year and the budget for next fiscal year will have $2 million. But it does effectively target assistance to people who need it and deserve it.

"Assistance such as this makes it more likely that these low-income homeowners will be able to keep their homes. Our state legislators are to be commended for their support of this program."

QUINCY DARE PROGRAM recently received a check for $30,000 for its Summer Camp '97 from the Department of Public Safety. Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke (second from right) makes the presentation to Lt. Vincent Flaherty and DARE (Drug Awareness Resistance Education) Officers Bob Edgar and John Grazioso.

Traffic, Parking Problem Complaints At Fruit Store

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Constantino Ricci has been living on 20 Guild St., near Sunshine Fruit for many years, but told the Quincy License Board Tuesday that there is "no street left" and that "Sunshine took everything."

Ricci told the board that he can't get in and out of his driveway because of trucks loading and unloading at Sunshine. He said "one business shouldn't put the whole street in danger."

He said on holidays such as Easter Sunday, the parking space is loaded with wall-to-wall flowers and boxes, causing patrons to find parking elsewhere.

Another abutter, Chris Graham, who lives across the street from Sunshine said she had to place a "no parking" sign in front of her house so that trucks wouldn't park there.

She referred to residents living in the area as "second class citizens" who have to live in such a "narrow street" to begin with.

John Dunn said his driveway is sometimes blocked and that garbage odors from the dumpster at Sunshine are evident in his home.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi referring to the area as a "continuing

Mullen Accepts Plaque At Ceremony Police Dept. Receives Award From DEA

Police Chief Francis Mullen was in Boston yesterday (Wednesday) to accept an award for the Quincy Police Department from the New England Field Division of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Mullen accepted a plaque recognizing his department for its partnership with the DEA's New England Field Division in the fight against drugs. The awards ceremony, sponsored by the division, was held at the JFK Federal Building.

Commenting on the partnership Tuesday, Mullen said the Quincy Police Department works with the division by exchanging information on various cases.

"We work closely with the DEA, as we work with other federal agencies," he said. "I think it's a great relationship and through it, we can make a safer community."

The chief added that he was proud to be given the opportunity to accept the award on behalf of his department, saying all of its members played a role in achieving the honor.

"I'm happy because it indicates that we've been doing a professional job," said Mullen. "It shows that we're all working as a team."

Residents' Help Asked For New Trees Care

The Park and Forestry Department is requesting the help of residents in caring for recently-planted trees.

Residents are asked to water the new trees during the hot and dry summer months. A tree has a much greater chance of survival during its formative years if it is watered on a regular basis.

The proper way to water a tree is to make sure that a significant amount of water reaches the tree's roots, which can be attained by running a hose at the base of the tree until the ground is saturated. The trees require water at least once a week, and twice a week during extended periods of dry weather.

The city recently planted 425 new trees along its streets. The trees--Norwegian Sunset Maples and Northern Red Oaks--will add to the approximately 20,000 trees that already line Quincy's streets. New trees are planted every year to offset the loss of trees that must be removed due to disease and decay.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, said trees add a great deal of value to a municipality. In addition to providing shade, cleaning the air, and adding to the aesthetic atmosphere of our neighborhoods, trees also increase property values.

"With the continued support of Mayor (James) Sheets and the City Council, we are able to maintain Quincy's rich tradition of tree-lined streets," said Koch. "Planting trees is the equivalent of making an investment in our city's future. We are asking residents to protect that investment by assisting with the watering of trees located in front of their homes."

For more information about the new trees, call 376-1251.

Locke And Flood

Dist. Atty. Jeffrey Locke and Sheriff John Flood are both Republicans.

And that's pretty much about where the similarity between the two starts and ends.

They were appointed by Gov. William Weld to fill the unexpired terms of William Delahunt who was elected Congressman and Clifford Marshall who died last August.

LOCKE

FLOOD

Both will be challenged by Democrats next year.

Locke does not come on looking or sounding like a politician. And, he really isn't. He's a somewhat shy, low key, but capable career law enforcement official.

Flood, who has been around the political block a few times, is by comparison, about as shy, you might say, as a bulldozer. He's a veteran campaigner who knows the political ropes and how to use them.

When Weld appointed Flood, the immediate reaction was: he's going to be tough to beat in 1998. And, he will be. In fact he may have given more than one Democrat second thoughts about running.

When Flood picked Locke, the immediate reaction was more like: well, he won't be too hard to knock out of there.

But that was then and this is now. And, there's still a year and a half to go before next year's election.

Like Flood, Locke is out working at it. He's been quite visible in the Quincy area which is a big voter key for any county candidate.

He has been at the high schools on anti-drunk driving campaigns and at local business, political and civic functions.

He was at the recent Quincy Business County's "Buttonhole Session" at Marina Bay. And participated in a recent seminar on domestic violence at City Hall.

He has also had his Quincy district attorney office join the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and is putting in two days a week himself at that office.

And, what could make him a household name are a few high profile cases, like the Michael Kennedy and the baby sitter matter.

So Far Locke seems to have handled that case pretty well in the public's eye. He has been saying and doing the right things at the right time. And hasn't turned the case into a political witchhunt.

Regardless of whether that case ever lands in court, Locke is better known today than when he succeeded Delahunt just a few short months ago.

As a political candidate, he's looking like he could grow on voters between now and election time next year.

Local Democrats could have their work cut out for them trying to unseat both Flood and Locke.

FORMER MAYOR Frank McCauley has filed his nomination papers for city councilor-at-large. Only 50 valid voter signatures were needed to qualify him as a candidate but he personally gathered 1,100 signatures knocking on doors and at local supermarkets.

McCAULEY

It gave him a chance, he says, to talk with residents. And, he says, he found "widespread satisfaction" with current city government.

McCauley is seeking the seat that Michael Cheney is leaving.

THE COUNCIL AT-LARGE race now has a fifth candidate. Sabina Kavanaugh Stenberg of Clay St., former businesswoman and senior citizens advocate, has taken out nomination papers. She ran for the Ward 3 seat a couple of years ago.

CAPTAINS Scott and Susan Kelly, commanding officers of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, are leaving on a new assignment after a three-year duty here.

KELLY

They will take over leadership of the Athol Corps and be succeeded here by Majors Robert and Kathleen Klenk coming in from New York effective July 2.

A public farewell to the Kelly family is set for Sunday at 6 p.m. at the Quincy Corps on Baxter St.

FR. WILLIAM MCCARTHY of St. John's Church and for whom Father Bill's Place is named, emceed the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast held last week at the Bryan VFW Post.

He helped organize the breakfast sponsored by Mayor James Sheets and hosted by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

MCCARTHY

The Mayor's Family Commission's Transitional Housing Program for homeless families benefited from the breakfast.

Fr. McCarthy who has a special talent for raising funds for worthy causes--nobody says "no"--told this one on himself:

"A Quincy police officer asked me the other day if I had a gun permit.

"I said, what would I need a gun permit for?"

"And he said, 'For all the people you hold up.'"

House Passes Tax Cut Legislation

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has passed a bill that would provide an increase in the tax deduction

Alaska, the largest state in the U.S., is almost as large as the rest of the U.S.

The announcement was made by Reps. Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano and Michael Bellotti.

The proposed reduction expands and improves upon the current $600 deduction allowed for filers with dependents under 12 years old. The legislation raises the age threshold from under 12 to under 18, allowing an additional 355,000 families to become eligible. It also increases the amount of the deduction from $600 to $1,000 for families with one child under 18, or to $1,200 for families with more than one child under 18.

Overall, the bill would provide an additional $30 million in tax relief to families with dependent children.

"This legislation is reflective of the fact that the economy in Massachusetts is very strong," said Tobin. "Because of this prosperity, we are able to indulge some modest expansion in this year's budget while simultaneously providing modest tax relief for families. This action provides a wise balance and use of unexpectedly strong tax receipts. We have consciously chosen to share such good fortune with the families of Massachusetts."

Scenes From Yesterday

Sea Street, looking South, Houghs Neck, Mass.

THIS IS A 1913 POSTCARD view of Sea at the far end of Houghs Neck. Easily reached by steamer or trolley, Houghs Neck was a popular resort area in the summer for people from all over the Boston area. Power's Pavilion shown here on the right in this view was a recreation casino offering pool tables, dancing and bowling. Powers also had boats for rent on the North Bay. During this period there were many different amusement centers like Powers in this part of the Neck. Today there are none.

READERS FORUM

Democracy Is Not A Spectator Sport

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Democracy is not a spectator sport—for it to survive and flourish, we all must become involved.

This is the message I heard from 480 high school students representing 37 Massachusetts high schools who recently participated in the Close Up Foundation government studies program in Washington, D.C.

For a full week the students had the opportunity to develop a better understanding of our democratic process. By observing Congressional proceedings, questioning journalists and meeting with government experts, the abstracts of history and the process of governing were transformed into concrete experiences. In addition, students were able to share their views with their peers from other areas of the country.

Participants returned home with a deeper awareness of their responsibilities as citizens and the realization that a single individual can make a difference. Their enthusiasm for involvement in the democratic process is to be admired.

The Close Up experience was made possible through the strong support of parents, teachers, and schools. Also, various companies and organizations helped make Close Up fellowships available to students in financial need. These sponsors include New England Electric Systems and The David and Lucile Packard Foundation. The Millipore Foundation also provides funds for individual student participation.

On behalf of all of us at Close Up, I would like to thank all who made the experience possible.

Flag Day Committee Seeks Two Missing Flags

The Quincy Flag Day Committee is requesting that anyone who may have found an American flag along the Flag Day Parade route June 14 return it to the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

There are two flags that are missing from the Veteran's Flag Display. Officials said they hold a tremendous amount of personal significance to the owners and they would like them returned as soon as possible.

The Veteran's Flag Display lined the parade route that included Coddington St., Hancock St., and Southern Artery. The flags were placed on brackets on telephone poles along the parade route. People were allowed to loan the flags to the Flag Day Committee so their deceased loved one could be honored for his or her service to this country.

Anyone who finds the flags or has information on their whereabouts should contact the Keohane Funeral Home at 773-3551 or the Quincy Park Department at 376-1251.

Post Offices Closed July 4

The U.S. Postal Service will be closed Friday, July 4.

All retail offices will be closed and there will be no delivery of mail.

"This popular summer holiday is one of the most widely observed in the year," said Boston Postmaster Bill Dunn. "Our experience is that most businesses as well as residential customers are busy enjoying the holiday and have little need for our services that day. We will be back to business as usual on Saturday, July 5."

Two important exceptions to the holiday schedule are Express Mail Collection

Boxes, which will be collected as posted on the box on Friday, July 4; and Boston's two 24-hour Post Offices, which will be open for business as usual: Fort Point Station, 25 Dorchester Ave. (in back of South Station), and the Airport Mail Center, 139 Harborside Drive (Logan Airport).

There will be no collection of mail from street collection boxes July 4. All regular service will resume July 5.

Water Ban Enforced Against Forestry Dept.

By PAUL HAROLD

The city's police department seized equipment from the forestry department to enforce the city's ban on outdoor watering.

At the request of DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert, Captain Walter Kemp had sprinklers and hoses confiscated from Fore River circle and the rock garden at Newport Ave. and Furnace Brook Parkway. They were operating on the order of forestry superintendent Warren Stewart, in violation of the 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. ban.

MRS. HARRY CHANDLER TO HEAD BLIND UNIT

Gov. Christian Herter named Squantum housewife Mrs. Harry Chandler state director of the division of the blind.

Mrs. Chandler was active in Republican politics, having served as head of the Quincy Eisenhower Committee, and was a candidate for the Republican nomination for state representative. She replaced John Mungovan, also of Quincy, whose term expired.

500 SHIPYARD WELDERS WALK OFF JOB

While union and Bethlehem Steel officials were meeting in New York to iron out the details for a new contract, 500 welders at Fore River walked off the job. Acting president of Local Five-CIO, Ronald Orcutt, had urged the workers to stay at their posts.

A 15-member strike committee was organized the following day, but there were no current plans for a full-fledged strike. There was no trouble at the yard, but crane workers at Bethlehem's Sparrow's Point, Maryland yard had walked off the job.

A union demand for a 12 cents an hour raise was rejected by management, but there were no counter offers made.

Conservation Commission OK's Marina Bay Senior Campus

The Conservation Commission last week issued permits granting initial authorization to Peter S. Gordon and The Newton Group to build the Marina Bay Senior Living Campus.

The site already has received approval from the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency.

The decision clears the way for the project to proceed.

"These approvals by the Quincy Conservation Commission and the State Department of Environmental Protection come after many months of careful planning and engineering review and demonstrate that our plan to develop the Marina Bay Senior Living Campus is environmentally responsible," said Gordon, president of the Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center, Inc. "Our goal is to make the Marina Bay Senior Living Campus the most successful and attractive senior living campus in the region."

The Marina Bay Senior living Campus will provide seniors a broad range of residential living options and the security of access to a continuum of health care services ranging from short-term rehabilitation and home health care to the availability of long-term care.

Charles McDermott Selected As Delahunt Senior Intern

Congressman Bill Delahunt has named a retired Quincy man to serve as one of his 1997 Congressional Senior Interns.

Charles McDermott of Wollaston was selected from a field of local applicants to take part in the unique educational program this spring in Washington, D.C. He will join senior citizens representing Congressional Districts across the country in a week-long series of workshops that give participants a first-hand look at the ways and means of Washington, D.C.

McDermott was chosen to participate on the basis of his long list of civic activities, and enthusiasm for bringing home what he learns in seminars and discussions in the nation's capital, for the benefit of seniors in southeastern Massachusetts.

McDermott, 72, worked for 40 years for Blue Cross/Blue Shield. He is active with his church parish, in the Knights of Columbus and with the Blue Cross REACH program, through which retirees work with needy children and seniors. He has two sons.

The substantive focus of the Washington session, which runs from May 17 to 24, is broad but includes a number of areas of particular interest to senior citizens. Activities include discussions with members of Congress, administration and diplomatic officials, journalists and policy experts.

McDermott will also be invited to spend part of his time in Rep. Delahunt's Congressional office on Capitol Hill.

The program is sponsored by the Close-Up Foundation, which also hosts groups of educators and high school students in Washington.

Raymondi Re-Elected College Board Chairman

Daniel Raymondi has been re-elected to a third term as chairman of the Board of Governors of Quincy College.

The board also recently re-elected Theresa Lord, to first vice chairman, Philip McCue to second vice-chairman and Miriam Shaheen to recording secretary.

College President, Dr. Jeremiah Ryan serves as board secretary.

Reception For Ayers

A reception for Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers was scheduled for last night (Wednesday) from 7 to 9 p.m. at Raffael's, Enterprise Drive, North Quincy.

Merrill Smallwood Law School Graduate

Merrill J. Smallwood III of Quincy recently received a J.D. degree from Southern New England School of Law in North Dartmouth. Smallwood also holds a B.S. degree from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

ENC Receives $250,000 Gift For Renovation Project

Dr. Kent Hill, president of Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston, has announced the receipt of a $250,000 gift to the college for the completion of a $1 million renovation project to the Mann Student Center on the campus.

Phase I of the renovation was completed in September. The recent gift will make possible the completion of Phase II of the renovation and will include the construction of a weather-protected entrance and several major changes to bring the building into compliance with current ADA regulations, including the installation of a new elevator and construction of an entrance ramp for persons who are physically challenged.

Officials said although the $250,000 gift represents one of the largest gifts from an individual in the history of the college, ENC will honor the donor's request for anonymity.

Hill said, "I am delighted that someone who loves the college very much has stepped forward to help us complete an important project which will affect the lives of everyone at the college for many years to come. We believe that this will be the first of many generous gifts to the college from friends and alumni in the months ahead."

Phase I of the renovation included a fully air-conditioned, 388-seat cafeteria featuring a modern "food court" system. Other areas in the Mann Student Center which received major attention last summer were the College Store and the Student Center Auditorium. Proceeds from the settlement of the estate of the late Warren Lahue and gifts from Pioneer College Catering Inc. and the late George Grimshaw made possible the completion of Phase I of the project.

The Mann Student Center was constructed in 1966 and named in honor of President Edward Mann, who served as president of ENC for more than 21 years. Since the original construction of the center, only modest improvements have been made to the building.

Michael McFarland School Committee Candidate

Michael McFarland of 140 Summit Ave., Wollaston, has announced his candidacy for the Quincy School Committee.

McFarland made the announcement during a recent reception at the Adams Inn in North Quincy.

Citing the importance of an excellent school system to keep families in Quincy and to attract new families to the city, he said his main reason for running is to see that all Quincy children receive a quality education, including his own three children who attend Central Middle School and the Wollaston School.

McFarland is executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets—a position he will hold until he steps down July 1—and has owned Barry's Deli in Wollaston for 19 years. He noted that as co-chair of the Wollaston School Council, he fought for increased technology in the classroom, building and plant improvements and to maintain class size at current levels.

For the past two years, he has also served on the School Committee's Budget Subcommittee.

An active community member, McFarland serves as a director of the Quincy Partnership and a member of the Quincy Retirement Board, Quincy Christmas Festival Committee, Quincy Flag Day Celebration Committee, Quincy Community TV Board, Quincy City Club and Quincy Rotary Club.

He is also the past president of the Wollaston Business Association, past director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, past director of the Quincy 2000 Corporation, former trustee of the Quincy Historical Society and a director of the Colonial Federal Savings Bank in Wollaston.

McFarland, a 1977 graduate of Suffolk University, is married to the former Marty Sinclair, a registered dietitian at the Boston Dialysis Center. They have three children: Erin, Ryan and Tara.

Traffic, Parking Problems Complaints At Fruit Store

congested roadway" said Sunshine had "no right to block anyone's driveway or the street" and said it was "against the law".

He suggested a sign on Franklin Street where cars usually park to be called a "loading zone only" and have no further deliveries on Water or Guild Streets.

Owner Chris Carbone disagreed and said the trucks would actually be on the wrong side to make deliveries efficient.

He however agreed with some of the complaints saying he had the dumpster fixed since it was leaking liquid causing odors and said simply that Sunshine is a business and some of the noise and confusion can't be helped. He said most of the deliveries are done within 20 minutes and that there is always someone in the truck in case it has to be moved in a hurry.

When Carbone told the board that he was using an extension to store as a warehouse, he was questioned by Raymondi as to whether or not he had a license for the extension.

It also brought comments from Graham who asked why the neighbors weren't notified of the extension.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the board will take another look at the area and will re-visit it with traffic engineer Jack Gillon.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he plans to review all licensing in connection with the storage of fruit, and pay extra attention to how the produce is delivered. He said the matter will be continued to a date uncertain at this time.

Residents, Merchants Attend QP Action Plan Meeting

About 75 residents and merchants turned out for a neighborhood meeting on the Quincy Point Action Plan last week.

The meeting at the Fore River Club House was conducted by Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who invited Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino to discuss the plan.

The objectives of the Quincy Point Action Plan are to identify opportunities to stimulate investment that will strengthen businesses in the area and create new jobs for area residents, provide an environment that is both attractive and convenient for pedestrians and vehicular use, and to build upon the area's existing assets. The study is being funded by Quincy 2000 through the Quincy Community Development Block Grant Program.

"The most important step in this planning process is occurring tonight: gaining the insight and recommendations of the local residents and merchants," Mannarino said at the meeting.

"Since my return to public service, I have been working hard to equalize the city's investment in Quincy Point for vital infrastructure like streets and sidewalks, schools and parks, and other community services," said Raymondi. "Quincy 2000 is working with businesses and residents in Quincy Point to plan the revitalization of Washington Street from Southern Artery to the Fore River Bridge. With Joe Mannarino and his fine staff at Quincy 2000, this effort would not be at this stage."

Consultants working with Quincy 2000 on the Quincy Point Action Plan include consultants, Alice Boelter and Associates, Bergemeyer Associates, and Pilot Development Partners.

At the meeting, planning consultant Alice Boelter and development specialist Eden Milroy of Pilot Development Partners explained the potential benefits of the plan's recommended public and private sector improvements.

Tom O'Brien, owner of O'Brien Hyundai said, "I'm prepared to get together with other merchants along Washington Street to improve this area for both business persons and residents. Together, we can make the improvements to encourage residents to shop locally and to make the area more appealing to the thousands of people driving through Quincy Point every day."

Additional community meetings will be held to explain the Quincy Point Action Plan, which is scheduled to be completed in July.

Accent On Quincy Center

By BRUCE ARONS
Quincy Center Development Coordinator

Preliminary Approval For CDC Designation

Earlier this month, Councillor Patrick McDermott, chairman of the Downtown Economic Development Committee; Elizabeth Harrington, assistant planner from the Quincy Planning Department and I traveled to Boston and delivered a presentation before the Metropolitan Area Planning Council's Metro Plan Committee.

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) is the officially-designated regional planning agency for the 101 cities and towns of metropolitan Boston. The council helps its member communities plan in the areas of economic development, land use, housing, demographics, transportation and environmental quality.

The presentation supported Quincy's application to have its center designated as a Concentrated Development Center (CDC). The Quincy Center Action Plan, prepared for the Quincy 2000 Corporation by Sasaki Associates, played a major role in our presentation. The presentation went exceptionally well, and at the conclusion of the meeting, preliminary approval of CDC status for Quincy Center was unanimously voted by the committee.

One of the specific benefits Quincy Center will gain by acquiring CDC designation is infrastructure priority. This should greatly increase our chances of obtaining future federal and state funding for the construction and expansion of existing parking facilities downtown.

Currently, there are far more requests for funding than there is money available. Rather than attempting to spread the money among as many communities as possible, it makes more sense to allocate the funds to support the type of land development that implements state and regional planning goals.

MAPC will prepare in conjunction with the state and CDC community, a memorandum of agreement which will outline the necessary infrastructure improvements to support the CDC. This memorandum of agreement will give a higher priority for infrastructure funding within a CDC than for other areas within the region.

'Til next time--be sure to check out what's "happening" in downtown Quincy Center, and feel free to write me with your comments and suggestions. (Mailing address: The Quincy 2000 Corp., 1250 Hancock St., Suite 802N, Quincy, MA 02169.)

EMDR: FAST, EFFECTIVE HELP

Panic attacks, depression, abuse, marital problems, loss of a loved one, physical trauma, accidents—what do these things have in common? They all may benefit from a type of treatment called Eye Movement Desensitization Reprocessing (EMDR).

Using such stimuli as eye movements, hand taps, and audio tones, EMDR has been found to be highly effective in treating both children and adults, including those struggling with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). Studies have shown that in as few as three sessions, most patients with PTSD find that their symptoms are substantially resolved. As a result, EMDR is potentially much faster and more effective than other forms of treatment, such as combinations of individual and group therapy and medication.

P.S. EMDR was named after the eye movements that were the early trademark of this type of treatment. Some say that this new therapy has had remarkable success, even though its detractors speak loudly. Sometimes alternative therapies can make a real difference in your life. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension, and cholesterol. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Bragg 'Pleased' With New School Budget

School Committee-woman Jo-Ann Bragg, chairwoman of the committee's Budget Subcommittee, says she is "pleased" with the new Quincy school budget for Fiscal Year 1998.

The School Committee recently approved the subcommittee's recommendations for the new school year totaling $50,131,056. The committee had to cut $276,986 in budget line items from School Supt. Eugene Creedon's proposed budget to meet the bottom line of Mayor James Sheet's $149.6 million FY98 municipal budget passed by the City Council last week.

"We carefully studied each line item, keeping in mind the concerns and needs expressed to us from Supt. Creedon and his staff, parents, and the school community as well as the committee's overall budget goals with a special emphasis on class size and the expense side of the budget," said Bragg. "We did our best to balance the needs of the entire school system and I am very pleased the School Committee voted to approve the budget as submitted."

On the salary side of the school budget, increases are included for negotiated raises, additional staffing of a nurse, special education teachers and tutors along with increases in ESL/TBE programs. Funding will also become available through a realignment resulting from retirements and resignations to fund more staff.

"Main priorities for the subcommittee include a full time non-teaching assistant principal for the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, and hiring of additional teachers for both high schools which was necessary to meet their goals of redesign at Quincy High and restructuring at North Quincy High," said Bragg. "Plus over the summer, each school's class size will be closely monitored with a strong possibility of adding another kindergarten teacher to the Beechwood Knoll School, if their numbers stay the same or increase."

Quincy's middle schools will see a new sport offered in the form of a wrestling program. Funding for extra-curricular activities has been increased for middle and high schools in addition to a $20,000 increase for before and after-school elementary programs.

"Over the last several years, there have been only minor increases on the expense side of the budget, even though our enrollment has grown, special education costs have drastically risen, prices of materials have increased, and we have more school buildings to maintain," said Bragg. "What I am especially pleased with is that we were able to provide the largest increase on the expense side of the budget in the last 15 years. Main priorities for us were textbooks, repairs to our schools and educational equipment, library books and periodicals, media/audio visual equipment, replacement of educational equipment, student furniture, and educational supplies.

"We provided increases to the telephone expense line to make way for technology improvements such as 980 new Internet connections and new portable phones for school buses," she added. "Special education tuitions and utilities, which have been a problem in the past, will see a large increase as well. Central, Atlantic and Broad Meadows middle schools will see several areas of fresh paint, which is scheduled to be done this summer. Sterling was recently painted, and when Point-Webster is turned back into a middle school, that school will also have fresh paint."

Bragg said she wanted to make her thoughts on the new school budget known to the public because some parents do not find the Budget Subcommittee sessions as easy to attend as regular School Committee meetings, partly because of lighter media coverage.

Raymondi, Board Have Concerns Over License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Failure by the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) to approve a liquor license to O'Connell's Restaurant on 520 Washington St., for four months after it was granted plus trouble with finances has both Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi and the Quincy License Board with "concerns it's not going to happen."

The owners of O'Connells, (the former Fore River Eatery) were issued a license by the license board last December. According to Atty. Kevin Burke, the owners applied to four different banks before they reached an agreement with Haymarket Bank. And along with Quincy 2000, Burke said the owners hope to open by Labor day.

Chairman Joseph Shea said his biggest fear is that the owners will not stick to their original plans to have a "family restaurant".

He said if they are "underfunded", their original concept will slip into something else."

Raymondi said "it's been six months since they were issued a license and I'm very much concerned it's not going to happen."

He said the board should set firm set guidelines about their financial capabilities and if they are more delays, the board should "restore the license back to the city of Quincy."

Roger Wallin, acting building inspector told the owners to meet with the building department, the fire department, and fire prevention immediately.

Burke assured the board that plans will be underway for the Labor Day opening and asked the board to be "patient".

Shea said the board meet in November to review the progress.

Four Ways to Improve Your Home Security

News USA

(NU) - Crime statistics show that at least 1.5 million homes will be broken into this year. But more and more, home burglaries don't involve the bad guys breaking through windows or doors.

That's because burglars now have a way to coax open many automatic garage doors, offering them a quick and quiet route into a home. With the garage door open, they can pull their vehicle inside and close the door for undetected loading.

Police logs show that burglars using electronic "code-grabbing" devices can intercept the access code sent by a remote control, which activates the garage door opener. Once they steal the code, it's like having keys to the garage.

Unfortunately, for homeowners, these devices can be found in some mail order catalogs. Burglars who use the devices often leave no sign of forced entry, making it difficult to figure out how missing property disappeared in the first place.

There is protection available, however, now that garage door opener technology has been developed to stop thieves. Units such as the Quantum rolling code opener from Wayne-Dalton change the access code each time a door is operated by the remote, rendering burglars' devices useless.

Burglars also use store-bought replacement garage door openers to get into homes. Older openers, and some current models, have factory pre-set codes that homeowners are instructed to change after the opener is installed, but many do not.

"I've witnessed demonstrations where replacement openers were used to raise many, many garage doors of unsuspecting people who hadn't bothered to change their codes," says Joe Mele, a retired Orlando police force lieutenant and security and crime professional.

According to the Insurance Information Institute, nine out of 10 home burglaries are preventable. Mele, who appears frequently on network television discussing home security, recommends that homeowners take the following precautions:

• Garage Door Openers: Consider a rolling code opener when buying new. Change codes on openers with preset codes.

• Entry Doors: Outfit exterior doors with good hardware, including quality dead bolts and heavy-duty strike plates. When choosing a new steel entry door, be sure it has a dead bolt or can be fitted with one. Not all can.

• Mailbox: Use a mailbox large enough to hold all daily mail. Mail sticking out of a box is a sure sign that no one is home.

• Home Appearance: Be sure the home looks occupied. Take in the newspaper and turn off porch lights in the morning.

Backyard Swimming Pools: Good for Body and Soul

(NU) - After battling rush-hour traffic or racing around to complete the day's errands, there's nothing more therapeutic than a refreshing dip in a pool to quickly erase your stress.

Doctors have long recognized that swimming provides both physical and mental health benefits to both young and old.

Swimming is good for the physical condition of the entire body, including muscle tone, breathing and flexibility. That's why so many rely on it for everything from body conditioning to injury rehabilitation.

And because it's a low-impact exercise, it places minimal stress on knees and other joints and actually lessens the risk of injuries often caused by running, weightlifting and other strenuous workouts.

But exercise is only one of the many benefits derived by swimming. A swimming pool can turn the normal birthday party or any other social event into hours of nonstop fun for everyone.

And if you're not in the mood to entertain friends, keep it in the family. While it's nearly impossible for parents to get the family to the dinner table all at one time, it's never a problem to get them all around a pool despite today's hectic lifestyles.

News USA

Swimming is a great stress reliever.

That helps explain why there are more than 7 million backyard pools in the United States. And, according to the National Spa and Pool Institute, pool sales are growing at 5 to 8 percent annually.

Now, if you want a pool but you're afraid you just won't have the time or expertise to care for it, think again. With advances in today's technology, pool care is easier than ever. Nowadays, you can take a water sample to a BioGuard Authorized Pool & Spa Care Center and their professionals will conduct a free computerized water analysis, recommend an easy and effective treatment program, and explain how to maintain sparkling clear water.

Like many pool owners, you'll likely discover that pool care on a lazy summer evening is yet another great way to leave stress behind and enjoy the many benefits of swimming.

For more information about BioGuard and the effective use of pool water products, contact the local BioGuard Authorized Pool and Spa Care Center nearest you, or visit their Web site at www.bioguard.com.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Instead of indulging in sarcasm, bite your tongue this week. Things pretty much go your way, especially on the social scene later in the week. Feel free to enjoy yourself.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The business ideas you come up with this week are new and exciting. However, you have an unfortunate tendency to make ill-advised remarks. Guard against that.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A philosophical matter has you and a friend spending many a delicious hour debating early in the week. Both of you make good sense. New opportunities come your way that could improve your income.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The focus early in the week is on home life. Later, feel free to enjoy happy times with friends. Romance is heavily favored for the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Two areas of disagreement between spouses concern money and business. A loved one is out of line by getting involved with your affairs. This weekend, the accent is on socializing.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Being glib and making flippant remarks puts off people early in the week. You're just trying to be funny, but not everyone appreciates your sense of humor. Home life is favored this weekend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A silly spat early in the week has you and a loved one on the outs. However, you soon patch things up and make happy plans together. Travel could be on your agenda this weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You have a minor disagreement with a loved one about money. For the most part, though, it's a great week for getting out and enjoying yourself. Romance is a plus over the weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While you're normally handy, it's not a good week to tackle a do-it-yourself project. You're not at your most efficient this week. The weekend is best spent relaxing and catching up on rest.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A controversial issue has you and a family member on the outs. Put things in perspective. The situation is not one that affects either of you directly.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You receive an unexpected social invitation early in the week. Try to clear your schedule so that you can accept it. You are communicating well with others.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You are a bundle of energy this week and manage to finish some long-delayed projects. Tend to yourself instead of thinking about socializing as the weekend approaches. Your time is best spent in meditation.

Legion Baseball

Team Improves To 7-0

Morrisette's Offense Erupts Early, Often

By LIAM FITZGERALD

One of the underlying reasons behind the Morrisette American Legion baseball team's early season success is its ability to score runs in bunches.

This knack for the big inning has helped Morrisette on more than one occasion bounce back from a deficit and knock off its opponent.

Morrisette did it again Monday night, rallying from a 3-0 deficit with a four-run first inning en route to a 10-7 triumph over visiting Randolph.

The victory improved Morrisette's record to 7-0, three wins shy of the 10-0 start by the 1995 squad.

Winning pitcher Mark Kelly became the third Morrisette hurler to win his second game, joining Ryan Herlihy and Rob Celata. Kelly pitched five innings, giving up five runs (four earned) on eight hits, walking two and striking out two.

Reliever Paul Marnikovic gave up two runs (one earned) in a short stint, before closer Chad Feetham shut the door (two strikeouts) for his third save.

In the top of the first, Randolph strung together three doubles and a single after two were out to take a 3-0 lead.

Morrisette struck back in its half of the first, scoring four runs on two hits. Marnikovic and Brian Beaton walked, then scored on Ray Cattaneo's double to right center. John Sullivan followed with a lazy fly to center which was dropped, sending Cattaneo to third and Sullivan to second. One out later, Walker singled in Cattaneo. Sullivan also scored on the play when left fielder Jack Jeanette overran the ball, giving Morrisette a 4-3 lead.

After a scoreless second, Randolph tied the game in the third when Eric Wirtz's throw to first pulled Sullivan off the base, allowing Jarrod Rotondo to score from third with two outs.

Once again, Morrisette's offense responded, scoring twice to take a 6-4 lead through three innings. Following a walk, two force outs and another walk, Shawn Manning laced a single to load the bases. This time it was Wirtz who collected the big hit, driving in two with a single to center.

In the fourth, Randolph used two singles, a sacrifice and three stolen bases to cut the Morrisette lead to 6-5.

Hopes To Regain Medal-Winning Form In Time For 1998 Games

Olympian Cashman Speedskating Again After Ankle Injury

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Nineteen ninety-seven has not been very kind to Quincy native and Olympic bronze medalist Karen Cashman.

After suffering an excruciating ankle injury New Year's Eve, she has endured two surgeries, countless hours of therapy and rehabilitation, and the longest stint off the ice since she began skating at age six.

But, six months after fracturing her left ankle and injuring ligaments, the 25-year-old speedskater's fortunes may be starting to turn.

On Monday, Cashman took a significant stride toward regaining her Olympic form and earning a spot for the 1998 Winter Games when she skated for the first time this year.

"She said it felt great to be back on the ice," her mother, Jane told The Quincy Sun Tuesday. "There is some pain because she has a limited range of movement due to the specially fitted skate."

"But, she's very excited to be back on the ice and is looking forward to continuing her training," Mrs. Cashman said. She said her daughter skated for about an hour at the training facility on the campus of Northern Michigan University in Marquette, MI, where Karen is a student.

Before leaving for Marquette, Cashman said in a Sun interview that she was excited to return to the ice and eager to add skating to her training.

Kane Scores Winner in 9th

Quincy Upends Milton, Snaps Losing Streak

The Quincy American Legion baseball team got a much-needed victory Monday, edging host Milton, 8-6, in nine innings to snap a five-game losing skid.

Quincy hosted Milton Tuesday night and is back in action today (Thursday) at 5:45 against Canton at Sharon High School. Friday at 8 p.m., Quincy hosts Canton. Next Monday, June 30 at 8 p.m., Quincy hosts Cohasset. Next Wednesday at 5:45 p.m., Quincy travels to Milton.

In Monday's triumph, Quincy scored twice in the top of the ninth and held Milton scoreless in the bottom of the inning to seal the win.

Matt Kane led off the ninth with a walk and a stolen base, moving to third on Pat McGann's single. After Andrew Byrne walked to load the bases and Steve Wiltshire popped out, Kane scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Bryan Linskey drew a walk to load the bases again, followed by a walk to Adam Delorey that scored McGann with an insurance run.

Linskey, in relief of starter Jon Caliri, tossed a hitless ninth and earned the win. Linskey tossed 2 2/3 scoreless innings, allowing just one hit and one walk with two strikeouts.

Caliri, in his second start, went 6 1/3 innings, giving up six runs (four earned) on five hits, walking five and striking out six.

"Jon definitely made an improvement; he threw strikes, had a nice curve and a fastball with a lot of action on it," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "He did a good job and put us in position to win the game."

The game was scoreless through two innings before Quincy erupted for five runs in the third. Singles by Delorey and Greg Peck and a walk to Eddy loaded the bases. One out later, McGann executed the suicide squeeze to perfection, driving in Delorey and reaching first for a single. Byrne and Wiltshire followed with two-run singles to push Quincy's lead to 5-

Cashman Speedskating Again After Ankle Injury

doing. Right now I know I'm not there because there are some things I wasn't able to do in Lake Placid (where she underwent rehab following her injury).

"But I hope to keep working on it and get it stronger and stronger until I'm training just like everybody else."

Cashman won a bronze medal as a member of the U.S. women's short-track speedskating team at the 1994 Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway. She was well on her way to earning a spot on the Olympic squad for the 1998 Winter Games in Nagano, Japan, when fate knocked her off course.

While racing in the 500-meters event during the World University Games Trials last December in Milwaukee, Cashman tried to pass on the inside two other skaters who were jockeying for the lead. Cashman thought she had an opening, and tried to pass the skaters. Then, one of the skaters fell and knocked Cashman down. She slammed feet first into the hockey boards surrounding the rink.

"I was at top speed, and very close to the boards. There was no sliding. I hit the boards straight on," Cashman said.

At the time of the accident, Cashman was in first place overall in the competition and ranked fourth on the U.S. National Team. A three-time participant in the World University Games, Cashman had earned a bronze medal in the 1996 World Championships.

At least five, and perhaps as many as six skaters, will comprise the U.S. Olympic women's speedskating team so Cashman was primed for a spot before breaking her ankle.

fore, must be strong enough to support the majority of the skater's weight.

"If I had fractured my right ankle, it would have been a completely different story," Cashman said.

Because of the ligament damage, her left ankle pronates inward. As a result, an orthopedic support must be inserted into the skate boot in an effort to regain some ankle strength.

Although her injury may have weakened her physical conditioning, it's strengthened her mentally.

"I've been able to stay focused. In fact, I think maybe I needed a break from the ice. As soon as I fell and hit I knew something was drastically wrong and all of a sudden I thought 'oh my gosh, I want to skate, this is terrible. I want to get back as soon as I can.'"

"(The accident) motivated me even more. It's more frustrating because I know that I'm not in as good as shape as I was and I have a lot of catching up to do. But I'm working hard."

Instead of joining her fellow speedskaters at ice competitions and other training sessions, Cashman's athletic life has entailed primarily physical therapy and non-skating exercise.

In January and February, she was in therapy eight hours a day, six days a week. Stretching and exercise sandwiched between heat and ice treatments were the norm.

From the beginning, Cashman has been determined to wear the skates again.

"I was biking on the stationary bike two weeks after the accident. Very easy but that was the only thing that didn't cause too much pain. Then, progressively depending how my foot felt, I kept doing more and more."

In February, she underwent her second operation to remove one of the screws supporting her ankle. The other screws and a plate connecting her tibia and fibula are permanent.

By the end of March, she was running and adding other exercise to her regimen. Now, she works out six days a week, running, road and mountain biking, rollerblading, weights and speedskating drills. And, as of this week, she's skating again.

But she needs therapy, before and after working out, adding at least two hours to her training. She says the therapy will likely last until the Olympics.

Over the next several months, Cashman will participate in several training camps, one in Marquette and another in Chamonix, France. In mid-August, she'll continue her training in Colorado Springs. The higher elevation is intended to help acclimate athletes since Nagano, Japan, the site of next year's Winter Olympics, is also a high altitude location.

Cashman said there are about 50 women skaters vying for a spot on the Olympic team which will be selected the first week of January after the Olympic Trials in Lake Placid, New York.

The short-track events in the Olympics are 500 and 1,000 meters, as well as the relay event which Cashman won her medal three winters ago. Not making the team has not entered her mind, she says.

"I don't think about that. I expect to be there. If I'm not, I would be disappointed, of course, because I've put so much work into it."

"If I'm meant to go, I'm meant to go," Cashman continues. "And I think whoever does go will be the best team and that's what's most important and hopefully I'll be a part of that."

Her tone is remarkably upbeat, punctuated with laughs. Her smile radiates and her eyes sparkle like steel blades shimmering on a smooth sheet of ice.

If heart, desire and commitment were enough to get her to the Olympics, Cashman would be there. With six months of training remaining, she knows there's no short-cut.

"I'll try my hardest and if I'm supposed to be on the team, I will. I'm just going to try my hardest, 100 percent everyday."

"If that's good enough, I'll be on the team."

However, a key double play (Morrisette's second of the night) turned by Manning, Wirtz and Sullivan put a halt to Randolph's rally.

Walks hurt the visitors, as seven of the 11 free passes Randolph pitchers yielded came around to score. In Morrisette's half of the fourth, Matt McLoughlin, Beaton and Cattaneo walked to load the bases. Sullivan drew a walk to force in McLoughlin, followed by pinch hitter Jim Cunio's sharp single to center, driving in Beaton and Cattaneo for a 9-5 advantage.

The visitors scored twice in the sixth to cut the deficit in half, but Morrisette added an insurance run in the sixth when Sullivan doubled home Cattaneo. Feetham hurled a scoreless seventh, aided by Beaton's diving catch for the game's final out.

Sunday's contest against visiting Cohasset, a make-up of an earlier postponement, was put on hold by a torrential downpour hours before the first pitch.

Last Thursday night, Herlihy became only the second Morrisette pitcher in 25 years to throw a no-hitter when he held West Roxbury hitless in a 6-0 win at Adams Field.

In command throughout, Herlihy struck out the side in order in the seventh to clinch the no-hitter. He finished with 13 strikeouts and just three walks, drawing accolades from manager Ray Cattaneo.

"He just pitched a great game," said Cattaneo. "He had control of everything and pitched the way I knew he could pitch. He only gave up one hard-hit ball, which Beaton caught in center. It was nice to see to him get it."

The last no-hitter thrown by a Morrisette pitcher came in 1995 when Tom Malvesti no-hit Braintree at Adams Field, said Cattaneo. Malvesti walked four and hit a batter in the 4-0 triumph.

The first four hitters in Morrisette's lineup--Erik Fagan (two for four, two RBI), McLoughlin (two for four, RBI), Beaton (two for four, RBI) and Cunio (triple, two RBI)--did most of the damage offensively.

Gus Russo, Morrisette's athletic officer, praised the effort of assistant coach Tom Balzano at third base.

"Tom did a great job coaching at third; he's very vocal, and he gave the runners the signals flawlessly," said Russo. "He also positioned the outfielders well on two fly balls that kept Ryan's no-hitter intact."

Morrisette was back in action last night (Wednesday) at 8 against visiting Cohasset. Morrisette may also play Cohasset Saturday night at 7:30 at Adams Field, if Cohasset can fit the game into its schedule, said Cattaneo.

Next Tuesday, July 1, Morrisette hosts Braintree at 8 p.m. Next Wednesday, Morrisette hosts Randolph at 8 p.m. Next Thursday, Morrisette visits Braintree at 7:30 p.m. in a make-up of a June 18 rainout.

After Milton scored two unearned runs in the fourth, Quincy came up in the sixth and scored its sixth run. Delorey singled and moved to third on a Mike Eddy single. Delorey tagged and advanced to third on a Peck flyout and scored on a Kane groundout.

Milton battled back, scoring twice in the sixth and seventh innings to tie the game at 5-5 and force extra innings. Neither squad scored in the eighth, setting the stage for Quincy to win it with two runs in the ninth.

Sunday's contest at Weymouth was postponed following a torrential downpour. No make-up date has been announced.

Saturday night, defensive miscues resulted in Quincy's 5-4 loss to visiting Randolph.

A 4-4 game in the sixth, Randolph's Tom Lok singled, stole second and advanced to third on Delorey's errant throw. Lok then scored the game-winning run on a bloop single to center.

In its last at-bat, Quincy put up a fight, putting runners on second and third with one out, but came up empty. With one out, Linskey collected an infield single and Wiltshire walked. A wild pitch advanced the runners to second and third, but Peck grounded to the pitcher and Delorey flew out to end the game.

"That was a real tough loss," said Taglieri. "We had a nice lead and let it slip away. Errors in key situations cost us this game."

What pleased Taglieri was the performance of starting pitcher Dan Toland, who tossed a complete-game eight hitter, allowing five runs (three earned), while walking five and striking out eight.

"He pitched well, good enough to win," said Taglieri. "He really competes out there, with a lot of intensity. He figures to be a big part of our rotation."

Quincy got on the board in the first to take a 1-0 lead. Kane beat out an infield single, advanced to second on a wild pitch and to third on a passed ball, then scored on Wiltshire's two-out single to center.

In Randolph's half of the second, two errors resulted in the visitors' first run. Quincy retook the lead in the third. McGann, who reached on an error and moved to second on Kane's sacrifice, scored on Byrne's gap shot to right center for a 2-1 Quincy advantage.

The home squad padded its lead with a two-run fourth. After Delorey singled and Eddy was hit by a pitch, Toland walked to load the bases. McGann then belted a clutch, two-run single to drive in Delorey and Eddy and push Quincy further ahead, 4-1.

Unfortunately for the hosts, the visitors rallied to tie the game with a three-run fifth. Two walks, two hits, a stolen base and a wild pitch resulted in a 4-4 tie through five innings.

Last Friday night at Adams Field, Braintree limited Quincy to three hits in 13-1 triumph.

GETTING INTO THE ROTATION

As with other types of preventive maintenance, rotating tires may cost a little money in the short run, but it brings long-term savings. It is a good idea to have the tires rotated every 5,000 miles, which coincides with just about every other oil change. Failure to do so is likely to result in increased wear by two tires, which will lead to their replacement before the need arises for the other two. As a consequence, car owners will find themselves replacing two tires at a time instead of purchasing a matching set of four. The wear on two tires may also force the purchase of four matching tires, two of which do not really need to be replaced. It is far more economical to spread the wear evenly among the tires by rotating them on a regular basis.

HINT: Because tire rotation recommendations vary among manufacturers and types of cars, check the owner's manual for the specific procedure recommended for your car.

Rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNCOCO to service your vehicle on a regular basis and to take care of any special problems you are having, even just simply rotating your tires. LaFluer, Doherty Lift Morrisette; S Of I, Granite, Barry's Victorious

James LaFluer (one run, six hits, six strikeouts, five walks) hurled a complete game to lift Morrisette over the Elks, 5-1, in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Babe Ruth League action.

Morrisette scored two runs in both the first and second innings to build a 4-1 lead and added a run in the fifth. LaFluer singled and scored and Jessie Winter (two for three) also scored. Josh Smith singled and scored in the second. Chris Doherty reached base in the fifth and came around on Brenden Bowes' triple to the 346-foot mark in left.

On the defensive side, Bowes threw out a runner at second trying to steal, Matt Yohe gunned down a runner at home trying to stretch a triple into an inside-the-park homer, and Winter made a diving catch at shortstop.

For the Elks, Mike Keddy (single, triple, run), Mark Gibbons (double), and Justin Hall and Rachael Powers (one single apiece) paced the offense. Defensively, left fielder Dave Riley fired to third baseman Mike Feenen to complete a double play and end Morrisette's second-inning rally. Powers, the only girl in the Babe Ruth League, came on to pitch long relief and shut down Morrisette, but the Elks' bats did not respond.

In other action, Chris Doherty came within two outs of pitching a no-hitter in Morrisette's 3-1 triumph over Golden Print. Doherty struck out three and walked four in earning the win.

Morrisette's Jessie Winter smacked a two-run triple with two outs in the sixth and Matt Yohe singled, stole second and third and scored on a fielder's choice in the same inning. Defensively, 10 grounders and seven fly balls were perfectly played, with Brenden Bowes nailing a runner trying to steal second.

For Print, Brian Deputa went the distance, yielding just three hits while striking out eight and walking six. Deputa also collected Print's only hit, a single, and scored when Jeff Stevens reached on Morrisette's only error. Third baseman Brett Keyes teamed with catcher Matt Reggiannini to gun down two runners at home in the sixth and seventh.

Barry's Deli improved to 9-5 with recent wins over Granite City Electric, Morrisette and the Elks. Pitcher Matt McCann posted two victories. Against Granite City, he recorded 13 strikeouts while pitching his fifth consecutive complete game.

McCann also paced Barry's offense with three hits, including a double, three RBI and two runs scored. Other offensive contributors for Barry's were Shawn Boostrom (two hits, two runs), Didier Alther (two hits, triple, two runs) and Phil McGillicuddy (two hits, three RBI). Charlie Sorrento and David Centrella made a number of nice defensive plays in the outfield.

McCann upped his record to 6-0 with a three-hit, 18-strikeout masterpiece as Barry's 3-0 shutout win over Morrisette. Barry's scored all three runs in the second when McCann, Charlie Sorrento and Walter Perry each had a hit and scored a run.

Charlie Vidoli's suicide squeeze bunt propelled Barry's to a seven-run sixth en route to an 11-10 triumph over the Elks. Conrad Leger went the full seven innings to record his second win of the season. Phil McGillicuddy, Matt Joyce and Didier Alther led the offense with two hits apiece. John Cooper, Shawn Boostrom and David Centrella collected key two-out hits to drive in runs in the sixth. Joyce played a strong defensive game at second base.

After a slow start, the Sons of Italy squad has won five in a row to improve to 7-3. Jody Bravo smacked two doubles and a single and Pat Jaehnig had two hits to lead the Sons to a 15-4 victory over Golden Print. Tim McGillicuddy, Kyle Piazza, Shaun Lynch and Billy Croke also hit safely while Jeff Peterson recorded the victory. Mark Tetreault made his pitching debut a successful one, hurling two innings of scoreless relief.

Mike Ryan, Mark Tetreault, Joe Sudak, Jeff Peterson, Shaun Lynch and Dan Jones all hit safely. Bravo picked up his first win with relief help from Peterson.

Billy O'Toole had three of Local's hits, including a booming triple. Ryan Murray pitched well in defeat.

In a 10-5 triumph over the Elks, Sons of Italy's Jody Bravo collected three hits while Tim McGillicuddy (double, single) and Joe Thorley each belted two hits to pace the offense. Thorley and Mark Tetreault combined to limit the Elks to six hits. Mike Ryan, Jeff Peterson, Pat Jaehnig and Shaun Lynch also had hits for the winners.

Steve Minukus (three hits), Justin Hall (two doubles) and Pat Bregoli (double) provided the offense for the Elks, while Chris Ham was the hard luck loser.

Jeff Peterson picked up his third win and helped himself with three hits to spark Sons of Italy to their fifth straight win, a 7-3 victory over Barry's Deli.

Didier Alther (three hits) and Shawn Boostrom (two hits) played well for the Deli.

For The Week*

We have said many times before that more than anything else people make pre-arrangements because of those they love. In prearranging the details of a funeral, one removes from your family what can be a difficult emotional burden. You are able to set aside your funeral financial needs so as not to be a burden later to your family. Also, pre-planning allows you the freedom to have your wishes carried out and you will have peace of mind knowing that your family won't have to worry about it later.

Please feel free to call us or come in at any time to discuss any questions you might have concerning the pre-planning arrangements. There's no cost or obligation. Remember... because we understand the importance of pre-planning, we are glad to answer any questions about funeral arrangements you may have.

Health Dept. Begins Water Sampling

The Quincy Health Department has begun its summer water sampling program.

Water samples will be collected every Tuesday through Sept. 2 at 10 beaches, one to two hours before high tide. Results will be analyzed for fecal coliform counts by a certified private laboratory and will be made available to the media through the summer months.

The Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) will collect and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. The samples will be obtained each Wednesday and will be reported to beach managers and the Health Department by Friday of each week.

Quincy will utilize a standard of 200 or greater fecal coliform colonies as an indication of potential health risk. Beaches with counts of 200 or greater will be resampled and posted with signs which read "Warning: Beach Unacceptable For Swimming per order of Quincy Health Department."

Such beaches are considered unsafe for swimming and the signs will remain in place until water samples show fecal coliform counts below 200.

Quincy Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said, "If a period of rainfall has occurred after the water samples were taken on Tuesdays, it is important that people understand that such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality which will be reported on Fridays.

"Sewerage can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains that contain overflow wastewater in combination with rainwater after a quarter of an inch of rainfall or greater occurs in a given day. We therefore recommend that people refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to dilute and cleanse the water."

The city has been involved in a Bathing Water Quality Improvement Program over the past several years. It involved the detection and repair of problems within sewer and storm drain pipes that adversely affected Quincy Bay. The program, administered by the Department of Public Works, continues today, with ongoing, routine maintenance practices such as street sweeping, drain cleaning and tide gate inspections.

A brochure on the Bathing Beach Water Sampling will once again be available from the Quincy Health Department. For more information, call 376-1278.

said. "It's ongoing; it never stops."

The current work has been going on for nearly two weeks and will continue throughout the summer, Gabriel said.

"At the 'Old House,' it will last another six to eight weeks, and at the birthplaces, it will probably last until the end of September," he said.

Gabriel added that such renovations will not affect tourism at the Adams Site, which attracts thousands of visitors annually.

"We make plans to re-route the people," he said. "We're used to these kinds of projects."

Gabriel said those seeking further information should call the Adams Site at 773-1177.

STRICT LIABILITY

According to the concept of strict liability, any person who engages in an inherently dangerous activity can be held liable for any injury that result from his or her actions - even though the harm was not intentional or negligent. Two types of activities that may fall into this "dangerous" category are transporting toxic chemicals and using such explosives as firecrackers. Any injuries arising from transporting, maintaining, or using these items can, under some circumstances, cause the party involved in their transport, maintenance, or use to be held strictly liable without any evidence of negligence. The theory underlying this concept is that engaging in these activities is sufficiently dangerous to warrant complete liability. HINT: Keeping a dangerous animal is another activity that may lend itself to the concept of strict liability, should the animal cause injury.

If you have been injured as the result of someone engaging in an inherently dangerous activity, we are only a phone call away. We'll evaluate the facts and determine whether you have a case that is indeed worth pursuing. Our concern is to take legal action only in your best interest. Put our many years of experience to work for you. To schedule a free initial consultation, call 773-2880. We're located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.
